In order to constitute an offence under Section 500, I. P. C., mere making an imputation concerning a person is not enough. If the words complained of contain no reflection on a particular individual or individuals, but may equally apply to others belonging to the same class an action for defamation will not lie. In a case where the accused is alleged to have made an offending speech in a public meeting it is enough if the witnesses are agreed in a substantial measure on the words of imputation uttered. It is not necessary to reproduce every word or expression.

Where the speech is per se defamatory and the plea of the accused is that he did not make the speech, any evidence that would indicate the want of bona fide on the part of the complainant or the character and antecedents of the complainant has very little relevancy in deciding the issues in the case. 1962 All Cr R 278: 1962 All WR (Sup) 80: 1961 Ker LT 615: ILR (1961) 2 Ker 431: 1961 Mad LJ (Cr) 780: 1962 (1) Cr LJ 644 (645) (Prs 4, 5) (Kerala) (DB).

——S. 499 — Defamation — Essentials of offence — Case if comes within special exceptions — Burden lies on accused — Essentials of exception 9 to S. 499.

To bring the publication of a scandalous imputation under the Penal Law it is not necessary to prove that it was done out of any ill will or malice or that the complainant had actually suffered from it. It would be sufficient to show that the accused intended or knew or had reason to believe that the imputation made by him would harm the reputation of the complainant.

The burden lies on an accused person to make out that his case comes within any of the exceptions to S. 499. By virtue of S. 105 of the Evidence Act the Court is bound to presume the absence of circumstances which would bring the offence within any of the special exceptions contained in S. 499 of the Penal Code. In order to bring it within exception 9 an accused person is not bound to prove that the imputation made by him is true. It is sufficient for him to prove that he made it in good faith for the protection of any person or for public good. If he proves that on reasonable grounds, he believed imputation to be true and in that belief he bona fide made it, he will be protected. Therefore, "good faith" is the essence of Exception 9. A reading of Exceptions 2, 3 and 9 would show that the exception applies only to expressions of opinion or imputations on character and not to assertions of fact. The latter can be justified only by truth. Comment must be on actual and not on imagined conduct and even if the accused person genuinely believed the imputed conduct to be real that would be no defence. If the opinion or the imputation purports to be based on facts, then the person claiming the benefit of these exceptions must prove those facts.

Absence of good faith is want of due care and caution. The accused has the duty to take due care and caution before he asserts the facts. 1962 Ker LT 502: 1962-2 Ker LR 47: 1962 Ker LJ 447.

——Ss. 499 and 500 — Evidence and proof — Proof of exact words used — If essential.

There is no universal rule that in a defamation case the accused cannot be convicted unless the actual words used by the accused are proved. No doubt when the question whether certain words used are defamatory depends solely on the shade of their meaning in the context in which they were used, then it is very essential to prove the exact words used by the accused as also the exact context in which they were spoken. But the exact words used and their context are not material, in a case where a sufficiently clear account of the purport of the defamatory remarks would be enough to find the accused guilty. ILR 57 All 313, Rel. on. Held, further that the dismissal of the complaint on the ground that all the persons who were present at the time the accused was alleged to have made the statement were not examined and that there was a possibility of the complaint having been filed for an ulterior purpose was wholly unwarranted in the circumstances of the case. 1957 MPC 617: 1957 MPLJ 745: 1958 Cr LJ 520: ILR (1957) Madh Pra 689: AIR 1958 Madh Pra 83 (83, 84) (Prs 4, 5) (DB).

To say that the witness should remember and reproduce the identical or the very same words in the order they were uttered and that even if there is some variation in the words used or trifling inconsistency in the words of different witnesses, such evidence should be discarded, would be to lay down rather a too broad or a too dangerous proposition. It is sufficient for the purposes of the section, if witnesses are agreed in a substantial measure on the words of imputation uttered as it is hardly possible or necessary to reproduce every word or expression used. 1952 Cri LJ 1633: ILR (1952) Mys 339: 31 Mys LJ 121: AIR 1952 Mys 123 (124) (Pt B) (Pr 4).

——Ss. 499, 500 — Scope — Relevancy of question of reputation.

Reputation is not at all a necessary fact to be proved in a charge under S. 500 and hence it does not become a fact in issue. The accused is not entitled to ask questions in general concerning the character and reputation of the complainant so as to show that it was already of such a type that the news item or correspondence, complained of could not lower it further, and hence the publication by the editor did not bring him within the mischief of S. 500. 4 Lah 55; 7 All 906; AIR 1950 All 455. ——Ss. 499 and 500 — Complainant not named — Standard to be applied.

The standard to be applied in proof that the defamatory matter refers to the complainant is, would a reasonable man so understand it. ——Ss. 499 and 500 — Ill-will or malice — Proof — Necessity.

To bring the publication of a scandalous imputation under the penal law it is not necessary to prove that it was done out of any ill-will or malice or that the complainant had actually suffered from it. It would be sufficient to show that the accused intended, or knew or had reason to believe, that the imputation made by him would harm the reputation of the complainant. Every sane person is presumed to have intended the consequences which normally follow from his act. The accused, a journalist of some standing, can very well be presumed to know or to have reason to believe that the imputation published by him would harm the complainant's reputation. 1952 Cri LJ 1553: AIR 1952 Pepsu 165 (167) (Pt C) (Pr 5).

——S. 499 — Evidence of bad general reputation but not of particular facts — Admissibility.

In actions in tort claiming damages for libel a bad general reputation can be proved but not rumours or suspicions. It is not open to give evidence of particular facts showing bad character or disposition. Section 55, Evidence Act allows as admissible the evidence of general reputation and of general disposition but not of particular facts or of traits. The principles of law in a criminal prosecution for defamation are not different in this matter. In this respect in either case loss of reputation is the foundation for an action or prosecution. 13 (A). Defence.

——Ss. 499 and 500 — Defence — Similar accusation by others against complainant.

The mere fact that some such or similar accusation against the complainant had been made by some other person as well would not be a valid defence for the accused. Wrong is not to be justified or excused by wrong. Because one man does an unlawful act to any person other is not permitted to do similar act to the same person. That a couple of months after publication of the alleged libel another man took into his head to repeat the imputation would not go to show that the complainant had no reputation which he could have lost by the act complained of. If the complainant has been wronged by another person also, it does not absolve the accused from the responsibility. The accused could not be allowed to lead evidence of rumours and suspicions to the same effect as the defamatory matter complained of or of facts tending to show the general character of the complainant. 1952 Cri LJ 1553: AIR 1952 Pepsu 165 (167) (Pt A) (Pr 3).

——S. 499, Exception I — Defence — Evidence of rumour.

If one chooses to write, print and publish libels imputing the commission by the complainant of a criminal offence he must be prepared to prove that all he has said is true in substance and in fact. This is an onerous burden and it is for the accused to discharge it. To say or prove that the accusation was one which the accused generally heard from others would be no justification for publishing it. Even if the libel is in the form "I heard a rumour to such and such effect" the accused must prove that the fact is true and not merely that it is true that he had heard the rumour. The stings of the libel should be made out. 1952 Cri LJ 1553: AIR 1952 Pepsu 165 (167) (Pt D) (Pr 5).

——S. 499 — Ill-will or malice — Want of — If valid defence.

Neither ill-will nor malice is an ingredient of the offence of defamation, and want of either, cannot serve as a defence. An unproved plea of justification, injudicious cross-examination of the person aggrieved, and obstinately persisting in the libellous charge without any sufficient reason, may be taken into consideration as evidence of malice. Malice at law does not mean that the accused was actuated with hatred or ill will or even that he had on actual intent to vilify or defame such a person. It suffices that the statement was made wilfully or purposely or without any lawful excuse or justification. 1961 (1) Cr LJ 710: 63 Punj LR 794: AIR 1961 Punj 215 (228) (Pt K) (Pr 73).

●——S. 499, Except. 9 and S. 52 — Good faith — Proof of — It is question of fact — Concurrent finding as to good faith by lower Courts — Supreme Court when will interfere in appeal.

Whether or not good faith has been proved by an accused person who pleads in his defence the Ninth Exception under S. 499 to a charge of defamation under S. 500, I. P. Code is a question of fact. Even if it is assumed to be a mixed question of law and fact, where the Courts below give a concurrent finding on such a question, the Supreme Court does not generally re-examine the matter for itself when exercising its jurisdiction under Art. 136 of the Constitution.

Held, however, in the present case that in dealing with the question of good faith the High Court had misdirected itself materially on points of law, and that therefore, its finding could not be accepted. Harbhajan Singh v. State of Punjab, (1965) 4 Law Rep 207: (1965) 3 SCR 235: (1965) 2 SCA 413: (1965) 2 SCWR 722: (1965) 3 SCR 235: 1966 Cr LJ 82: AIR 1966 SC 97 (101) (Pt A) (Pr 11).

——Ss. 499, Exceps. 9 and 52 — Ingredients of Exception 9 — Plea of good faith — Exception 9 covers proof of good intention and exercise of reasonable care and skill — 'Good faith' implies honest effort to reach truth — Mere subjective belief without objective basis not sufficient under ninth exception — Unnecessary aspersion indicative of want of good faith.

The ingredients of the ninth exception to S. 499 are that the imputation on the character of another should be made in good faith and for the protection of the interests of the person making it or any other person or for the public good. So the accused has to prove that the publication was both in good faith and for the public good. If an act is not done with due care and attention it cannot be said to be done in good faith. Good faith contemplates an honest effort to ascertain the truth of the facts. Exception nine applies only to an expression of opinion regarding character and not to assertions of the fact which are in themselves defamatory.

A publisher of a defamatory statement can only be protected if he shows that he had taken all reasonable precautions and then had a reasonable and well-grounded belief in the truth of the statement. The plea of 'good faith' implies the making of a genuine effort to reach the truth, and a mere belief in the truth, without there being reasonable grounds for such a plea, is not synonymous with good faith. Exception 9, therefore, covers two matters, proof of good intention and the exercise of reasonable care and skill, having regard to the occasion and the circumstances. Mere subjective belief without any objective basis is not a dependable criterion for substantiating the ninth exception; an unnecessary aspersion is indicative of want of good faith. 1965 Mad LJ (Crl) 834: 1964 Ker LJ 422: ILR (1964) 2 Ker 31: 1964 (2) Cr LJ 549: AIR 1964 Ker 277 (283) (Pt D) (Pr 12).

——S. 499 — Defamation — Plea of exceptions to the section by accused— Nature of proof required — Onus — Exception 9 — Scope — Evidence Act (1 of 1872), S. 105.

The burden is on the accused primarily to make out that his case would come under any one of the exceptions to S. 499, Penal Code. Under Section 105 of the Evidence Act the burden of proving the existence of circumstances bringing the case within any of the general exceptions of the Penal Code or within any special exception is upon the accused and the Court shall presume the absence of such circumstances. It may be that the burden cast on the accused in a criminal case under S. 105 is not so onerous as the primary burden cast on the prosecution to prove the offence beyond reasonable doubt, but still proof there must be to claim the benefit of the exception. If there is doubt as to whether it is true or not, there is no defence at all. Unless the defence is able to prove that the allegation is true, Exception I will not apply.

'Good faith' requires due care and attention, i.e., care and attention expected from a reasonable man. In the case of publication of a defamatory matter actual source of information on which the accused has acted ought to be considered. If he had not taken proper care but acted on gossip and the complainant is thereby defamed the accused cannot escape the consequence by relying on exception. Exception 9 applies only to expressions of opinion regarding the character and not to assertions of fact. The latter can be justified only by truth. Comment must be on actual and not on imagined conduct and even if the accused person genuinely believed the imputed conduct to be real that would be no defence. If the opinion or the imputation purports to be based on facts, then the person claiming the benefit of these exceptions must prove those facts and it is not enough for him to say that he believed those facts. When the allegations of fact are by themselves defamatory and those allegations are not proved to be true no defence of fair comment can possibly arise; for fair comment cannot justify a defamatory statement which is untrue in fact. The question of good faith is to be proved by the accused. If good faith is not established, it is not strictly

——Ss. 499-500 — Burden of proof — (Evidence Act (1872), S. 105).

In a case of defamation S. 105 of the Evidence Act casts the burden upon the accused to establish that the publication in question had been made in good faith i.e., with due care and caution. It is no defence in the matter of defamation for the accused to say that he has acted on the information given to him by another. It is for him to establish that the source on which he has acted was the proper source on which he is entitled to act and he did so with care and circumspection. 1958 MPC 199: 1958 Jab LJ 252: 1958 MPLJ 405: 1958 Cr LJ 1036: AIR 1958 Madh Pra 216 (218) (Pt B) (Prs 13, 16) (DB).

——S. 499, Ninth Exception — Burden of proof.

Once an imputation is shown to be prima facie defamatory, it is for the accused to show that any of the Exceptions protect him. The defences available to the accused under the Exceptions to S. 499 have to be proved as strictly as if the complainant was being tried for the offences imputed to him. In cases of criminal defamation the accused has not only to justify the whole of his libel but the plea taken has to be proved as strictly as if the complainant was being prosecuted for the offence. The accused seeking the protection of the ninth Exception has to show what enquiries had been made before the publication and what material there was at his disposal or within his knowledge at the time of the making of the imputations.

A Court is entitled to expect from the accused without discharging the onus placed upon him, of proving defence mentioned in the Exception—that he should adduce facts which would show due care and attention justifying honest belief in the truth of the allegations. 1961 (1) Cr LJ 710: 63 Punj LR 794: AIR 1961 Punj 215 (221, 227) (Pt A) (Prs 22, 23, 67).

In a trial for defamation it is essential that the words complained of as being defamatory in character should be precisely set out and when the charge is against more than one accused, they should be individually given notice of what each is charged with. Since it is the words so set out that would constitute the foundation for defamation, not only the words in question should be proved, but the charge also should set out the precise words complained of. ——S. 500 — Sentence of imprisonment — Defamatory newspaper article imputing corrupt and dishonest character to complainant— Editor not disclosing name of writer on grounds of journalistic ethics — Principle if can prevail in Court of law — Plea of justification — Sentence of imprisonment if justified.

Any principle of journalistic ethics according to which the editor of a newspaper refuses to disclose the name of the writer of a defamatory article, which is devised to defeat the ends of justice, cannot be accepted as ethical by any Court of law. The only conclusion that a Court can draw from such a conduct is that the publisher was in entire agreement with the writer and he was willing to take the full responsibility for the publication and face the consequences himself.

The character and reputation of a person is no less important than his body and if those who cause severe injuries to his body are normally sent to prison there is no reason why those who maliciously cast grave aspersions against his character and reputation should be treated differently and merely fined. 1962 (1) Cr LJ 122 (125, 126) (Pt B) (Prs 16, 18) (All).

——S. 500 — Imputation made in absence — Conviction under S. 500 cannot be made on mere impression on the mind of the witness about imputation.

Held, that when the question to be determined was whether the words used by the accused were intended to harm or had the effect of harming the reputation of the complainant, the Court must know not only the words said to have been used by the accused but also the context in which they were used in order to find the intention and the effect of the words. A conviction under Section 500, Indian Penal Code could not be based on the impression left on the mind of a witness by a statement of the accused. The Court must be satisfied that certain words were used by the accused. A finding that the accused said something was not sufficient for a conviction under Section 500, Indian Penal Code. 1962 MPLJ (Notes) 229.

——S. 500 — Actual words spoken by accused must be determined — No finding as to actual words — Conviction cannot be sustained.

To sustain a conviction under S. 500 Indian Penal Code there must be a clear finding as to what defamatory words were actually uttered by the accused. When the alleged defamatory imputations are made by uttering words, then those words themselves must be proved with sufficient accuracy so that the imputations complained of can be said to have been proved. Where the finding was not about the actual words said to have been uttered, but the substance of the meaning which the listeners gathered from the words which the accused allegedly uttered the conviction could not be sustained. 1962 NLJ (Notes) 14.

——Ss. 499, 500 — Measure of punishment.

Where the accused had not been prompted by any malice or ill-will nor had they acted with wanton carelessness in allowing the mischievous statement to be at large without contradicting the same but on the other hand promptly published the contradiction the very next day,

Held, that a fine of fifty rupees was sufficient to meet the ends of justice. 1958 MPC 199: 1958 Jab LJ 252: 1958 MPLJ 405: 1958 Cri LJ 1036: AIR 1958 Madh Pra 216 (218) (Pt D) (Pr 21) (DB).

——S. 500 — Punishment.

The paper in which the publication was made was a weekly newspaper and probably of a poor circulation. The petitioner had not been shown to be a habitual black-mailer; he had also tendered a written apology, though a qualified one, expressing regret.

Held, that the imprisonment that he had already undergone and the sentence of fine would be sufficient to act as an eye-opener and would meet the ends of justice. The object of the complainant was attained by getting a decision that the publication of the imputations was defamatory, and that had been held in unequivocal terms. Relief for damages can more appropriately be obtained by the Civil remedy available to the aggrieved party. The sentence of 2 months was consequently reduced to the imprisonment already undergone (one week) and a fine of Rs. 300/-. 1952 Cri LJ 1553: AIR 1952 Pepsu 165 (168) (Pt F) (Pr 7).

——S. 500 — Sentence — Conduct of accused — Relevancy of, in mitigation or aggravation of offence — Apology or expression of retraction — Effect of.

The conduct of an accused person subsequent to the publication of a libel, before and during trial, may also be taken into consideration by the Court. It is within the power of the accused, in a case of defamation to mitigate his offence or even aggravate his guilt. In a civil action the defendant can mitigate the damages. By tendering apology or expressing contrition an accused person may lessen the gravity of offence. For sufficiency of retraction, it should manifest an honest intention to repair the harm done to the injured reputation of the complainant. The accused or the defendant, as the case may be, should admit that the charge was unfounded, made without proper information and express regrets for its publication.

The defence of justification of the libel has always been considered to be perilous for the accused, because, whenever there is failure of proof the plea is deemed as an aggravation of the offence. 1961 (1) Cr LJ 710: 63 Punj LR 794: AIR 1961 Punj 215 (227) (Pt I) (Pr 69).

——S. 503 — Ingredients of offence.

The most important ingredient of the offence of criminal intimidation as defined under S. 503, I. P. Code is that there should be intention to cause alarm or to cause the person threatened to do any act which he is not legally bound to do. In the words used by the accused, there should be a clear indication as to what the accused was going to do and the complainant must feel as a reasonable man that the accused was going to convert his words into action. 1961 MPLJ 1190: 1961 Jab LJ 557.

——Ss. 503 and 506 — Criminal intimidation — Intention.

——Ss. 503 and 506 — Criminal intimidation — Words uttered by accused that he will kill complainant and bury him — Accused an old sick man aged 74 years — None present alarmed — No intent proved — No conviction.

The use of the words that he will kill the complainant and bury him uttered by an old and sick man aged 74 years may amount to threat of injury to the person of the complainant. But it must be shown, in order to prove criminal intimidation, that the threat was with intent to cause alarm to that person or to cause that person to do any act which he was not legally bound to do or to omit to do any act which he was legally entitled to do. Where such an intent is not proved but on the other hand the evidence discloses that nobody present when those words were uttered got actually alarmed, there can be no conviction of the aged accused under S. 506 for the offence of criminal intimidation. 1964 (1) Cr LJ 255 (256) (Pr 2) (Tripura).

SYNOPSIS

(Penal Code (1860), S. 504.)

1. Applicability.
2. Intention or knowledge.
3. Insult and provocation.
4. Abusive language.
5. Complaint.
6. Conviction and punishment.

1. Applicability.

——S. 504 — Offence under S. 504 — Offence held did not attract application of S. 95. See Penal Code (1860), S. 95. 1955 Cri LJ 1318: AIR 1955 Assam 211 (DB).

See Criminal P. C. (1898), S. 262. 1962 (2) Cri LJ 68: AIR 1962 Guj 231.

——S. 504 — Insulting words uttered in absence of person concerned — No request to hearers to convey them to him — No offence under S. 504 is committed.

The gravamen of the offence under S. 504 lies in the utterer provoking the victim by his words to commit an immediate breach of the peace. That can only occur if he utters the words in the presence of the victim or has them conveyed to him by letter or messenger. Few sane persons will commit a breach of the peace on mere hearsay evidence of abuse, and without even verification. If there is no evidence to show that the utterer asked the persons before whom he uttered the abuse to convey his insulting words, uttered in his absence, to the complainant, there is no offence committed under Section 504. Such a request is essential to make a prima facie case under Section 504. ——S. 504 — Scope — Use of word 'sala' is not always made for admonishing person — Significance would depend on circumstances — To use word against witness and to charge him with falsehood would rob the word of much of its offensiveness. AIR 1955 NUC (Orissa) 5382.

——S. 504 — Complaint under Sections 323 and 504 Penal Code filed before Magistrate First Class — Magistrate recording evidence and on explicit finding that prima facie offence under Section 323 alone was made out and that offence under Section 504 was not disclosed, transferring the case to Panchayat for trial — Held, that there was no illegality or irregularity in the course followed by the Magistrate. See Punjab Gram Panchayat Act (4 of 1953), S. 41. (1962) 64 Pun LR 1059.

——S. 504 — Complaint for offence under Sections 452, 323, 504, 147, Penal Code — Police Challan also put up before same Magistrate against same accused for offence under Ss. 452 and 440, Penal Code, in respect of same occurrence — Case on complaint dropped from register but tagged with challan case — Challan case proceeded with under Section 251-A and accused convicted under Sections 452 and 427, Penal Code — Held, there was no consolidation of complaint case with challan case and trial under S. 251-A was not illegal. See Criminal P. C. (1898), S. 252. 1961 Raj LW 191.

2. Intention or knowledge.

——S. 504 — Essentials — Insult without requisite intention — Offence — Complainant's reaction is immaterial.

Mere abuse or even hurling of intentional insults and causing provocation thereby would not constitute an offence under Section 504. It is necessary that insults by which provocation is caused should either be intended or known to be likely to lead to a breach of the public peace or the commission of some other offence by the person insulted. The intention is a very necessary part of the offence. Without it, the insults, however provocative they may be, will not bring the offender within the mischief of Section 504. The complainant's reaction to the insult is not material. He may be a law-abiding citizen. He may have been terror-struck. He may have found it difficult to retaliate. These circumstances do not determine whether it was known that the insult would be likely to lead to a breach of the peace or not. AIR 1935 Cal 736; AIR 1950 Madh B 25 and AIR 1932 Bom 193, Dist. Case-law Discussed. ILR (1954) 6 Assam 274: 1955 Cr LJ 1318: AIR 1955 Assam 211 (211, 213) (Pt A) (Prs 3, 5, 6) (DB).

——S. 504 — Applicability — Mere breach of good manners or remarks couched in uncultured language — Offence.

It is not every insult that can be classed as 'intentional insult' coming within the purview of Section 504. Mere breach of good manners does not constitute an offence under S. 504.

Where the alleged insulting words came to be uttered towards the end of a conversation between the complainant and the accused under circumstances which made it impossible for the accused to continue the conversation and immediately after uttering these words the accused left the place, and the remarks though couched in uncultured language were nothing more than a pompous boast that no one in this wide world could enter the accused's shop without his permission.

Held, that the remarks would at worst amount to vulgarity indicating want of good manners on the part of the accused, but could hardly be characterised as an insult. 1960 Ker LJ 203: (1960) 1 Ker LR 138: 1960 Ker LT 176: ILR (1960) Ker 320: 1960 Cr LJ 910: AIR 1960 Ker 236 (237) (Pt A) (Pr 7).

——S. 504 — Intention — Necessity.

For an offence under Section 504, what is material is not the reaction of the complainant which might vary according to the sensitiveness of the individual insulted but the intention of the offender to provoke or his knowledge that he is likely to provoke the person insulted to commit an offence. 1960 Ker LJ 203: (1960) 1 Ker LR 138: 1960 Ker LT 176: ILR (1960) Ker 320: 1960 Cr LJ 910: AIR 1960 Ker 236 (237) (Pt B) (Pr 8).

——S. 504 — Use of abusive language —Offence — Intentional insult — Intention or knowledge of likelihood of breach of peace — Necessity.

Section 504 does not make it an offence to use abusive language which may lead to a breach of the public peace. There must be an intentional insult. The words must amount to something more than what in English law is called 'mere vulgar abuse'. AIR 1932 Bom 193, Rel. on. To constitute 'intentional insult' a person using the words must intend to covery that he is really what is meant by the words used. When the petitioner used the words like 'Ghuakha' and 'Mutakha' he did not intend to convey that he really meant that the person abused is one who eats faeces or drinks urine. They are merely used as words of vulgar abuse. Where there is no finding in the judgment of the Magistrate that the insulting words were used with the intention of or knowing it to be likely that there is a likelihood of a breach of peace the accused cannot be held guilty under S. 504. In an ordinary abuse it cannot be presumed that the persons using those words used those words knowing the natural consequences of what those words mean. (1958) 24 Cut LT 299.

——S. 504 — Offence under — Essentials — Proof — Intentional insult must be proved for the purpose of an offence under the section — Mere illegal entry into premises or trespass not sufficient. (1963) 65 Pun LR 953.

3. Insult and provocation.

——Ss. 504, 95 — Advocate uttering insulting words against witness in cross-examination — Court stopping further cross-examination — Enmity between Advocate and witness — Held case was not covered by S. 95, but Advocate could be validly convicted under S. 504.

Where an Advocate, while cross-examining a witness, uses filthy words, exhibiting disrespect or indignity towards the witnesses' mother, his intention to insult is clear, and he could be convicted under Section 504 of the Code. He cannot seek the protection of Section 95 in such a case. It is not necessary that the complainant should commit either breach of peace or any other offence. The Court has merely to consider the standard of an ordinary reasonable man and see if the insult offered is such as is ordinarily sufficient to arouse passions and provoke retaliation by words or deed. The fact that the Court at once objected to the conduct of the Advocate and stopped further cross-examination of the witness shows how far the words used created a sudden and serious change in the atmosphere of the Court and could have occasioned a breach of the peace but for the restraint which the complainant seems to have exercised on that occasion. 1964 (2) Cr LJ 692: (1964) 1 Mys LJ 157: ILR (1964) Mys 518: AIR 1964 Mys 285 (286 to 288) (Prs 4 to 6, 8, 11) (DB).

4. Abusive language.

——S. 504 — Abuse involving aspersions on chastity of complainant's mother and sister — Abuse falls within section. 1956 Cr LJ 500 (2): AIR 1956 Bom 239 (240) (Pt B) (Pr 5).

——S. 504 — Applicability — Obscene words used to a woman by her landlord — Latter is guilty of offence under Section 504. AIR 1930 Bom 120 and AIR 1932 Bom 193, Dist. (1961) 2 Guj LR 196.

——S. 504 — Essential requirements of S. 504 — Provocation caused by abuse—Charge framed for offence under Section 504 should indicate words of abuse used — Complainant not provoked by abuses — Charge deserves to be quashed.

The essential ingredients of the offence under Section 504, Penal Code are (1) to intentionally insult any person, and (2) to provoke such person intending or knowing it to be likely that such provocation will cause him to break the public peace or to commit any other offence. Therefore, in order to come to a conclusion as to whether the abuses hurled were such as to provoke another person and to cause him to break the public peace or to commit any other offence, it is necessary to know as to what were the actual words which were uttered.

Where the evidence led on behalf of the complainant or the charge framed by the Magistrate does not specify the actual words alleged to have been used by the accused in abusing the complainant, it cannot be said that the abuses were likely to provoke the complainant and cause him to break the public peace or to commit any other offence. And if the complainant states that he was not agitated or excited when he was abused, the Magistrate is not justified in framing charge under Section 504. The High Court can, in such a case, quash the charge if framed. ——S. 504 — Mere vulgar abuse is no offence.

Mere vulgar abuse does not amount to an insult or offence under Section 504. AIR 1932 Bom 193, Rel. on. 51 Cri LJ 764: AIR 1950 Madh B 25 (25) (Pr 2).

——Ss. 504 and 506 — Applicability — Gestures accompanying words used, object of insult, company and the occasion have all to be taken into account, to see whether words were such as to provoke breach of peace — Complainant respectable lady and controlling herself is no reason to hold act of accused not to amount to offence. AIR 1955 NUC (Orissa) 970.

——S. 504 — Abusive language — Offence.

Where the outburst of abuses like "Sala, Bhandatia, Matruchod" was a result of ill-feeling between the parties over a paddy filed as a result of which there was litigation between them and the incident took place in a village amongst ordinary common folk with hardly any such education or culture as could be expected of them or sufficient power of self-control as to be able to control themselves in such an explosive situation caused by the abusive words which could have led to a breach of the public peace or any other offence arising from these abuses.

Held, that in the background, atmosphere and circumstances in which they were used, there was every likelihood of a breach of the peace which is the determining test. The expressions, therefore, came within the mischief of S. 504, Penal Code. ILR (1959) Cut 104: 25 Cut LT 184: 1959 Cri LJ 1096: (1959) 1 OJD 33: AIR 1959 Orissa 155 (156) (Pt A) (Pt 3).

——Ss. 504 and 96 — Scope — Abuses and right of private defence.

There is no provision in the Penal Code, where an accused person can be excused for insulting outburst of abuses in the exercise of the alleged right of private defence. (1959) 1 OJD 33: ILR (1959) Cut 104: 25 Cut LT 184: 1959 Cri LJ 1096: AIR 1959 Orissa 155 (157) (Pt B) (Pr 4).

——Ss. 504, 447, 448 — Accused entering complainant's house for demanding their dues — On refusal to pay accused abusing complainant in filthy language and continuing to do so in spite of restraint shown by complainant — Intention to insult, intimidate or annoy or to provoke complainant to break peace— Inference of— Accused held guilty under Ss. 448 and 504. 5. Complaint.

——S. 504 — Criminal P. C. (1898), S. 4 — Complaint can be of offence committed — There cannot be complaint under Ss. 341, 447, 504 and 506, Penal Code, read with S. 106, Criminal P. C. See Criminal P. C. (1898), S. 4. AIR 1951 All 494.

——S. 504 — Essentials.

It is necessary that the actual words used or supposed to have been used by the accused which the complainant understood to be words of insult should be mentioned in the complaint. In the second place, the words used which amounted to intentional insult should be such as to give provocation for the commission of a breach of the peace.

Where no allegation has been made in the complaint that the intentional insult was such as to give provocation for any breach of the peace, Section 504 has no application at all. 1955 BLJR 183: 1955 Cr LJ 1382: AIR 1955 Pat 453 (456) (Pt D) (Pr 7).

6. Conviction and punishment.

——Ss. 504 and 95 — Principle of S. 95 — Words causing no harm — One of the first principles of law is "de minimis non curat lex". This has found expression in S. 95, I. P. C. Intercourse in civilised society will come to an end if for certain words uttered a person found himself exposed to all the trouble and worry of a criminal trial:

Held, that an acquittal of the accused in a complaint under S. 506, I. P. C. for the words..... meaning "you are telling a lie" was fully justified by S. 95, I. P. C. See Penal Code (1860), S. 95. AIR 1954 Cal 288.

——S. 504 — Intention or knowledge — Non-mention of words used in charge or in evidence — Effect.

Before an accused can be found guilty of an offence punishable under S. 504, I. P. Code, for insulting a person by the use of words, it must be shown that he used those words intending or knowing it to be likely that it would result in such provocation as would cause that person to break the peace, etc. In the absence of all mention as to what words were used either in the charge when a charge is framed or in the record of the evidence; it is impossible for the High Court in revision to decide whether the words used indicated such intention or knowledge. In such circumstances, therefore, it is not possible for the High Court to uphold a conviction. 1952 Cr LJ 721: AIR 1952 Cal 288 (288) (Pr 2).

——S. 504 — Insult and provocation.

In order to sustain a conviction under S. 504 it is sufficient for the complainant to prove that the abusive language was such as would ordinarily provoke the man or woman of his or her position to commit a breach of the peace. The mere forbearance of the person insulted being provoked is not sufficient to protect the offender. 1952 Mad WN 236: 1952 Mad WN Cr 60: 1952-1 Mad LJ 470: 1953 Cri LJ 744: AIR 1953 Mad 413 (413) (Prs 1, 2).

SECTION 505

——S. 505 — Constitutionality — List of the offences — Freedom of speech and expression — Restrictions on, imposed by impugned provisions come within permissible limits under Art. 19 (2) of the Constitution. See Penal Code (1860), Section 124-A. 1962 (2) Cr LJ 103: AIR 1962 SC 955.

——S. 505 (c) — Ingredients — Any definite class of citizens can be 'class'.

Offence under S. 505 (c) is constituted when (a) the accused published or circulated the statement in question, (b) he did so with the intent to incite or it was likely to incite some class or community of person to commit same offence against some other class or community. The word 'class' is significant. Any definite or ascertainable class of citizens of India will come within this section. Therefore, where the accused shouted slogans in praise of the assassin of Mahatma Gandhi.

Held, that that was likely to invite innumerable citizens who held great reverence for Mahatma Gandhi, and at least Congressmen to commit some offence against the Hindu Sabhaits including those who formed the rally and the offence under Section 505, Indian Penal Code was made out. 1963 Jab LJ 915: ILR (1962) Madh Pra 449: 1963 MP LJ (Notes) 247.

——S. 505 (c) — 'Incitement to commit offence' — Grievances against local authorities expressed through publication of pamphlet — Offence — (Constitution of India, Art. 19 (1) and (2)).

Clause (c) of S. 505, Penal Code, penalises the publication or circulation of any statement with intent to incite or which is likely to incite any class or community of persons to commit any offence against any other class or community. Reading S. 505 along with the provisions in Art. 19 (1) and (2) of the Constitution which guarantees to the citizen his right of freedom of speech and expression and bearing in mind the principle that as S. 505 deals with the liberty of the subject it must be construed very strictly in favour of the defence, it follows that the legitimate ventilation of grievance, by means of publication of a pamphlet, which some sections of the public may have against the local authorities should not be checked by initiating a prosecution under S. 505, Penal Code. And unless the contents of the pamphlet amount to 'incitement to an offence' the persons who have published and circulated the same cannot be held guilty of offence under Section 505. 40 Cal WN 1218, Rel. on. (1959) 1 OJD 569: ILR (1959) Cut 584: 25 Cut LT 538: 1960 Cr LJ 497: AIR 1960 Orissa 65 (66) (Prs 5, 6).

2. "Attempts".
3. Punishment.

1. Applicability.

●——S. 511 — Applicability — Attempt to commit offence of cheating — Complainant feigning belief in false representation and delivering property, in order to trap accused — The fact that complainant was not deceived is immaterial — offence is one of attempt to cheat — ILR 16 Cal 310, Approved. See Penal Code (1860), S. 420/511. 1960 Cr LJ 1383: AIR 1960 SC 979.

——S. 511 — Attempt to slaughter and preparing for slaughter — Distinction — Mere preparation for slaughter of cow is no offence. See U. P. Prevention of Cow Slaughter Act (1 of 1956), S. 8. 1962 (1) Cr LJ 7: AIR 1962 All 22.

——Ss. 511, 376, 509 — Intruding upon privacy of lady and making indecent gestures and removing her clothes — Attempt to commit rape not established — Accused is guilty under S. 509 and not under S. 376 read with S. 511. See Penal Code (1860), S. 376. 1961 (1) Cri LJ 330: AIR 1961 All 131.

——S. 511 — Attempted rape — By virtue of Sch. II, Criminal P. C. that Court is entitled to try the accused for the offence of attempted rape which could have tried him for the offence of rape. Therefore, no distinction can be drawn between the offence of rape and attempted rape under S. 70 and though attempted rape is not mentioned in S. 70, the rule regarding trial by Court-martial does not obtain in such a case. See Army Act (1950), S. 70. AIR 1955 NUC (All) 1721.

——Ss. 511, 417, 466 — Criminal P. C. C. and S. 106 of Madras Act (10 of 1950) — Held, Sections 197 (1) and 106 both contemplated same requirements — Substance of offence alleged in complaint was cheating under S. 477, because if signature of President in document had not been obtained by P. by cheating him, there would not have been offence of forgery regarding document — Offence of forgery could not be treated as one under S. 466 separated from element of cheating which is substance of complaint— Act of cheating had no reasonable connection with discharge of official duties of P and therefore, no sanction for his prosecution was necessary for offences alleged whether under S. 197 (1) or Section 106 — This was unaffected by fact that case was taken on file under S. 466 — Procedure to be followed by Magistrate was not under S. 207-A but under S. 209. ——S. 511 — Attempt — What amounts to — Old man with intention to shoot at deceased raising gun — His son seeing that his hands were shaking, taking the gun himself and shooting the deceased — Old man is guilty under S. 511.

The crucial words in S. 511 are that the accused should have done the act towards the commission of the offence. There are three stages in the Commission of a crime; (i) intention to commit; (ii) preparation to commit; and (iii) attempt to commit. If he attempt results in the actual commission of the offence, the crime is complete. But the I. P. Code, makes the attempt also an offence, if the accused does any act towards the commission of the offence. The distinction between preparation and attempt may be clear in some cases, but in most of the cases, the dividing line is very thin. Nonetheless, it is a real distinction. The crucial test is whether the last act, if uninterrupted and successful, would constitute a crime. The illustrations in the section bring out such an idea clearly. The question is really one of fact depending upon the circumstances of each case. 1955 Cr LJ 917: 1955 Andh WR 53: AIR 1955 Andhra 118 (122) (Pt A) (Prs 17, 19) (DB).

——S. 511 — Applicability — Attempt to commit offence under Imports and Exports Control Act — If punishable.

As S. 511, I. P. Code, is omitted from S. 40, I. P. Code, unless an attempt to commit an offence under a special or local law has been expressly made punishable under the special or local law, it cannot be punished under the Penal Code. A conviction for an attempt of an offence under the Imports and Exports Control Act (18 of 1947) is, therefore, not legal. ILR (1951) Assam 12: AIR 1951 Assam 17 (18) (Pt A) (Pr 4) (DB).

The accused told the complainant that he knew how to double currency notes — The complainant, however, did not believe this but he gave the currency notes to the accused with a view to entrap the accused:

Held, that as the complainant knew the falsehood of the pretence the accused could not be convicted of the offence of cheating. But making false pretence and asking for currency notes were in themselves sufficient for holding the accused guilty of the offence of attempt to cheat. 52 Cri LJ 644: AIR 1951 Madh Bha 100 (101) (Prs 7, 8).

——S. 511 — Applicability —. Preparation and attempt — Distinction.

Mere preparation is an indifferent act possessing no definite indication of criminality. An attempt is an act of such a nature that it is in itself evidence of the criminal intent with which it is done. A criminal attempt bears the criminal intent upon its face. The thing speaks for itself.

The accused borrowed from P. W. 1 a sum of Rs. 800 and executed a pronote. He paid Rs. 36-8-0 on a certain date. According to an arrangement, a few days later the accused and P. W. 1 met at the house of P. W. 2 and the accused representing that he was going to pay a sum of Rs. 13-8 to make up Rs. 50 placed the money near P. W. 2 and wanted the pronote to endorse on the back of it this payment of Rs. 50 but instead of that entered a payment of Rs. 750 and when he was questioned asked P. Ws. 1 and 2 to come to his house to get the entire sum of money and went away on his bicycle and was chased in vain by them. When he was finally cornered he stated that what had been entered as payment had been entered as a payment and would not give any further satisfaction:

Held, that what the accused intended and did and achieved went beyond the stage of preparation and constituted a criminal attempt at cheating. 8 Cal WN 278, Disting. 1952 Mad WN 903: 1952 Mad WN (Cri) 259: (1952) 2 Mad LJ 771: 1953 Cri LJ 1152: AIR 1953 Mad 609 (610) (Prs 7, 11).

——S. 511 — Scope of — The question whether a certain act is merely one of preparation or one committed in the course of an attempt is a question of fact. The dividing line between a mere preparation and an attempt is sometimes thin and has to be decided on the facts of each case. An attempt is a direct movement towards the commission after the preparation has been made. There is a greater degree of determination in "attempt" as compared with preparation. Where the accused in a case of attempt to cheat by personation contended that he could not be found guilty because his act did not succeed and probably was not going to succeed as the deceit practised by him was either detected or was soon going to be detected by the person whom he intended to cheat.

Held, that the mind of the person to whom the false pretences were made should be affected thereby is not an essential element of the offence. As the accused had made false pretences intending thereby to get money he was guilty of the offence of attempt. (1957) 8 STC 534: 1957 BLJR 66.

'Attempt' in an intentional act which a person does towards the commission of an offence but which fails in its object through circumstances independent of the volition of that person.

Accused was prosecuted for an offence under S. 7 of the Essential Commodities Act for contravention of Cl. (3) of U. P. Wheat (Restriction on Movement) Order, 1949. He was however, acquitted in appeal on the ground that as the interception was midstream the act of the accused was only a preparation for transporting the grain and no offence under S. 7 of the Essential Commodities Act was committed:

——S. 511 — Attempt to commit offence, what constitutes — Mere forming intention to commit crime or mere preparation for offence is not punishable.

In order to constitute an attempt to commit an offence, there must first of all be an intention to commit the crime, a commencement of the commission, and an act done towards the commission. Neither the mere forming of the intention to commit the crime nor the mere preparation for an offence is punishable. The dividing lines between a mere preparation and an attempt to commit a crime may be rather thin in some cases and the question whether there has been an attempt or only a preparation to commit it is to be decided on the facts of each particular case. One important consideration in such cases is whether there was a locus paenitentiae: AIR 1932 Mad 507, Rel. on.

Held, that there was a clear case of attempt to transport rice in question without proper permit from the authorities. The mere possibility that before the lorry crossed Orissa border the petitioner might have changed his mind and thrown away the rice somewhere in Orissa would not suffice to indicate that the act complained of was still in a preparatory stage and had not ripened to an attempt. 17 Cut LT 154: 1952 Cri LJ 918: AIR 1952 Orissa 164 (165) (Pt B) (Prs 4, 5).

——S. 511 — Attempt — What constitutes — Attempt and preparation.

Section 511 of the Indian Penal Code was not meant to cover only the penultimate act towards completion of an offence and not acts precedent, if those acts are done in the course of the attempt to commit the offence or done with the intent to commit it and done towards its commission. In every crime in India there is first an intention to commit; secondly there is preparation to commit; and, thirdly, an attempt to commit. When the third stage is completed and is successful, the crime becomes a complete one. According to English definitions, an "attempt" is definite act requiring consideration of its criminal nature, whereas, according to the Indian law, an "attempt" is a continuons proceeding which at one stage assumes a criminal character. When the accused has done something definite in pursuance of his design not for what he has done, but with regard to what he would have done if he had succeeded, he has done the act towards its commission. It will always remain a question of fact when the point would be reached under S. 511 of the Indian Penal Code at which an act is done towards the commission of an offence. (1957) 8 STC 534: 1957 BLJR 66.

——S. 511 — Attempt — What amounts to.

The conception of an attempt to commit an offence is a technical one. It is for the Court, on a consideration of facts proved, to come to a conclusion whether there was an attempt to commit an offence. ——Ss. 511, 53, 420 — Railway officer convicted under S. 420/511 — Sentence of one year, if too severe — Object of punishment — Criminal P. C. (1898), S. 32. One of the principal reasons for inflicting punishments is to deter others from repeating the crime. If corrupt railway officials could get off merely with dismissal from service after making money by unlawful means, that would be no punishment at all and there would be no deterrent effect in the punishment. Hence, the sentence of one year's rigorous imprisonment awarded to the Assistant Engineer of a railway for an offence of cheating under S. 420/511, Penal Code cannot be said to be too severe. ●——The amendment of S. 21, I. P. SECTION 2

●——Ss. 2 and 3 (1) — Constitution of India, Art. 20 (1) — Applicability.

In determining the constitutionality of any conviction under Vindhya Pradesh Ordinance, 48 of 1949 for an alleged offence committed during the period between 9-8-1948 (the date from which the Penal Code was deemed to have been in force in Vindhya Pradesh) and 11-9-1949 (the date of the enactment of the said ordinance), what is relevant for the application of Art. 20 (1) is not the result brought about by the repeal and retrospective operation thereof, but the factual state of law as it existed prior to the date (viz. 11-9-1949) when the repeal came into operation. The repeal itself posits the pre-existence of the law, and it is that law which is relevant for that purpose. Shiv Bahadur Singh v. State of V. SECTION 4 ——Ss. 4, 5 and 6 — Civil Service Regulations, Article 348-A — 'Pension', meaning of — Right to recover pension — If actionable — (Civil P. C. (1908), S. 9).

The word 'pension' has not been defined anywhere. However, it has been held that it implies periodical payments of money to a person. Two essentials are necessary in order to constitute a pension (1) it must be a periodical payment, and (2) it must be a grant not in respect of any right, privilege, perquisite or office but on political considerations or on account of past services or present infirmities or as a compassionate allowance. It is a periodical payment of money for past services or a bounty for past services rendered to the public or to the State. It is mainly designed to assist pensioner in providing his daily wants. The provisions of the Pensions Act, especially those of Sections 3, 5 and 6, clearly reveal that a claim to pension cannot be enforced in a Court of law and the proper remedy is to make departmental representations. The provisions of the Civil Service Regulations also point in the same direction. Thus, a person cannot claim pension as of right and in any case the right to recover pension is not actionable. 1959 All LJ 855: AIR 1959 All 769 (770, 771) (Prs 2, 3, 5, 6).

——S. 4 — Constitution of India, Article 226 — Other remedy open — Government refusing to pay pension — Maintainability of suit — Where the Government refuses to pay pension to the claimant it cannot be said that the claimant has an alternative remedy by way of suit available to him as from the scheme of Sections 4, 5 and 7 it is clear that no suit can be brought by the claimant for such recovery. See Constitution of India, Article 226. AIR 1956 All 564 (DB).

●——S. 4 — Burden of proof — Plea of grant of land revenue — Proof of — Where the plaintiff wants to prove the fact that a grant had been made to his ancestors of land revenue alone and that they were not ordinary muafidars he should produce proper materials before the Court and facts mentioned in various judgments could not be used as evidence to prove his contention. AIR 1955 All 1 (FB).

●——S. 4 — 'Pension' — Meaning of.

The word "pension" has been held to mean a periodical allowance or stipend granted, not in respect of any right, privilege, perquisite or office, but on account of past service or particular merits or as compensation to dethroned princes, their families and dependants. In Section 4 onwards in the Pensions Act the word "pension" has been used in contradiction to the words "grant of money or land revenue". 4 Bom 432, Foll. Bankey Beharilal v. ——Ss. 4 and 6 — Institution of suit without certificate under Section 6 — Effect — Production of certificate after expiry of limitation — Effect.

Per Desai J. :— The absence of certificate under Section 6 goes to the root of the jurisdiction of the Civil Court and cannot be treated as a defect of a technical character: AIR 1937 Oudh 484, Not approved.

Where a suit claiming a share in certain properties including a share in the grant of land revenue is instituted in a Civil Court without the certificate required under Section 6, the Civil Court cannot take cognizance of the claim in respect of the grant of land revenue though it can entertain the suit in respect of the rest of the claim. A certificate obtained after the expiry of limitation for the suit is of no effect and the Court is precluded from taking cognizance of that claim.

Per Bhargava J. :— The receipt of a certificate under Section 6 need not precede the institution of suit. Where the certificate is received after the institution of the suit the Court is bound to take cognizance of the claim relating to the grant of land revenue irrespective of the fact that the claim is barred by time on the date of receipt of certificate. After taking cognizance the Court might reject the claim as barred by time. 1950 All LJ 185: 1950 All WR 250: ILR (1951) 2 All 38: AIR 1950 All 371 (372, 375) (Prs 3, 5, 19) (DB).

——Ss. 4 to 6 — Scope and object — Suit for recovery of plaintiff's share of pension wrongfully withdrawn by defendant — Jurisdiction of Civil Court — (C. P. Code (1908), S. 9).

The object of Sections 4 to 6 of the Pensions Act is that the Government should not be made ordinarily to pay the penison to a person who may not really be entitled to receive the same, but gets a decree with regard to the same from the Civil Court without his claim having been examined by the prescribed authority. Before the Government can be bound by a decree of the Civil Court in this matter, its officers as prescribed in Section 5 of the Act must have an opportunity to examine the claim of the parties in the suit. It is only for this object that provisions have been made for preferring the claim before such officers and for a certificate to be obtained from those officers for the trial of the case by the Civil Court. The words 'any suit relating to any pension' used in Section 4 of the Act are quite indicative of the position that all suits relating to such pension are barred under that section, and it is immaterial whether the Government is or is not a party to such suits.

The plaintiffs brought a suit for recovery of their share of the pension amount wrongfully withdrawn by defendant 1 from the Government on the allegation that the plaintiff was entitled to an eight annas share in the amount of pension which had been granted in favour of the ancestor of the parties who were pandas of a temple and which had been divided between them under a compromise decree in a previous suit between the parties. The defendants disputed the plaintiff's right to a share in the pension.

Held, that as the suit related to pension the Court had no jurisdiction to entertain the suit in view of Sections 4 to 6, Pensions Act. AIR 1945 Bom 496, Dist. 1958 Pat LR 343: ILR 37 Pat 1391: AIR 1959 Pat 17 (18, 19) (Pt A) (Prs 4, 7) (DB).

——Ss. 4, 5 and 6 — Scope — Servant of former Gondal State in Saurashtra — Suit by, for recovery of pension accrued to him since 1948 brought in 1954 — Jurisdiction of Civil Court to entertain suit — (Civil P. C. (1908), Section 9).

Held, it is true that the Gondal State law does not contain any provisions in bar of the Civil Court's jurisdiction to entertain a suit for the recovery of a pension and if the suit had been instituted while that law was in force the Court's jurisdiction to entertain it could not possibly have been questioned but the suit was filed in 1954 when the Gondal State law was repealed by the Pensions Act and Court's jurisdiction will be governed by the provisions of that Act. The combined effect of Sections 4, 5 and 6, Pensions Act is that a person claiming pension from the Government has to prefer his claim to the authority mentioned in Section 5 and a competent Civil Court is authorised under Section 6 to take cognizance of such claim only on receiving the prescribed certificate. Even then the Court will not have jurisdiction to pass a decree which might affect the State's liability to pay such pension. As the suit is instituted without the requisite certificate the Civil Court's jurisdiction is clearly barred by Section 4 of the Act. 9 Sau LR 284: AIR 1956 Sau 119 (119) (Pt A) (Pr 4) (DB).

——S. 5 — Constitution of India, Article 226 — Order granting pension — Whether amenable to certiorari — Where an order ganting pension is passed by the Government pursuant to the discretion reserved to themselves and not in exercise of any of the powers conferred by Section 5, Pensions Act the order cannot be regarded as a judicial determination made after hearing both the parties and is not therefore amenable to certiorari. ——S. 5 — Grant of pension as matter of grace — Reconsideration by Government — If barred.

Where the basis of the grant of the pension is not in recognition of any right but as a matter of grace or bounty taking into account the alleged want of the persons concerned, it is difficult to treat it as an order emanating from judicial proceedings incapable of being reconsidered. In such circumstances, there can be no doubt that the original order is made by the Government in an administrative capacity. When on a further enquiry they come to the conclusion that they proceeded on a misapprehension as to basic facts, viz., the financial status of such persons, surely, it is within the powers of the Government to reconsider that order. There is no impediment in the Government reconsidering the matter when it comes to their knowledge that the persons concerned were in no need of any maintenance having substantial income from other sources. It follows that Section 5 does not operate as a bar to the passing of such an order. AIR 1959 Andh Pra 487 (490) (Pt C) (Pr 14) (DB).

——S. 5 — Scope of inquiry.

The Pensions Act does not contemplate any elaborate enquiry as in the case of a Civil Court. SECTION 10

——S. 10 — Bihar Pensions Rules, Rules 253, 254, 256 and 259 — Commutation of Pension — Order for, becoming absolute — State Government has no power to rescind it.

There is no power in the State Government to rescind the order of commutation of pension after it has become absolute under Rule 253 except as provided under Rule 254 of the Bihar Pension Rules framed under S. 14 of the Act.

Held, on facts that the option under R. 252 to withdraw the application for commutation of pension expired on the pensioner's appearance before the Medical Board and the order of commutation became absolute on 19th March, 1958. On that date his title to receive the commuted portion of the pension had ceased to have legal effect. The order of the State Government dated 1st July, 1959, cancelling its previous order, dated 30th September, 1958, was therefore, legally correct. Reading the Rules 256 and 259 together, it is manifest that whatever be the date of actual payment of the commuted value, the effect upon the pension will be the same as if the commuted value had been paid on the date on which the commutation became absolute. 1963 BLJR 738: AIR 1963 Pat 317 (318) (Prs 3, 4) (DB).

●——Ss. 11 and 12 — Applicability — Grant of land revenue — Crown Grants Act — Effect of — (Crown Grants Act (1895), Section 2).

Sections 11 and 12 of the Pensions Act do not apply to the grant of land revenue and even if, therefore, the plaintiff is a grantee of land revenue, he cannot claim that the transfers of the villages, the subjects of the alleged grant, to which he is a party are invalid and he is entitled in spite of those transfers, to claim the money as arrears of land revenue.

Even if the Crown Grants Act is applicable, plaintiff's suit for recovery of land revenue must fail as the transfers of the villages will in that case be invalid and the plaintiff will not be entitled to claim land-revenue from the transferee. 1902 All WN 161: AIR 1936 All 298: AIR 1936 All 666, Rel. on; AIR 1940 All 373 (FB). SECTION 12

●——S. 12 — Applicability to grant of land revenue — Sections 11 and 12 of the Act do not apply to the grant of land revenue and even if, therefore the plaintiff is a grantee of land revenue, he cannot claim that the transfers of the villages, the subjects of the alleged grant, to which he is a party are invalid and he is entitled, in spite of these transfers to claim the money as arrears of land revenue — Even if the Crown Grants Act is applicable the plaintiff's suit for recovery of land revenue must fail as the transfers of the villages within that case will be invalid and the plaintiff will not be entitled to claim land revenue for the transferee. AIR 1955 All 1 (FB).

●——S. 12 — Applicability and scope of.

Section 12 deals only with pension, pay or allowance mentioned in Section 11, and not with grants by Government of money or land revenue, nor with such pensions which may not come under Section 11. A comparison of Sections 8 and 9 makes it clear that grant of land-revenue is different from pension. While a right is given to bring a suit for the recovery of land-revenue, no such right is given with respect to pension. Bankey Beharilal v. Lala Babu, 1954 All LJ 641: 1954 All WR (HC) 577: ILR (1955) 1 All 821: AIR 1955 All 1 (2) (Pt D) (Pr 9) (FB).

——S. 12 — Compromise decree dividing amount of pension between parties to suit — Validity.

The object of Section 12 of the Pensions Act is to prevent, traffic in pension as it is opposed to public policy. If, therefore, by a compromise decree a division has been made between the parties with respect to the amount of the pension, it would amount to traffic in the pension and will come within the mischief of Section 23 of the Contract Act. Again, by allowing a decree to be passed on consent in a suit, which is not entertainable by a Civil Court, in view of Section 4, Pensions Act, the parties are doing what is forbidden by law, or if permitted, it would defeat the provision of law. Such a compromise decree is unlawful and under Section 12 of the Pensions Act is null and void. 1958 Pat LR 343: ILR 37 Pat 1391: AIR 1959 Pat 17 (20) (Pt B) (Prs 9, 10) (DB).

PENSIONS RULES

——Pension Rules — Commutation of part of pension — Implications — Implies waiver of commuted portion of pension for rest of pensioner's life.

It is well known that a pension is periodical payment which is made to the pensioner after retirement, the basis being the service rendered by him to the employer and carried with it as a condition of service, the right to receive such payment for the rest of his life. According to the Pension Rules, a pensioner is entitled to commute a portion and not the whole of his pension and the commuted value of that part of pension is dependent upon the expectation of life of the individual as ascertained by the Medical Board. The rules envisage that when a pensioner is paid a commuted amount which means a lump sum equivalent of a periodical payment for an uncertain duration, i. e., till the end of the life of the pensioner, the pensioner loses the right to receive that periodical payment. Instead of a periodical payment he gets a lump sum and the underlying implication is that by receipt of that amount he waives his right to the periodical payment. It is not the intention of the Rules that the commuted sum has to be set off against that part of the pension which the pensioner would otherwise have received, and that after the sum is so exhausted, he would become entitled to receive the full amount of pension. (1965) 2 Lab LJ 70: (1965) 1 Mad LJ 382.

——S. 3 — Scope and effect of — Personal grant by Ruler of Indian State — Subsequent repudiation by Pepsu State at the merger — If Act of State — Jurisdiction of Court to question — Law.

The Ruler of Nabha State made a rent free grant of Malwa House to the appellant, in the exercise of his sovereign powers. The Patiala and East Punjab States Union was formed on 20th August, 1948 by the merger of State of Nabha. In 1952 the new State of Pepsu repudiated the grant. On the question whether it could be challenged in Municipal Courts:

Held, that so long as it emanated from the Sovereign power, the grant was in item of personal law which was liable to be superseded by the laws of the new State of Pepsu by virtue of Pepsu Administration Ordinance 1 of Smt. 2005:

Held, further that the repudiation of the grant could cease to be justiciable only if it could be regarded as an act of State. The repudiation had taken place after the formation of the State of Pepsu. The repudiation could not therefore, be justified as an act of State and the repudiation could be challenged in the Municipal Courts: 1959 SCJ 705; (1954) 2 MLJ 369; AIR 1954 SC 447, Rel. on. ILR (1959) Punj 2341: AIR 1960 Punj 644 (645) (Prs 4, 5).

PEPSU CIVIL SERVICES (SAFEGUARDING OF NATIONAL SECURITY) RULES (1954)

——Constitution of India, Article 14 — Equality before law — Meaning of — Reasonable classification — Applicability — Rules not hit by Article — (Words and Phrases). See Constitution of India, Article 14. AIR 1956 Pepsu 19.

——Constitution of India, Articles 309 and 310 — Right to be appointed or retained in service is not fundamental right — Public servant engaging in subversive activities — Rule that he will not be retained in service — Constitutionality of rule — Satisfaction of Governor or Rajpramukh — There would be nothing illegal or unconstitutional in such a rule. See Constitution of India, Article 309. AIR 1956 Pepsu 19.

——R. 3 (iii) — 'Associated with others in subversive activities' — (Words and Phrases).

The plain and simple meaning of this part of the rule is that the person be associated with others 'in their subversive activities'; his association with persons who are engaged in subversive activities alone would not be sufficient; it is his association in the subversive activities of theirs that is made punishable. A person cannot be punished under this rule merely because he meets, dines or is on visiting terms with persons who are engaged in subversive activities. An order clearly showing that the guilt found to be proved against the petitioner was that he had been associating with Communist and Kisan Sabha workers who were engaged in subversive activities is based upon a wrong interpretation of the rule. ILR (1956) Pepsu 246: AIR 1956 Pepsu 19 (24, 26) (Pt D) (Prs 17, 30).

——R. 3 — Satisfaction of Rajpramukh — Grounds of satisfaction — Court's power — (Constitution of India, Article 226).

The 'satisfaction' in Rule 3 is that of the Rajpramukh and it is not open to Court to substitute its own judgment for that of the State Government. Sufficiency or adequacy of facts on which the satisfaction is based is not a question that can be agitated in Court. But the Court is entitled to see whether the grounds have any relevancy to the requirements of the rule or fall within its ambit. The Court can also examine the material in order to ascertain whether the conclusion reached by the State Government is one which could possibly and reasonably be reached. ILR (1956) Pepsu 246: AIR 1956 Pepsu 19 (26) (Pt E) (Pr 31).

——R. 3 — Order under — Mala fides — (Constitution of India, Article 226).

Even though no dishonest motives can be imputed, the order may yet be mala fide if it is bad for want of necessary care and caution, or is passed for some purpose other than the one for which it could have been made. ILR (1956) Pepsu 246: AIR 1956 Pepsu 19 (26) (Pt F) (Pr 33).

PEPSU COURT OF WARDS ACT (1 of 2008 BK)

SECTION 5

——S. 5 (2) (d) — Constitutionality — The Law enacted in Section 5 (2) (d) is not saved by Article 19 (5) or by Article 31-A — It manifestly infringes the fundamental rights of the landholders and, therefore, is void to that extent. See Constitution of India, Article 19 (1) (f). AIR 1957 Pepsu 5 (DB).

——Ss. 5 and 14 — Release of property by Revenue Minister — Order, is no offence under Section 5 (1) (d), Prevention of Corruption Act. AIR 1955 NUC (Pepsu) 730.

See Constitution of India, Article 15. AIR 1963 Punj 9 (FB).

SECTION 16

——S. 16 — Constitutional validity — Section 16 is unconstitutional as it imposes unreasonable restrictions on the rights of landholders to dispose of their property. See Constitution of India, Article 19 (1) (f). AIR 1957 Pepsu 5 (DB).

——S. 44 — Release of Property by Revenue Minister — Order is no offence under Section 5 (1) (d), Prevention of Corruption Act. See Pepsu Court of Wards Act (1 of 2008, BK), Section 5. AIR 1955 NUC (Pepsu) 730.

PEPSU EVACUEES (ADMINISTRATION OF PROPERTY) ORDINANCE (13 of 2006 BK) (1949)

——Repeal of an Act or Ordinance — Whenever any Act repeals any enactment unless a different intention appears the repeal shall not apart from any other matters affect any legal proceeding or remedy in respect of any such right privilege obligation etc., and such legal proceeding or remedy may be continued as if the repealing Act had not been passed. See General Clauses Act (1897), Section 6. (1962) 64 Punj LR 1024.

SECTION 2

——S. 2 (d) — Evacuee holding land by virtue of sale in his favour — Land is evacuee property. AIR 1953 Pepsu 48 (48) (Pt B) (Pr 5).

——S. 3 (1) — Retrospective operation — The language of Section 3 (1) leaves no doubt that it was meant to take away the jurisdiction of the Civil Courts to decide the particular matters even though they were involved in cases which had already been instituted — It is within the competency of the legisalture to give retrospective effect to a statute and that has been expressly done in Section 3 (1). AIR 1953 Pepsu 48 (48) (Pt A) (Pr 4).

——S. 3 (1) — Scope — Suit for possession of land sold to defendant by plaintiff's father — Defendant migrating to Pakistan during pendency of suit — Plaintiff disputing defendant's right to retain possession of land on basis of sale — Adjudication upon rights or interests of defendant in land necessary for disposal of suit — Suit held fell under Section 3 (1) and Civil Court had no jurisdiction to hear it. AIR 1953 Pepsu 48 (48) (Pt C) (Pr 5).

——S. 10 (4) and (7) — Scope and effect of — Under Section 10 (7) of the Ordinance orders passed by claims officers under Ordinance 9 of 2004 could be deemed to have been passed under Sec. 10 (4) of Ordinance 13 of 2006 only for the purpose of appeal and revision. See Administration of Evacuee Property Act (1950), Section 58 (3). AIR 1961 SC 1425.

SECTION 14

——S. 14 (2) (3) — Surrender of original lease of evacuee property in favour of Custodian and new lease — Expiry of new lease — Lessee holding over — Notification under Section 14 (2) — Effect of — Revival of lessee rights by subsequent Ordinances replacing Ordinance 13 of 2006 — Position of legal representative of original lessee stated — (Administration of Evacuee Property Act (1950), Section 9) — (T. P. Act (1882), Sections 111 and 106). AIR 1953 Pepsu 26 (27 to 30) (Prs 3 to 6, 8, 13 to 17) (DB).

——S. 14 (2) and (3) — Cancellation of allotment by Deputy Custodian — Validity — Notification No. 1, Dated 5-7-1949, by Custodian — Interpretation of — Order by Deputy Custodian made without jurisdiction — Confirmation of by Custodian — Effect.

The Deputy Custodian had no power to cancel an allotment under Section 14 (2) or (3) unless he had been authorised by the Custodian in this behalf. The authority given under the Notification No. 1, dated 5-7-1949, by the Custodian, was confined to the Deputy Commissioners and Assistant Custodians and no authority whatsoever was given to the Deputy Custodian. Besides, it was an authority merely to get the premises vacated by the allottees or lessees whose allotments or leases stood cancelled by virtue of the Notification. Hence, an order of cancellation of allotment made by the Deputy Custodian must be held to be without jurisdiction and, therefore, illegal.

The fact that the Deputy Custodian's order was confirmed on appeal by the Custodian could not improve matters in any way. The proceedings taken by the Deputy Custodian being without jurisdiction, and, therefore, void, it was not within the powers of the Custodian to validate them. 3 Pepsu LR 195: AIR 1952 Pepsu 115 (117, 118) (Pt A) (Prs 8, 10) (DB).

PEPSU GENERAL PROVISIONS (ADMINISTRATION) ORDINANCE (16 of 2006 BK)

●——S. 3 — Scope — Agreement between citizen and State about payments of income-tax at concession rate — Effect of after formation of State — If abrogated.

Held, agreement being abrogated before accession, question of whether there was breach of fundamental rights did not arise. Dalmia Dadri Cement Co. Ltd. v. Commr. of Income-tax, (1958) 34 ITR 514: 1958 SCJ 1041: AIR 1958 SC 816 (823, 824, 825) (Prs 13, 14, 17).

——S. 3 — All Laws and rules — Ijlas-i-Khas Order — (Constitution of India, Article 372) — (Words and Phrases — 'Law').

The Ijlas-i-Khas Order was merely an executive order issued by the Executive Head of the State with a view to lay down certain guiding principles in the matters of determining seniority of its subordinate officers. The mere fact that the Executive Head also enjoyed legislative powers for the State does not lead to the conclusion that every order passed by him, in whatever capacity, would have the status of 'law' or 'a provision having the force of law'. It is the nature of the order that would determine its source and the capacity in which it was made. The name assigned to it may not be very much material, but the purpose for which the order was made may be regarded as one of the decisive factors. Whatever might have been its significance in the primitive legal systems, in the modern developed system of societies, the 'law' is of statutory origin and is embodied in special enactments. Viewed on these principles the Order itself makes it abundantly clear that it is not possible to give the status of a 'law' to the Order.

As the Order or the Rules framed by it did neither amount to 'law', or 'Rules framed thereunder' nor 'a provision having the force of law' but was merely an executive Order, Section 3 (1) would have no application and the Rules could at any time be amended, superseded or annulled, as the exigency demanded, by the Rajpramukh, to the Executive Head of the Pepsu State. ILR (1955) Patiala 703: AIR 1956 Pepsu 26 (28) (Pt A) (Pr 6).

——Rule 455 (b) — Imprisonment in two cases — Appeal in one — Setting aside of imprisonment — Effect — Criminal P. C. (1898), S 397.

The rule does not lay down the correct law. When a sentence awarded to a person in a case is set aside by a higher Court on appeal or revision, the effect is that it is washed away completely as if it was never awarded. So when a man is awarded imprisonment in two cases and the imprisonment in one is set aside the time which he spent in jail upto the date his imprisonment was set aside, must be credited to the imprisonment to which he was subjected in the second case. PEPSU JUDICATURE ORDINANCE (10 of 2005 BK)

●——S. 5 — Law laid down by Judicial Committee of Union and by Supreme Court — Preference — Constitution of India, Art. 241.

If in a certain matter the Judicial Committee of the Union has laid down the law but that matter has not gone before the Supreme Court and consequently no occasion has arisen for that Court to lay down the law on the same point Section 5 of the Judicature Ordinance must be given effect to and the law laid down by the Judicial Committee must be followed by all the Courts in the Union, including the High Court. It is only when the law laid down by the Supreme Court on a certain point is different from that laid down by the Judicial Committee that Article 241 of the Constitution will come into operation and the former law will be preferred to the latter. Observations of the Judicial Committee which are of the nature of an obiter dictum, though entitled to great respect strictly speaking, they do not amount to the "law laid down" . Santu v. Sohan Lal. 2 Pepsu LR 245: AIR 1951 Pepsu 33 (36) (Pt B) (Pr 9) (FB).

●——Ss. 25, 116 — Scope — Letters Patent Appeal — Certificate of Judicial Committee — Neeessity — If make Ordinance retrospective.

Where an application for amendment of a decree was made on 2nd February, 1950 (no appeal being provided against the order amending or refusing to amend the decree under the C. P. Code) it cannot be said that the amendment is a continuation of the suit or proceedings therein. It is in the nature of an independent proceeding, though connected with the order of which amendment is sought. Such a proceeding is governed by the law prevailing on its date which admittedly was Pepsu Ordinance (10 of 2005), Section 52 of which makes a certificate of the single Judge whose judgment is sought to be appealed against, necessary for filing Letters Patent Appeal. It cannot be claimed that the Patiala States Judicature Farman E. Shahi 1999, Bikarmi, under which no certificate is necessary applies.

Ordinance X has no retrospective effect and where the order sought to be appealed against was made on 18th January, 1949, and the appeal preferred on 19th February, 1940, the Patiala States Judicature Farman 1999, was in force on that date and the appellant had a right of appeal without a certificate and such right is not taken away by Ordinance (10 of 2005) (1948-1949). It cannot be said that Section 116 of the Ordinance contained an express provision to the contrary. Ganpat Rai Hira Lal v. A right of appeal is a substantive right and accrues at the time of the suit. It follows that a second appeal arising out of a suit instituted on and after 1-4-51, the date from which C. P. C., was made applicable to Pepsu by Code of Civil Procedure (Amendment) Act repealing Sec. 49 (2) of the Ordinance, would not be competent on a question of fact, while a second appeal arising out of a suit instituted before 1-4-1951 would be governed by the law in force on the date of the suit in each case. 60 Punj LR 528: ILR (1958) Punj 2258: AIR 1959 Punj 123 (125, 126) (Pt A) (Prs 3, 6) (DB).

——S. 49 — Repeal by Code of Civil Procedure (Amendment) Act — Extent of repeal — Code of Civil Procedure (Amendment) Act (1951), Section 20).

The Code of Civil Procedure (Amendment) Act did not repeal every provision contained in the Pepsu Ordinance but only repealed such laws as corresponded to the provisions of the Civil Procedure Code and in respect of Section 49 of the Pepsu Ordinance everything was not repealed. The only provision in Section 49 which corresponded to Sections 100 and 101 of the Code of Civil Procedure was contained in sub-section (2) and it is that sub-section which stood repealed by the amending Act. 60 Punj LR 528: ILR (1958) Punj 2258: AIR 1959 Punj 123 (126) (Pt B) (Pr 4) (DB).

——S. 52, Proviso 2 — Decision of Single Judge in revision — Appeal — Typographical omission in drafting — Court's power to take notice of mistake — (Interpretation of Statutes — Mistake in drafting) — Interpretation of Statutes.

The law in Patiala State (Patiala Judicature Farman 1999, Section 44) which was to be the law for the State of Pepsu, did not provide for an appeal against a judgment, decree or order made by a Single Judge in the exercise of revisional jurisdiction of the High Court. The High Court of Pepsu was established by the Pepsu High Court Ordinance (No. 2 of 2005, Bk). Section 21 of this Ordinance also did not provide for such appeal. The Patiala Judicature Farman 1999 and the Pepsu High Court Ordinance (No. 2 of 2005, Bk.), were repealed by Section 119 of the Pepsu Judicature Ordinance No. 10 of 2005, Bk., which came into force on 25-10-1948. The second proviso of Section 52 of this Ordinance is exactly the same as the second proviso of Section 44 of the Patiala Judicature Farman, 1999, and Section 21 (4) of the Pepsu High Court Ordinance (No. 2 of 2005, Bk.), except for the omission of the phrase "in the exercise of the revisional jurisdiction or". An attempt was always made to bring the laws of erstwhile State of Patiala and those of Patiala and the East Punjab State Union in conformity with the laws in force in the Punjab. The powers of the High Court in this connection in the earlier enactment of the Patiala State and that of the State of Pepsu were the same as those granted by Cl. (10) of the Letters Patent of the Lahore High Court.

Omission of the phrase "in exercise of the revisional jurisdiction or" in the second proviso of Section 52 of the Pepsu Judicature Ordinance seems to be due to some accidental mistake of the draftsman. A perusal of the relevant records from the law Department leaves no doubt that it was purely an accidental omission, occasioned by a typographical mistake. Where the main object and intention of a statute are clear, it must not be reduced to a nullity by the draftsman's unskilfulness or ignorance of the law, except in a case of necessity, or the absolute intractability of the language used: AIR 1955 SC 830, Rel. on. Consequently an appeal under Section 52 of Ordinance No. 10 of 2005, Bk., against the decision of a Single Judge in the exercise of revisional jurisdiction of the Pepsu High Court would not be competent. ILR (1958) Punj 2009: AIR 1959 Punj 601 (602, 603) (Prs 4 to 10) (DB).

——S. 52 — Appeal — Limitation — Pepsu High Court Rules, Rule 6 — Retrospective effect — (Patiala Judicature Farman (1999), Clauses 9 (D) and 44) — (Interpretation of Statutes).

It is an accepted proposition of law that the rule of limiation applicable to a suit is that which is in force at the time the suit is brought. AIR 1937 Lah 9, Rel. on. It is of course within the competence of the rule-making power to to promulgate a new rule of limitation or to change the period of limitation previously fixed, but in the absence of express language to the contrary the new rule must be presumed to operate prospectively and to apply only to cases arising subsequent to its promulgation. It will be given a retrospective operation only if it can be established that it was clearly the intention of the rule-making power that it should so operate. 59 Punj LR 475: ILR (1957) Punj 1719: AIR 1957 Punj 317 (319) (Pt A) (Pr 8) (DB).

——Ss. 54, Proviso, Clause (b) and 51 — Revision — Power of Single Judge to enhance sentence to more than 7 years — Cr. P. C. (1898), S. 439.

A Single Judge while accepting a revision petition arising out of a case in which the accused is awarded imprisonment for seven years or less, is competent to enhance the sentence to more than seven years imprisonment, but not to transportation for life or death.

If in a particular case a Single Judge hearing a revision petition be of the opinion that it is desirable that it would be heard by a larger Bench it is open to him to move the Chief Justice to send the case to a larger Bench. SECTION 60

——S. 60 — Appeal under Pepsu Rent Restriction Ordinance instituted before proper authority — Hearing by Additional Deputy Commissioner not invested with jurisdiction — Effect — Held, that there was want of initial and total jurisdiction in the Additional Deputy Commissioner to hear the appeal. See Houses and Rents — Pepsu Urban Rent Restriction Ordinance (8 of 2006, B K), Section 16. AIR 1954 Pepsu 190.

——S. 60 — Retrospective operation.

Section 60 of the Pepsu Ordinance (10 of 2005) which gave the Pepsu High Court power to issue writs of mandamus, prohibition, etc., is not retrospective. ILR (1953) Patiala 651: AIR 1954 Pepsu 159 (159) (Pt B) (Pr 3).

——S. 60 — Power of High Court to issue directions — Constitution of India, Article 226.

Power is given by Section 60 to the High Court to issue directions or orders in the nature of writs of habeas corpus, etc., or any one of them, for the enforcement of rights as are given by any law for the time being in force. Therefore as the right of the voters and the candidate for Municipal Elections is a right given by the Municipal Act the High Court has the power to grant proper relief to the petitioners petitioning the High Court against an illegal order of the Deputy Commissioner stopping the elections and polling sine die. This power is irrespective of the power given by Article 226 of the Constitution. AIR 1951 Pepsu 141 (146) (Pt C) (Pr 14) (DB).

——S. 60 — The relief claimed under a petition under Section 60 and Article 226 is discretionary and will not be granted where the order complained against is unjust and no wrong has been to the petitioner. See Constitution of India, Article 226. ('51) 3 Pepsu LR 266.

SECTION 68

——S. 68, Proviso — Grant of certificate and filing of L. P. appeal under Section 52 — Limitation — Rules 1 and 6 framed under Section 53 of Patiala State Judicature Farman — Applicability.

The limitation prescribed by Rules 1 and 6 framed under Section 53 of the Patiala State Judicature Farman, applies for the purpose of granting a certificate and for filing a Letters Patent appeal under Section 52 of Ordinance (10 of 2005), by reason of the proviso to Section 68 of the Ordinance. AIR 1952 Pepsu 36 (37) (Pt A) (Pr 4) (DB).

——S. 68, Proviso — Certificate and Appeal under Clause 52 — Applicability of Rules 1, 6 made under Clause 53 of Patiala State Judicature Farman (1999).

Clauses 44 and 53 fell under the second part of the Patiala Judicature Farman and Clauses 52 and 68 of the Ordinance No. 10 are both included in its third part. It, therefore, necessarily follows that rules framed for the purposes of Clause 44 of the Judicature Farman, would be applicable to Clause 52 of the Ordinance. The plain meaning of the proviso is that Clause 52 of Ordinance No. 10 of 2005 is to be read in place of 'Clause 44 of the Patiala Judicature Farman, 1999" when these words are used in Rules 1 and 6. The rules framed under the Farman remained in force for the purpose of getting a certificate and for filing a letters patent appeal under Clause 52 of Ordinance No. 10 of 2005. 3 Pepsu LR 718: AIR 1952 Pepsu 36 (37, 38) (Pt B) (Prs 3, 5) (DB).

——S. 68 — Letters Patent Appeal — Ex parte grant of certificate — Validity, if can be questioned in appeal.

An ex parte grant of a certificate for a Letters Patent Appeal cannot preclude the respondent from raising the objection in the appeal that the application on which it was granted was not presented within the prescribed period and therefore the certificate was not valid. 3 Pepsu LR 365: AIR 1951 Pepsu 132 (133) (Pt A) (Pr 4) (DB).

SECTION 76

——S. 76 — The word 'business' in the section should not be interpreted in a narrower or restricted sense — It includes all work pending before the District Judge — Principal Civil Court of original civil jurisdiction — Suit under Section 92 C. P. C., instituted in Court of District Judge — District Judge transferring it to Additional District Judge — Latter has jurisdiction to dispose it in the same manner as the District Judge. AIR 1959 Punj 50, Overruled. See C. P. Code (1908), Section 24. AIR 1965 Punj 472 (FB).

——Ss. 82 and 107 — Fixing of local limits of jurisdiction by implication.

Though in the absence of a clear Notification by the High Court laying down the local limits of jurisdiction of subordinate Civil Court it can be urged that the Courts are in a difficulty and cannot very well understand what the local limits of their jurisdiction are, since the circular letter No. 5125 of the High Court, dated 19-3-2006 refers to the delimitation effected by Schedule attached to Ordinance No. 4 of 2005 it can be said that by implication the High Court fixed the local limits of jurisdiction of Civil Courts in accordance with that delimitation and by virtue of Section 107 of the Ordinance each Sub-Judge when invested with criminal powers had jurisdiction to hear and try criminal cases within the respective area of his civil jurisdiction. 1953 Cri LJ 1375: ILR (1952) Pepsu 172: AIR 1953 Pepsu 143 (144) (Pr 3).

——Ss. 92 (1) and 49 (1) — Property sold in execution — Suit for possession valued at figure below Rs. 5,000 under Section 7 (iv) (c), Court-Fees Act — Court holding suit to be valued under Section 7 (v) — Appeal contesting decision — Forum of appeal should be on basis of original valuation and not on that put by Court — Appeal held lay to District Judge and not High Court under Section 92 (1) — (Suits Valuation Act (1887), Section 8). AIR 1955 NUC (Pepsu) 5706.

——Ss. 92 (1), 116 — Pepsu (General Provisions) Ordinance (16 of 2005), Section 3 (1), Proviso — Application under Jind law transferred to Sub-Judge's Court under Ordinance 10 — Appeal from order lies to District Judge and not to High Court.

Ordinance 10 of 2005 did not give or create a right of action but only provided the procedure to be adopted, and the jurisdiction to be exercised, by the different Courts in the Pepsu Union. The question of forum for a particular action and the jurisdiction of a particular Court are matters of procedure and have nothing to do with the substantive rights of the parties to the action. A party aggrieved by an order passed after the promulgation of the new law would not have a right to insist that his appeal should be heard by the Court which was competent to hear it under the old law, even though that Court has been deprived of the jurisdiction to hear the appeal or has become extinct.

Thus an appeal from an order dismissing an application under a special local law of the Jind State, sanction to sell certain land for Rs. 2,500 which was transferred to a sub-Judge's Court for trial from the Court of the District Judge under Section 80 of the Ordinance 10 of 2005, lies to the District Judge and not to the High Court. The Court of the District Judge would, for the purposes of these cases, be a Court of the status of the High Court of the erstwhile Jind State.

The same result would follow from the Proviso to Section 3 (1) of the Ordinance 16 of 2005, where the appeal is not pending on the appointed date but is filed long after it. The appeal is governed by the Law of the Union and not by the repealed law of the particular State 2 Pepsu LR 366, AIR 1950 Pepsu 43, Rel on.

Even if it be conceded that the right to file an appeal includes also the right to file it in a particular Court and the question of forum is, therefore, to be determined by the law that existed at the time the case was started and not by the law that exists at the time the order from which an appeal is sought to be preferred is made it cannot be disputed that the legislation can take away that right or modify it by amending the law and that Section 116 of the Ordinance 10 of 2005 is such an express provisions by which the Legislature has taken away the right to appeal to the High Court under the old law of the State : Civ. App. No. 493 of 2005, dated 25-4-1950, Rel. on. 3 Pepsu LR 566: AIR 1952 Pepsu 8 (9, 10) (Pt A) (Prs 3, 4, 6) (DB).

——Ss. 92, 49 — Appeal against decree of Sub-Judge, 1st Class.

Where a suit for recovery of Rs. 5400 is decided by the Sub-Judge, 1st Class, Kapurthala under Ordinance, 10 of 2005, the appeal lies to the High Court and not to the District Judge. AIR 1950 Pepsu 43 (43, 44) (Pt A) (Pr 1) (DB).

——S. 107 — Fixing of local limits of jurisdiction by implication — Since the Circular Letter No. 5125 of the High Court Dated 19-3-2006 refers to delimitation effected by Schedule attached to Ordinance No. 4 of 2005, it can be said that High Court has fixed the local limits of jurisdiction of Civil Courts — By virtue of Section 107 therefore each Sub-Judge when invested with criminal powers had jurisdiction to hear and try criminal cases within the respective area of his civil jurisdiction. See Pepsu Judicature Ordinance (10 of 2005), Section 82. 1953 Cri LJ 1375: AIR 1953 Pepsu 143.

● ——Ss. 116, 52 — Right of appeal vested under Patiala States Judicature Farman 1999 (Sm.) — If taken away — Interpretation of Statutes — Retrospective effect.

The right of appeal from an order of a Single Judge to a Division Bench without a certificate, vested in a person under the Patiala States Judicature Farman, 1999 (Sm.) is not taken away by the passing of the Pepsu Ordinance (10 of 2005) (Sm.).

A person cannot be deprived of a vested right of appeal by a subsequent change in the law, unless the later enactment provides expressly or by necessary implication for retrospective effect being given.

Section 116 of the Pepsu Ordinance (10 of 2005) (Sm.) is a transitory regulation providing for a changeover of proceedings from one set of Courts in the Covenanting State to others of like status in the Union and for their continuance, etc., in the latter Courts. It does not say that the proceedings must be treated as having freshly commenced. What is contemplated in the latter part of the section is a notional commencement, if such a term could be used. The section obviously means that all rights which arose or are likely to arise in the future shall remain intact notwithstanding the new set-up, and that they would be dealt with by the Union Courts in place of the Courts of the covenanting State. There is nothing in the section to justify the view that any taking away of a vested right of appeal retrospectively was intended. 1905 AC 369, Relon; AIR 1951 Pepsu 39. Reversed. Ganpat Rai Hiralal v. Aggarwal Chamber of Commerce, Ltd., 1953 SCA 1: (1952) SCJ 564: 66 Mad LW 1: ILR (1953) Patiala 9: (1953) SCR 752: AIR 1952 SC 409 (410) (Pt B) (Pr 9).

——S. 116 — Ordinary rule of appeal — Section 116, if affects rule.

Ordinarily the right of appeal from an order made in a case should be determined by the law that existed at the time the case was started and not by the law that exists at the time the order from which an appeal is sought to be preferred is made, but the Legislature can take away the right of appeal or modify it by amending the law expressly or by making a provision from which such an intention can be inferred. Section 116 affects the ordinary rule of appeal by necessary intendment. 2 Pepsu LR 307: AIR 1951 Pepsu 39 (39 to 41) (Pr 1) (DB).

PEPSU LAND ACQUISITION ACT (4 of 2006 BK)

PREAMBLE

——Preamble — Validity of Act — Held, that the contention that in the year 1952 Patiala Act No. 3 of 1995 BK was not law in Pepsu because it had been repealed by the Pepsu Acquisition of Land Act, was not acceptable as the latter Act 2006 BK was not a valid piece of legislation. ——Preamble—Validity of Act—Act not reserved for consideration of President — Act is not good law — Effect of Section 4 of Act 5 of 1953 on acquisitions made under Act 4 of 2006 — It validates acquisitions made or purported to have been made under that Act — (Constitution of India, Article 31 (3)) — (Pepsu Reclamation Act (5 of 1953). AIR 1955 NUC (Pepsu) 1873.

——Preamble—Validity of Act—The words 'such law' in Article 31 (3) refer to the law relating to acquisition and requisition as referred to in sub-article (2) of Article 31 — The Pepsu Land Acquisition Act 2006 BK was a law falling within the scope of sub-article (2) — If not having been reserved for the consideration of the President and thus not having received his assent was ineffective and inoperative law. SECTION 20

——Ss. 20, 27, 56 — Presumption under Section 27 — Appeal against award of District Judge is competent under Section 56 — Land not acquired under Act — Reference misconceived and without jurisdiction — Quashed under Article 227 of Constitution — C. P. Code (1908), Sections 2 (2), 2 (9) — Constitution of India, Article 227.

Under Section 27 the award of a District Judge is to be deemed to be a decree and the statements of the grounds of the award a judgment within the meaning of Sections 2 (2) and 2 (9) of Civil P. C. respectively. An appeal against the said award is competent under Section 56 of the Act.

Where, therefore, the land had not been acquired under provisions of Pepsu Land Acquisition Act and the Collector after making the award referred the matter under Section 20 of the Act at the instance of the land owner, to the District Judge who after due enquiry affirmed the award of the Collector, the reference and the award of District Judge were bad in law. The award was, therefore, set aside under Section 56 of the Act as the District Judge was not vested with jurisdiction to entertain the reference and announce the award. The reference being misconceived and without jurisdiction was also quashed under Article 227 of the Constitution of India. (1963) 65 Punj LR 130.

●——S. 3 — Constitutionality — Constitution of India, Article 33 — Act being enacted by President by virtue of delegation under Section 3 of Act 22 of 1953 is not parliamentary legislation within Article 33 — Pepsu Legislature (Delegation of Powers) Act (22 of 1953), Section 3.

In construing the validity of Section 3 of the impugned Act the provision contained in Article 33 of the Constitution has no relevance. No doubt, the impugned provision is concerned with ensuring discipline among the forces charged with the maintenance of public order but as the powers of the President were exercised by virtue of the delegation contained in Section 3 of Act 22 of 1953 under which only the powers of the State Legislature were vested in him, any law enacted by him would not have the force of Parliamentary legislation contemplated by Article 33. Dalbir Singh v. State of Punjab, 1962 SCD 893: (1963) 1 SCA 369: (1963) 2 SCJ 367: 1963 Mad LJ (Cri) 468: (1962) Supp 3 SCR 25: 1962 (2) Cr LJ 247: AIR 1962 SC 1106 (1108) (Pt A) (Pr 6).

●——S. 3 — Provision is not violative of Article 19 (1) (a) as it is saved by Article 19 (2) — Constitution of India, Article 19 (1) (a) and (2).

The validity of Section 3 of the Pepsu Police (Incitement to Disaffection) Act cannot be challenged on ground of violation of Article 19 (1) (a) of the Constitution as it is saved by Article 19 (2). The impugned provision in so far as it penalised the creation of disaffection among members of the police force or the incitement of the members of the police force to withhold their services from the Government could properly be sustained as enacted in the interests of public order. So also attempts to induce indiscipline among the police do not stand on any different footing. The word 'discipline' or the phrase 'breach of discipline' in Section 3 is not vague. 1960 SCJ 567: 1960 Mad LJ (Cr) 340: AIR 1960 SC 633, Applied. Dalbir Singh v. Before an order reverting a civil servant of the State to a lower rank than the one which he was holding could be made, it is incumbent on the government to consult the Public Service Commission under Regulation 5 of the Regulations made by the Rajpramukh under Section 8 of the Pepsu Public Service Commission Ordinance (No. 6 of 2006) and to give the civil servant an opportunity to show cause against his proposed reversion under Section 14 of the Pepsu General Provisions (Administration) Ordinance (No. 16 of 2005). ILR (1952) Pepsu 392: AIR 1952 Pepsu 152 (155) (Pt C) (Pr 12) (DB).

The word 'and' should be read as 'or' in item of tea in schedule to Rule 3. The object of the Pepsu Pure Food Act being to control the preparation and sale of food, if the word 'and' is read disjunctively the object of the Act would be completely defeated. PEPSU SERVICE REGULATIONS

VOLUME 1, RULE 9

●——Vol. 1, Rule 9 (1), 2nd Proviso — Proviso providing for compulsory retirement after 10 years' service — Validity — Scope and object of Art. 311 (2) of the Constitution — Exceptions to provisions in Art. 311 (2)—Art. 9 (1) as amended by Notification, dated 19th January, 1960 held invalid.

It is hardly necessary to emphasise that for the efficient administration of the State, it is absolutely essential that permanent public servants should enjoy a sense of security of tenure. The safeguard which Article 311 (2) affords to permanent public servants is no more than this that in case it is intended to dismiss, remove or reduce them in rank, a reasonable opportunity should be given to them of showing cause against the action proposed to be taken in regard to them. It seems that only two exceptions can be treated as valid in dealing with the scope and effect of the protection afforded by Art. 311 (2). If a permanent public servant is asked to retire on the ground that he has reached the age of superannuation which has been reasonably fixed, Article 311 (2) does not apply, because such retirement is neither dismissal nor removal of the public servant. If a permanent public servant is compulsorily retired under the rules which prescribe the normal age of superannuation and provide for a reasonably long period of qualified service after which alone compulsory retirement can be ordered that again may not amount to dismissal or removal under Article 311 (2) mainly because that is the effect of a long series of decisions of the Court. But where, while reserving the power to the State to compulsorily retire a permanent public servant, a rule is framed prescribing a proper age of superannuation, and another rule is added giving the power to the State to compulsorily retire a permanent public servant at the end of 10 years of his service, that cannot be treated as falling outside Article 311 (2). The termination of the service of a permanent public servant under such a rule though called compulsory retirement, is, in substance, removal under Article 311 (2) of the Constitution. Article 9 (1) of the Pepsu Service Regulations as amended by the Governor of Punjab by a notification issued on 19th January, 1960 enabling the State Government to compulsorily retire a permanent Government servant only after ten years of service, therefore, contravenes Article 311 (2) of the Constitution and is invalid. ——Vol. I, R. 9 (1) and Vol. III, R. 5 (10) — Relative scope — Provisions are reconcilable.

The two provisions are easily reconcilable and can go together. The latter of them reserves to the Government the right to retire its employee at any time it likes, but that can be done for political or other reasons. In case of the former, the Govt. can, without assigning any reason, retire any of its servants on pension after he has served for 25 years. In one case the Government has to give reasons, while in the other 25 years' qualifying service is, by itself, a reason for retirement.

Where therefore a Government servant is retired because he could not be assimilated on any suitable post in the Union, he has no unqualified or indefeasible right to continue in service till he reaches a particular age or completes a particular period of service. ILR (1955) Pepsu 327: AIR 1955 Pepsu 65 (67) (Pt C) (Pr 8) (DB).

——Vol. 1, Appendix 5, R. 1 — Preliminary inquiry — Scope and object.

The purpose of a preliminary inquiry under Rule 1 of Appendix 5 is to satisfy the officer whether there is or is not sufficient material to order a departmental inquiry. The inquiry, if any, has to be a secret one and the person concerned is not required to take any part in it. Therefore even if the preliminary inquiry was in some way defective that by itself would not vitiate all the substantial proceedings and the dismissal order. ILR (1955) Pepsu 416: AIR 1955 Pepsu 97 (99) (Pt B) (Pr 7).

——Vol. III, R. 5 (10) — Scope.

Rule 5 (10), reserves to the Government the absolute right to retire any of its employees on pension for political or other reasons. Further, the sub-rule totally negatives the inference that a Government servant can claim as of right to continue in service till he attains the age of 55 or completes the qualifying service of 25 years. ILR (1955) Pepsu 327: AIR 1955 Pepsu 65 (67) (Pt A) (Pr 7) (DB).

PEPSU SIRHIND CANAL AND WESTERN JAMNA CANAL (ENFORCEMENT AND VALIDATION) ACT (4 of 1954)

——S. 1 — Constitution of India, Article 288 — Northern India Canal and Drainage Act (8 of 1873) and Pepsu Sirhind Canal and Western Jamna Canal (Enforcement and Validation) Act (4 of 1954) — Validity — It cannot be urged that the Validation Act 4 of 1954 is bad and inoperative since it was not reserved for and did not receive the assent of the President as required by Article 288. See Constitution of India, Article 288. AIR 1956 Pepsu 40 (DB).

● ——Ss. 3 and 4 — Unauthorised use of canal water is not an offence — Enhanced charge under Rules 32 and 33 of Pepsu Sirhind Canal Rules, is not penalty — Question of Sections 3 and 4 infringing Constitution, Article 20 (1) does not arise — Northern India Canal and Drainage Act (1873), Section 31 —Constitution of India, Article 20 (1) — Pepsu Sirhind Canal Rules, Rules 32 and 33.

'Unauthorised use' of canal water from canal is not an 'offence' and imposition of enhanced water charge under Rules 32 and 33 of the Pepsu Sirhind Canal Rules is not 'a penalty' for such an 'offence'. There is no law forbidding the unauthorised user of the water which Section 31 of the Canal Act, 1873, provides, will be charged at rates that may be prescribed by rules. The word 'unauthorised use' in the section does not import any idea of prohibition. The intention of the law clearly is to obtain payment for water used and the fact that the rates prescribed may be high cannot alter this position.

Consequently the question of Sections 3 and 4 of the Pepsu Sirhind Canal and Western Jamna Canal Rules (Enforcement and Validation) Act, 1954 infringing the provisions of Article 20 (1) of the Constitution does not arise. PEPSU SUGARCANE (REGULATION OF SUPPLY AND PURCHASE) ACT (10 of 1954) ——Ss. 14 and 21 (2) (m) — Pepsu Sugarcane (Regulation of Supply and Purchase) Ruels (1955), Rules 1 (2) and 38 — Liability to pay commission on Sugarcane purchased by occupier of factory arises only when rate is fixed under R. 38 and not retrospectively from date of Act.

Section 14 (2) puts a limit to the maximum rate that may be prescribed, but it does not itself prescribe or determine the rate of commission chargeable. No doubt, Section 14 declared that the occupier shall have to pay a commission on sugarcane purchased, but unless and until rate of commission is prescribed and thus determined there is no liability. It is only when the rate is prescribed that the liability crystallises and arises. The rate when fixed by rule cannot be operative against purchases made earlier to its prescription.

Hence the liability to pay commission under Section 14 of the Act did not and could not arise until the liability was definitely stated and determined and it was not so until rule 38 was framed under that section. Rule 38 having been framed months after the purchase of sugarcane the petitioner is not liable to pay the commission under Section 14 of the Act read with that rule — (1816) 2 Price 381 and (1890) 24 QBD 557, Dist. ILR (1956) Patiala 103.

PERMIT SYSTEM RULES (1948)

——Father migrating to Pakistan — Minor son — Nationality — Acquisition of Indian nationality.

According to International law a child acquires the nationality of parents. Where a minor migrates to Pakistan along with his father the father does not have Indian nationality under Art. 7 of the Constitution and the minor also must be taken to have acquired the nationality of the father. Apparently he cannot retain Indian nationality unless according to the Permit System Rules he comes to the country with a permit for permanent residence or settlement. 1957 Cri LJ 537: AIR 1957 Punj 86 (DB).

——Power to cancel permit.

Though the Permit System Rules of 1948 did not expressly confer upon the Government power to cancel a permit, such power was however implicit because an authority which can issue a permit has inherent jurisdiction to cancel the same. It is not necessary that the power to make a rule authorising the Government to cancel the permit should be expressly confered by the Act AIR 1953 Sau 37 (39) (Pt C) (Pr 7) (FB).

RULE 2

——R. 2 — Contravention of — Rules coming into force after accused came to India —Accused is guilty of staying thereafter. See Influx From Pakistan (Control) Act (23 of 1949), S. 5. AIR 1955 NUC (Raj) 503-504 (DB).

RULE 12

——R. 12 — Rule 12 was not retrospective. See Influx From Pakistan (Control) Act (1949). 1958 Cri LJ 176: AIR 1956 All 108 (DB).

——Rr. 12 and 16-A (4) — Contravention of R. 12 — Permit System Rules (1949), R. 19.

The temporary permit was issued to the applicant on the 27th of October 1948 when the Permit System Rules, 1948, were in force. His application was for a permit for return to India. It was in view of Rule 16-A Clause 4 that he was given a temporary permit. The issue of a temporary permit did not, however, dispose of his application finally.

Held, that in the absence of any definite information on the point whether the Deputy High Commissioner granted or rejected the application, it should be deemed that the Deputy High Commissioner had at least extended the period of the temporary permit till he was to be in a position to pass any final orders. It could not be said that the period of the temporary permit had come to an end and that applicant had contravened the conditions of his permit by staying on in India. It was necessary for the State to establish that his application had been finally rejected by the Deputy High Commissioner.

(Per Bhargava, J.) — The applicant had by his stay in India after January 1, 1949, not only contravened the provisions of Rule 19 of the Permit System Rules, 1949, but he had also committed breach of conditions of the permit, under which he returned to India. 1952 Cri LJ 353: ILR (1952) 1 All 513: AIR 1952 All 257 (260, 261, 269) (Pt B) (Prs 21, 22a, 23, 75a) (DB).

——R. 16 — Scope — Validity.

Held, that R. 16 of the Rules dated 7-9-1948 or the corresponding R. 10 of the Rules of 20-5-1950 which provides for grant of permit for permanent residence after a personal scrutiny of the application and after securing agreement of the State when the applicant intends to resettle is a very reasonable one. See Constitution of India, Article 19 (1) (d). 1958 Cr LJ 418 (2): AIR 1958 Raj 65 (DB).

——R. 29 — Cancellation of permit after it is availed of — Validity — Hearing of party before cancellation — If necessary.

Under Rule 29 of the Permit System Rules, a permit can be cancelled even after it is availed of. The rule does not provide for the hearing of a party before a permit is cancelled. Therefore the omission to hear the party before cancelling the permit and the omission to assign any reasons for cancelling the permit do not infringe the Permit System Rules. ILR (1951) Nag 523: 1951 NLJ 304: AIR 1951 Nag 38 (41) (Pt D) (Pr 25) (DB).

——R. 29 — Validity — If in conflict with Articles 5 to 9 of Constitution — Absence of provision for hearing party before cancellation of permit — Principles of natural justice — If apply.

Rule 29 of the Permit System Rules is not in conflict with Articles 5 to 9 of the Constitution. There is nothing in Arts. 5 and 6 of the Constitution which precludes Parliament from enacting a law imposing the requirement of a permit for return to India or of cancellation of such permit. Indeed, the proviso to Article 7 contemplates permits for resettlement or permanent return. The power to cancel a permit is implicit in the power to grant one and, therefore, it is competent to Parliament to provide for the cancellation of a permit. Such power inheres in every sovereign legislature and this matter has been placed beyond doubt by Article 11 which goes so far as to lay down that nothing in Part II shall derogate from the power of Parliament to make any provision for the termination of citizenship. It is also clear that the validity of the rule is not affected by the fact that a permit has been availed of by the grantee. To hold otherwise would be to place unwarranted limitation upon the sovereign powers of Parliament to enact such a law or to permit a rule of this kind being done. The argument that Rule 29 is opposed to the principles of natural justice in so far as it does not provide for the hearing of the party before the cancellation of his permit, has no force. These principles would only apply where a person is granted a right which is justiciable. Neither the Influx From Pakistan (Control) Act nor the rules confer on any person an absolute right to obtain a permit. It was within the competence of Parliament to grant a justiciable right or a limited right such as the one the Act and the rules framed thereunder confer. Whether to grant or refuse a permit rests solely within the discretion of the High Commissioner. That discretion cannot be questioned in a Court of law. Therefore, there is no scope for the applicability of the principles of natural justice. ILR (1951) Nag 523: 1951 NLJ 304: AIR 1951 Nag 38 (42) (Pt E) (Pr 28) (DB).

PLANTATIONS LABOUR ACT (69 of 1951)

——Ss. 30, 2 (k) (as stood before amendment by Act 34 of 1960) — "Worker", — Includes both casual and permanent workers — Civil P. C. (1908), Pre. — Words and Phrases — "Worker" — Interpretation of.

The management of a tea estate cannot disallow annual leave with wages admissible under the Act, to their workmen termed casual or Basti Daffa workers, on the ground that they are only casual workers and not permanent. So long as the worker is employed in the Tea Garden, he is entitled to all the privileges and to the use of all the benefits, such as, recreation and the leave benefit which the employor is bound to provide to his employees. There is nothing either in the Scheme of the Act or under the Rules which justifies the limiting of the definition of the word 'worker' to the permanent workers alone. The words are of very wide import and they include all the workers employed in the Estate. AIR 1958 SC 353, Rel. on; AIR 1960 Assam 67, Disting.

If the object of the Act (1951) is to provide certain benefits to persons employed in certain classes of industries, it cannot be said that it will be inconsistent with the object of the Act, if the word 'worker' is interpreted to include temporary workers also. The object of the Act will be better served if no distinction is made between a casual and permanent worker in so far as the benefits to the workers are concerned in the Act.

Merely because by a subsequent amendment, a particular class of casual workers has been excluded from the definition of the word "worker", it does not necessarily mean that even before amendment, the "worker" is limited to certain types of workers. If the casual workers were not included by the definition of the word "worker" in the unamended Act, it was not necessary for the legislature to expressly exclude by a subsequent amendment, the temporary class of workers employed for a particular work. The subsequent amendment only supports the argument that unamended definition of the "worker" never contemplated any classification of "permanent" and "temporary" workers. ILR (1964) 16 Assam 550 (DB).

SECTION 6

——S. 6 — Intention — Presumption from possession — The mere fact that the accused was found in possession of a number of poisonous substances would not itself raise a presumption against him in every case to that effect that his possession of the same was for sale whether a presumption of that nature should arise under S. 114 of the Evidence Act or not should depend upon the circumstances of each case. See Evidence Act (1872), S. 114. 1957 Cri LJ 1191: AIR 1957 All 705.

——S. 6 (1) (a) — Prosecution under — Contravention of R. 3 of Rules made by U. P. Government — Proof required to convict.

Under the rule framed by the U. P. Government under the Act punishment is provided for in two cases, namely (1) sale of a poisonous substance specified in the schedule without licence and (2) possession for sale of the poisons specified in the same schedule. Where it is conceded that the accused is not prosecuted for selling any poisonous substance without a licence he could only be convicted if it is proved that he was in possession of the said substance "for sale". The accused could not be convicted merely for the possession of the poisonous substances specified in the schedule. 1957 Cr LJ 1191: AIR 1957 All 705 (706) (Pt A) (Pr 7).

——S. 6 — Rules under R. 3 — Nature of intention required under.

The intention required under R. 3, is intention of selling without licence, and not the intention of selling with licence. The mental condition of a person who intends to sell only if he gets the licence, and not to sell if he does not get it is both a negative as well as a positive one with the result that the position is neutralised. On the other hand, a person who intends to sell in any case adopts an attitude that is positive. The distinction between the two though fine is a clear one, and must be recognised by a criminal Court in the case of an offence which makes a special type of mens rea a necessary ingredient of the criminal wrong. 1957 Cr LJ 1191: AIR 1957 All 705 (707) (Pt C) (Pr 9).

——S. 6 (2) — Applicability — Effect of acquittal.

The condition precedent for an order of confiscation under S. 6, sub-section (2) is that the accused should have been found guilty of having committed an offence in respect of such a poison. If the accused is acquitted in respect of it, it is not possible to sustain an order of confiscation. 1957 Cri LJ 1191: AIR 1957 All 705 (708) (Pt F) (Pr 15).

——S. 6 (2) — What can be confiscated.

The words "vessles, packages or coverings" are wide enough to include a bag of mustard seeds mixed with argemone mexicana which is notified as a poison. Hence, it is not only the poison that can be confiscated but the mustard seeds also with which it is mixed. 1953 All WR (HC) 367: 1953 All LJ 374 (1): 1953 Cr LJ 1628: AIR 1953 All 713 (714) (Pt C) (Pr 4) (DB).

● ——Ss. 1, 17, 28, 29 and 35 — Magistrate and officer exercising powers of Magistrate — Difference — (Words and Phrases).

There is a vital difference between the phrase "a Magistrate" and the phrase "an officer exercising the powers of a Magistrate". The bare word 'Magistrate' includes a person who does not enjoy all the powers of a Magistrate, but enjoys some of them, whereas the expression "an officer exercising the powers of a Magistrate" has a technical meaning assigned to it. Under Sections 28 and 29, the word 'Magistrate' means 'a Magistrate either of the First Class, or the Second Class or the Third Class'. But the words "an officer exercising the powers of a Magistrate" in S. 35 refer only to a Magistrate of the First Class. Hence, S. 35 is not rendered redundant by the provisions of Ss. 28 and 29. Mahendra Singh v. State of U. P., 1956 Cr LJ 174: (1955) 2 Lab LJ 750: 1955 All LJ 643: 1955 All WR (HC) 548: ILR (1956) 1 All 178: AIR 1956 All 96 (98) (Pt E) (Pr 11) (SB).

——S. 1 — Validity of — Effect of Art. 246 of the Constitution — (Constitution of India, Articles 246 and 372 (1)).

The words "subject to the other provisions of this Constitution" in Art. 372 do not mean that laws which had been passed by the Central Legislature before 26-1-50, automatically ceased to have effect because the subject was not being made a State subject. All laws which were in force in the territory of India upon the commencement of the Constitution continued to remain in force under Art. 372 (1) and Art. 246 does not apply to any Act which was already in existence. The Police Act which was passed in 1861 at a time when there was no representative Government in India, therefore, remained in force at the commencement of the Constitution and its constitutionality cannot be challenged on the ground that, it being a Central Act, is not a valid Act in any particular State after the Constitution. ●——S. 2 — Three tier system prevalent in police force in State of Rajasthan does contravene Arts. 14 and 16 (1) of the Constitution. See Constitution of India, Article 14. AIR 1964 SC 1559.

●——Ss. 2 and 12 — Scope — Standing Order No. 46, dated 20th October 1949 issued by Inspector-General of Ajmer — Has no statutory basis or legal efficacy as a service condition — Holder of officiating post reverted to his substantive post — There is no breach of condition of service.

The orders and rules referred to in Section 12, Police Act have nothing to do with the determination of the service conditions of the officers recruited to the police force. The expression 'organisation' cannot include within its fold the conditions of service of those in the police force. Under Section 2, it is not the Inspector-General of Police but the State Government that is empowered to frame rules regulating the conditions of service of members of the police force. In the absence of any statutory provision this power could not be delegated by the State Government to the Inspector-General of Police. Therefore, Standing Order No. 46, dated 20th October, 1949 issued by the Inspector-General of Police, Ajmer cannot be treated as a condition of service having legal efficacy and in the event of its non-observance could not be the subject of a complaint in Court. ILR (1961) 11 Raj 260. Reversed.

Standing Order No. 46 deals not with the order in which holders of officiating posts may be reverted but with that in which they could be considered for confirmation, so that in strictness of its language the clause would not constitute the reversion of the holder of an officating post to his substantive post as one in breach of its terms. State of Rajasthan v. Ram Saran. (1964) 2 SCR 982: (1965) 1 Lab LJ 103: AIR 1964 SC 1361 (1363, 1364) (Pt A) (Prs 6, 7).

●——S. 2 — Rules under — Powers of Government to make employee compusorily retire — The language of Note 1 of Art. 465 makes it abundantly clear that the Government's right to compulsorily retire an officer is not derived from Note 1 of Art. 465. That right is derived from the Rules made by the State Government in exercise of the powers conferred by S. 2 of Police Act. The power conferred by the Rule is incorporated in Art. 465. Thus, the power to be applied against a police officer and referred to in Note 1 can be said to be a reproduction of the power contained in the Rules made under the Police Act. See Civil Service Regulations (as adapted in U. P.), Art. 465. AIR 1965 All 142 (FB).

——S. 2 — Central Civil Service (Temporary Service) Rules (1949), Rr. 3, 5 — Notification of Chief Commissioner, Delhi, applying Rules to lower subordinates of Delhi police — Temporary constable appointed under Police Act in Delhi Police — Termination under R. 5 — Termination held was in conformity with rules.

A was recruited as a temporary foot constable in the Delhi Police under the Police Act. Subsequently, the Superintendent of Police 'Lines', Delhi, gave him one month's notice under R. 5 of the Central Civil Service (Temporary Service) Rules, 1949, terminating his services. His services were terminated immediately after one month from the date of the service of the notice on him. It was contended by A that his termination was bad in law as he was governed by the provisions of the Police Act and the Rules made thereunder and so his services could not have been terminated under R. 5 of the Central Civil Services (Temporary Service) Rules, 1949.

Held, that in view of the notification issued by the Chief Commissioner directing that the Central Services Rules should apply to all the lower subordinates of the Delhi Police, A's case fell within the ambit of those Rules. The Chief Commissioner was fully competent to issue the notification under S. 2 of Police Act. A having been recruited as a temporary foot constable, his case was governed by R. 5 of the Central Civil Services (Temporary Service) Rules, 1949. The provisions of this rule were fully complied with by Superintendent of Police before terminating the petitioner's services. Though A had put in more than three years' service he could not be deemed to have been in quasi-permanent service at the time of termination because the declaration as contemplated in R. 3 had not been issued. The order terminating A's services as a temporary constable in Delhi police was in conformity with the rules governing his case and it could not be assailed on any legitimate ground. SECTION 4

——S. 4 — Scope — Powers of District Magistrate — (Punjab Police Rules (1934), Vol. III, Ch. 26, R. 262).

The statutory power given under Section 4, Police Act, to the District Magistrate is of general control and direction to the police. It does not override the provisions of the Code of Criminal Procedure nor can the rules made under the Police Act override the Criminal P. C. and as a matter of fact the rules do not provide anything which is contrary to the Criminal P. C.

Where the investigation is not sufficiently complete and the police have not arrived at any decision whether to prosecute the accused or not, the District Magistrate would not be justified without a careful scrutiny of the police diaries, in directing the police to arrest the accused and to put up a challan against them when the police have not made any report under S. 173, Criminal P. C., or sought the advice of the District Magistrate under Section 4, Police Act. 55 Punj LR 77: 1953 All WR (Sup) 33: 1953 Cr LJ 1018: AIR 1953 Punj 149 (152, 153, 155) (Pt B) (Prs 21, 23, 37).

——S. 4 — Interpretation clause — Application of, in the interpretation of section. The interpretation clause cannot be applied in interpreting a section of the Act if there is something in the section itself which is repugnant to the definition contained in the interpretation clause. SECTION 5

——S. 5 — Scope — What the accused did, he did while acting or purporting to act in the discharge of his official duty is one of the conditions and not the only condition necessary to attract S. 197. The other condition is that the officer should not be removable from his office save by or with the sanction of the State Government in the case of a person employed in connection with the affairs of the State. A Sub-Inspector is removable from his office even by a D. S. P. under S. 7, Police Act. The view that by reason of the provisions of S. 35 read with S. 5 it is only the I. G. of Police, who is given the powers of a Magistrate, that could enquire into the charge sheet and dismiss him and that when there is no such officer in the State the State Government alone could do so is to ignore the provisions of S. 7 between which and the former sections there is really no conflict. ●——S. 7 — Statutory rules — Construction — Cannot be treated as mere administrative directions. See Interpretation of Statutes — Statutory Rules. 1961 (1) Cri LJ 773: AIR 1961 SC 751.

●——S. 7 — Constitution of India, Arts. 309, 310 311, 313, 154 — Scope — Member of public service — Tenure of office — Limitations on — Principles stated — Police Act and Police Regulations whether still in force. Under Art. 313, the Police Act and the Police Regulations made in exercise of the powers conferred on the Government under that Act, which were preserved under S. 243 of the Government of India Act, 1935, continue to be in force after the Constitution so far as they are consistent with the provisions of the Constitution — See Constitution of India, Art. 309. 1961 (1) Cri LJ 773: AIR 1961 SC 751.

——S. 7 — Rule authorizing termination of services of temporary Government servant on one month's notice — Termination under rule cannot conflit with provisions of S. 7, unless termination is by way of punishment — Rule by itself is not inconsistent with S. 7 — Constitution of India, Art. 311. ILR (1962) 2 All 755: AIR 1966 All 92 (96) (Pt C) (Pr 7) (DB).

——S. 7 — Order to deal with an assembly tactfully — Use of force — If authorised.

An officer who is under orders to deal with an assembly tactfully cannot invoke the powers under S. 128, Criminal P. C. because the injunction to use tact contains an implied command not to use force. It is impossible to conceive of an order which simultaneously requires a Police Official to use tact in dealing with a crowd and at the same time requires him to dispense it by force. An officer who gives an order under Section 128, Criminal P. C. commanding an assembly to disperse must leave all considerations of tact behind him, ignore any express direction to handle the crowd tactfully and must be prepared to take all such further measures including the use of Armed Forces, if necessary, to ensure that his command is obeyed by the assembly or the mob. AIR 1960 All 304 (314) (Pt H) (Pr 40).

——S. 7 — Negligence and remissness — What amounts to.

Disrespectful behaviour towards a superior and rudeness towards him by a subordinate police officer will always amount to remissness in the discharge of duty within meaning of S. 7. By reason of his employment and the rules governing his duties, he is expected not only to be respectful towards his superiors but display a sense of discipline and restraint also. 1960 All WR (HC) 272: 1960 All Cr R 192: (1960) 2 Lab LJ 279: 1960 All LJ 310.

——S. 7 — Charge under — Contents — Particulars — Necessity — (Constitution of India, Article 311).

Section 7 of the Police Act makes remissness or negligence in the discharge of duty by a police officer punishable. Where according to the charges served on the police constable, he was accused of negligence and remissness in connection with his misbehaviour towards the Sub-Inspector on a certain date though the details of the alleged misbehaviour were not mentioned in the charges, the charges could not be said to be vague, when he knew what the accusation was and was aware of the details also against him when the evidence was led. It cannot, therefore, be urged that he was prejudiced in any manner by the absence of details in the charges. 1960 All WR (HC) 272: 1960 All Cr R 192: (1960) 2 Lab LJ 279: 1960 All LJ 310.

——S. 7 — Departmental trial — Procedure — Section 42 — Applicability.

Section 42 is intended as a protection to Police Officers against action and prosecutions brought by a third party, in respect of anything done or intended to be done by them in the performance of their duties. It has no relation to departmental enquiries instituted under S. 7. ●——Ss. 7, 28 and 29 — Subjects of.

The judicial trial mentioned in S. 28 or Section 29 does not end in the dismissal, suspension on or reduction in rank of police officer; it ends in his conviction and punishment according to the penal law of the land. The dismissal, suspension or reduction in rank is provided for in S. 7, and the two sections deal with two different subjects. Mahendra Singh v. State of U. ——S. 7 — Scope — Unfit to discharge duties — Matter is solely within jurisdiction of dismissing authority — Present offered to girl with immoral motive — Ground held sufficient for dismissal. AIR 1955 NUC (All) 2704.

——Ss. 7 and 35 (as amended by Act 10 of 1882) — Relative scope — Conflict between the sections — Which to prevail.

Section 7 clearly, and in so many words, confers powers on the officers enumerated in the section to dismiss or otherwise punish police officers of subordinate rank, which means police officers up to the rank of Inspector of Police. The provisions of S. 35 could be given effect to as long as S. 6 of the Act had not been deleted, but after the deletion of that section in 1882 its provisions become contradictory to the provisions of S. 7. The Legislature appears to have forgotten to delete S. 35 when it deleted S. 6. But there can be no doubt that the Legislature did intend to confer powers on the officers, enumerated in S. 7, to impose the penalities provided therein. Effect should, therefore, be given to the provisions of S. 7 in preference to the provisions of S. 35. AIR 1954 Cal 60, Dissent. from. 1955 All LJ 196: AIR 1955 All 400 (400) (Pr 5).

——S. 7 — Construction — 'Think', meaning of.

Sapru, J.:— The use of the word 'think' in S. 7 is somewhat deliberate. One of the dictionary meanings is "to judge, to form or hold as an opinion, to consider." It is thus milder than the expression 'found' or 'established', for it requires a less degree of positive certainty than those words as regards the fact in controversy or dispute. The processes however, by which the Police Officers must think have been indicated by the Police Regulations. 1954 All WR (HC) 138: 1954 Cr LJ 874: 1954 All LJ 316: ILR (1954) 2 All 325: AIR 1954 All 438 (440) (Pt B) (Pr 13) (DB).

Article 19 (1) (d) has to be read with Art. 21 which lays down that a person may be deprived of his personal liberty according to the procedure established by law, which means valid law. Section 7 of the Police Act, 1861 is valid law being saved by Article 19 (5). The restriction imposed by S. 7 is reasonable and is necessary in the interest of the general public. By Paragraph 3 of G. O. No. O-3237/II-B-32-52 of the U. P. Govt. dated 24-12-1953, it was provided that disciplinary action could be taken against a Government servant who without seeking redress from his department or Government authorities seeks a decision from Court in respect of grievances arising out of his employment or conditions of service.

A police officer against whom an enquiry was proceeding gave notice under S. 80, C. P. Code, to the officer conducting the enquiry alleging that certain incidents which occurred on a particular day during the enquiry amounted to defamation of him.

Held, that his allegation was not a matter regarding the conditions of his employment or service and consequently any notice sent by the police officer could not amount to a breach of the provisions of the Government order and would not justify any disciplinary action against him. 1956 All WR (HC) 325: 1956 All LJ 447: (1956) 2 Lab LJ 146: 1956 Cr LJ 1147: AIR 1956 All 578 (580) (Pt C) (Pr 6).

——S. 7 — Scope — Power to look into character rolls — Superintendent of Police has power. AIR 1955 NUC (All) 2704.

——S. 7 — Scope — Governor's power to dismiss subordinate police officer — (Government of India Act, 1935, Ss. 243, 220 (2) and 240 (3) — (Constitution of India, Arts. 311 (2) and 217 (1)).

In India the paramount power of the Crown under the 1935 Act and of the President, Governor, or Rajpramukh as the case may be under the Constitution, is subject, and subject only, to such exceptions as are expressly provided by the Act or the Constitution itself.

The plain meaning of Section 243 of the 1935 Act is that if with regard to the conditions of services of the subordinate ranks of the police force (as determined by or under the Police Act) there is a conflict between such conditions and the provisions of Ss. 240, 241 or 242, the former will prevail. In other words, it is only to the extent to which the conditions or service of such police officers are inconsistent with the provisions of those sections that the operation of the latter will be excluded.

Section 7 of the Police Act provides that (subject to Art. 311 and to such rules the State Government may make) certain specified officers may dismiss a police officer of the subordinate ranks. There is nothing in the Act which touches on the power of the Crown to dismiss a police officer and nothing which is inconsistent therewith; on the other hand R. 479 (a) of the Police Regulations, which is a rule made under S. 7 of the Act, contains an express reservation of the Governor's powers of punishment with reference to all officers. The power vested by S. 7 in the Inspector-General and certain other officers to dismiss subordinate ranks of the police force is not a delegation to them of the Crown's power of dismissal at all but is a separate statutory power which is neither a substitute for nor restricts the constitutional power of the Crown to dismiss its servants at its pleasure.

Therefore, the provisions of S. 243 did not affect the power of the Governor to dismiss a police officer of the subordinate ranks at pleasure, subject only to the requirements of S. 240 (2). Putting on one side for the moment the question of the effect of Art. 320, under the Constitution the Governor has the power, subject to the provisions of Art. 311 (2), to dismiss at pleasure a police officer of the subordinate ranks. AIR 1954 All 629 (631, 632) (Pt A) (Prs 11, 15, 16) (DB).

There is nothing in Bengal Police Regulations which indicates that the legislative intent is that the appellate authority should have power to condone delay, when such delay occurs in matters of appeal which have been specifically provided for in R. 883. This is a clear provision which limits the period of time of preferring an appeal to 37 days of the date of receipt of the order appealed from. It is not necessary to read this provision along with the one to be found in Cl. (xiii) of R. 888 (e) which is an entirely separate provision having nothing to do with appeals properly so called. Further, there is nothing in the rule that obliges the appellate authority to hear an appellant in support of an application for condonation of delay in preferring an appeal. There is, indeed no power in the appellate authority to excuse delay, and if it has no such power, it cannot acquire any at the appellant's request. AIR 1963 Cal 6 (9) (Pt B) (Prs 15, 17) (DB).

Although no mandatory language is used in Rr. 3 (b) and 3 (c), there is clear indication that a preliminary inquiry is mandatory and essential before a charge can be framed which charge the person alleged to be guilty of an offence has to meet. Further, R. 3 (b) does not lay down that the preliminary inquiry should be held by the same person who ultimately frames the charge. The person holding the preliminary inquiry may be different from the person who ultimately frames the charge, but the rule presupposes that there must be a preliminary inquiry upon which ultimately the charges served on the defaulter are based.

In cases falling under Item (ii) of R. 3 (a), an Inspector or a Deputy Inspector is authorised to hold a preliminary inquiry, but that preliminary inquiry can only proceed upto a particular stage. As soon as the Inspector or the Deputy Inspector discovers that there is a prima facie case against the defaulter, then he must not proceed with the preliminary inquiry but must report the matter to the Superintendent who would continue the inquiry.

Held, on facts that either there was a preliminary inquiry by an officer who was not authorised to hold that inquiry, or there was no preliminary inquiry at all. AIR 1956 Bom 545 (546, 547) (Pt B) (Prs 3 to 5) (DB).

——S. 7 — Rajasthan Police Regulations (1948), R. 100 — Validity — If prevail over Rules of 1950 — (Rajasthan Civil Services (Classification, Control and Appeal) Rules (1950).

The Rajasthan Police Regulations were issued by the Chief Secretary to the Government of Rajasthan in September, 1949, without the sanction of the Rajpramukh and as such they have no statutory force. AIR 1958 Raj 284, Rel. on. The Police Act of 1861 was validly enforced in Rajasthan for the first time on the 19th July, 1950, when it was published in the Rajasthan State Gazette. As the Rajasthan Police Regulations 1948, were issued before the Police Act of 1861 received operation in this State, the said regulations cannot be said to have been issued under the Act of 1861 as adopted to Rajasthan and even otherwise they lack statutory force. These regulations under the circumstances can, at the best, be treated as administrative rules for the guidance of the Officers concerned and no more, and cannot prevail over the Rules of 1950 in so far as they may be found inconsistent with the latter. The Rajasthan Civil Services (Classification, Control and Appeal) Rules of 1950 which were indisputably issued by the Rajpramukh, who was the competent legislative authority at the time, in exercise of the power conferred by Art. 309 of the Constitution must prevail and receive their due effect and force. ILR (1959) 9 Raj 654: 1959 Raj LW 523: AIR 1960 Raj 56 (58) (Pt A) (Pr 7) (DB).

——S. 7 — Rajasthan Police Regulations (1948), R. 100 — Applicability to — (Rajasthan Civil Services (Classification, Control and Appeal) Rules (1950)) — (Constitution of India, Arts. 309, 310, 311).

Rule 100 of Rajasthan Police Regulation, 1948, which occurs in Ch. VI, is only applicable to the members of the Police Force and is not applicable to ministerial officers. The Inspector-General of Police therefore has no power to enhance the punishment of a ministerial officer awarded by the Deputy Inspector-General of Police. Even if it be assumed that Rule 100 of the Police Regulations was applicable to a ministerial officer these rules were completely superseded by the Rajasthan Civil Services (Classification, Control and Appeal) Rules, 1950, framed under Art. 309 of the Constitution so far as ministerial officers are concerned. But the order of the Deputy Inspector-General of Police imposing the punishment of witholding increment for a year on the ministerial officer of the department cannot prevent the Inspector-General of Police who was the appointing authority to reopen the case and to impose for the same misconduct a higher punishment which he alone was empowered to impose. It is only when the authority which actually imposes a minor punishment has not got the power of imposing a major punishment, that it is open to the higher authority to reopen the case and impose the major punishment in the absence of any power of enhancement. 1959 Raj LW 641: ILR (1958) 8 Raj 953: AIR 1958 Raj 284 (285) (Pt A) (Prs 5 to 9) (DB).

Under Regulation 89, the drawing up of proceeding is to be distinguished from the recording of the evidence, Regulation 89 (k) only requires that the proceedings should be drawn up by the Superintendent of Police himself; it does not require that the evidence should also be recorded by him. Where the Superintendent of Police had himself drawn up the preliminary proceedings in a departmental enquiry against a Sub-Inspector of Police who was charged with serious misconduct and he had recorded some evidence but thereafter the rest of it was recorded by Assistant Superintendent of Police who drew up a fresh charge-sheet on the same lines as the charge-sheet drawn up by the Superintendent, there is infringement of Regn. 89 (k). 1957 Raj LW 243: ILR (1957) 7 Raj 593: AIR 1957 Raj 148 (150) (Pt B) (Pr 9) (DB).

Regulation 490 of the U. P. Police Regulations sets out the procedure to be followed in an enquiry by the police functionaries, and Rr. 8 and 9 of the Tribunal Rules set out the procedure to be followed by the Tribunal. There is no substantial difference between the procedures prescribed for the two forms of enquiry. The inquiry in its true nature is quasi-judicial. By Regn. 490, the oral evidence is to be direct, but even under R. 8 of the Tribunal Rules, the Tribunal is to be guided by rules of equity and natural justice and is not bound by formal rules of procedure relating to evidence. Jagannath Prasad Sharma v State of U. P., (1961) 2 Lab LJ 166: (1962) 1 SCR 151: (1963) 1 SCJ 115: ILR (1961) 2 All 167: AIR 1961 SC 1245 (1252) (Pt D) (Pr 15).

——S. 7 — U. P. Police Regulations, Paras. 486, 489 — Scope — Magisterial enquiry—Subsequent departmental enquiry — Further information received in the interregnum — Effect.

A combined reading of the two paras. 486 and 489 indicates that para. 486 does not apply to a case where a magisterial inquiry is ordered, and that a police officer can be departmentally tried under S. 7 of the Police Act after such a magisterial inquiry. Where the departmental trial was held subsequent to the completion of the magisterial inquiry the case falls within the express terms of para. 489 (2). The fact that in the interregnum the police received further complaints or that the C. I. D. made further enquiries do not affect the question, if substantially the subject-matter of the magisterial inquiry and the departmental trial is the same. State of Uttar Pradesh v. Paragraph 490 must be read in conjunction with Para. 479. The Deputy Superintendents of Police contemplated by Cl. (f) of Para. 479 are Superintendents for the purposes of recording the statements under Cl. 1 (b) of Para. 490. As the Police Regulations permit an enquiry or a departmental trial to be held by a Deputy Superintendent of Police, there can be no question of the infringement of any of the principles of natural justice on the ground that the enquiry was not held by the Superintendent of Police himself. It cannot be laid down as a rule for all time and for all cases that if the punishing authority had not the opportunity of seeing the demeanour of the witnesses a departmental enquiry or trial is vitiated. ——S. 7 — Dismissal of police officer — Departmental enquiry — Rules governing — Admissibility of hearsay evidence — (U. P. Police Regulations, Regn. 490, Rr. 1, 3) — (Constitution of India, Art. 311).

Section 7 makes it clear that the powers conferred upon the officers named therein are to be exercised subject to such rules as the State Government may make. Regulations 489 to 494 of the Uttar Pradesh Police Regulations are rules made by the State Government under that section with regard to the conduct of departmental trials. The powers of punishment vested in a police officer by S. 7 are, therefore, dependent upon the observance at the departmental enquiry of the provisions of these regulations. Further, Rules 1 and 3 of Regn. 490 make it sufficiently clear that hearsay evidence is inadmissible and that documents which it is proposed to make exhibits (unless they are certified copies of public records, or are of a formal nature or are admitted) must be proved. It cannot, therefore, be argued that in a departmental enquiry the tribunal is entitled to base its conclusions on such material as it thinks fit, including in particular hearsay evidence and documentary evidence the authenticity of which has not been established. A finding of the tribunal based on such inadmissible evidence cannot be sustained. 1958 All WR (HC) 758: 1958 All LJ 700: 1958 All Cr R 516: (1959) 1 Lab LJ 105: 1959 Cr LJ 411: AIR 1959 All 223 (224) (Prs 2, 3) (DB).

The Superintendent of Police may well be justified in declining to call a large number of witnesses who will all depose to the same matters, but if he comes to the conclusion that some only of the witnesses whom the officer charged desires to call should be summoned, then it is not he but that officer who should have the right to decide which are to be the witnesses who should be called. If no complaint is, therefore, registered and no report under S. 157, Criminal P. ——S. 7 — U. P. Police Regulations, R. 480 — Scope.

Rule 480 is in the nature of the First Offenders Act. When offence is of a petty nature and is only committed once or twice, the person concerned should be reprimanded. But where the person had been regularly indiciplined it cannot be said that recourse to R. 480 should be taken. AIR 1957 All 217 (219) (Pt C) (Pr 6).

——S. 7 — U. P. Police Regulations, R. 481 — Dismissal in cases where there is no conviction.

What R. 481 provides is that in case of conviction there would be no other penalty except the dismissal. But in other cases, where the officer considers that the conduct of the person concerned was of such a nature that his retention in the force was undesirable, the officer can certainly dismiss him. This is a matter of discretion of the officer and no hard and fast rule can be laid down as to what amount of indiscipline or misbehaviour will be enough to disqualify him for remaining in the force. AIR 1957 All 217 (219) (Pt D) (Pr 7).

Under the provisions of the Police Regulations it is open to the inquiring authority to permit the employee to produce defence witnesses whom for the reasons given in writing the inquiring authority considers necessary.

Held, that it was within the discretion of the inquiring auhority to consider whether the evidence of all the 32 witnesses intended to be produced by the applicant was relevant to the inquiry or not. After having considered the whole matter, the inquiring authority thought that for the purposes of the proper defence of the case, it was sufficient for the applicant to produce eight witnesses. Under the circumstances it cannot be said that no reasonable opportunity was given to the applicant to produce his defence. 1956 All WR (HC) 759: 1957 All LJ 62: (1957) 2 Lab LJ 9.

——S. 7 — U. P. Police Regulations, Chap. 32, Para. 486 — Scheme and Scope of.

The entire scheme of Para. 486, appears to be that in cases of cognizable offences if the police receives information of the commission of an offence by a police officer the procedure under sub-section (1) is to be followed. In the cases of non-cognizable offences the procedure under sub-section (2) is to be followed. There is an additional power given to the Superintendent of Police to direct a preliminary inquiry by an officer if he thinks necessary to take action on his own knowledge or suspicion in respect of the offences under S. 7 or non-cognizable offence including one under S. 29. Paragraph 486 cannot be interpreted to mean that in cases of cognizable offences which is the subject-matter of a departmental trial under S. 7 necessarily the procedure under Para. 486 (1) is to be followed before the departmental trial takes place and independently it is not open to the Superintendent of Police to act under sub-clause (3). All these clauses are independent. 1956 All WR (HC) 759: 1957 All LJ 62: (1957) 2 Lab LJ 9.

——S. 7 — U. P. Police Regulations, Para. 490 — Scope of inquiry — Procedure.

The entire scheme of Para. 490 is that the first stage of inquiry is to be conducted by an officer other than the Deputy Inspector-General of Police and he has got to give his findings but as the Deputy Inspector-General is the officer who has to pass an order of removal he has to give his own findings after considering the materials submitted to him by the Superintendent of Police, and before he gives any such finding the condition necessary is that the statement of the officer should be recorded. He has further to give notice to the officer concerned to show cause against the punishment proposed. He can make up his mind as regards the appropriate punishment after the receipt of the recommendation of the Superintendent of Police and it is for that purpose that a special rule has been laid down in Para. 490 (8) (b) that a copy of the enquiry officer's finding is to be delivered to the officer concerned at least one week before he records his settlement.

Held, that there was proper compliance with the provisions of Para. 490 (8) (b) of the Police Regulations. 1956 All WR (HC) 759: 1957 All LJ 62: (1957) 2 Lab LJ 9.

What Para. 479 (f) of the Police Regulations means is that the authority granted by the Deputy Inspector-General of Police of a particular range to a Deputy Superintendent of Police to conduct an inquiry under S. 7, Police Act is operative only so long as the Deputy Superintendent of Police is working within that range. As soon as he is transferred to some other range, the authority ceases to be operative. It is not a case of withdrawal of the authority. The authority in its own force becomes inoperative as soon as the Deputy Superintendent of Police is transferred to some other range. In such a case a fresh authority is necessary. 1955 All LJ 748: AIR 1956 All 172 (173) (Pt A) (Pr 6).

Where the record and the behaviour of a member of the police force showed that the indiscipline mentality was lingering in him, it could not be said that the Deputy Inspector-General of Police while awarding the sentence of dismissal exceeded his powers given to him under S. 7 of the Police Act. SECTION 9

——S. 9 — U. P. Police Regulations, Para. 505; Second proviso — S. 9 restricts right of police officer to resign — No conflict between S. 9 and Para. 505, U. P. Government's Notification, dated 26th December, 1959 inserting Para. 505 — No mention of Art. 309 of Constitution in notification — Paragraph 505 held not invalid— Constitution of India, Art. 309.

There is no conflict between the provision of Section 9 and Paragraph 505 of Police Regulations. Section 9 does not create independent right of resignation. On the contrary, it contains a restriction on the common law right of Police Officers to resign from service. It is not, therefore correct to say that Sec. 9 gives a Police Officer a right to resign on giving two months' notice without further restrictions. It is open to the competent authorities to place further restrictions on the right of police officers to resign from service.

Under Article 309 of the Constitution the Governor may make rules regulating conditions of service of persons employed in the State. A rule restraining the right of resignation is a rule regulating conditions of service such a rule could be made by the Governor under Art. 309. So although the Government notification, dated 26th December, 1959, amending the Police Regulations by inserting Para. 505 makes no mention of Article 309, Paragraph 505 of the Police Regulations may be sustained under Art. 309. SECTION 15

● ——S. 15 (5) — Validity — If discriminatory.

Where an exemption was granted under S. 15 (5) of the Police Act, to the Harijan and Muslim inhabitants of the villages in which an additional police force was stationed, from the levy of the cost of the additional force: Held, that the exemption discriminated against the law-abiding members of the other comminities and in favour of the Muslims and Harijan communities (assuming that every one of them was peace loving and law-abiding) on the basis only of "caste" or "religion". The exemption was therefore contrary to Article 15 (1) of the Constitution and must be struck down. AIR 1955 Raj 5, Affirmed. See Constitution of India, Art. 15 (1). AIR 1960 SC 1208.

——S. 15 (5)—Even though the provision of the Act may be widely worded, it is not necessarily void. In case, however, the discretion is abused such exercise of discretion can be challenged and annulled under Art. 14 of the Constitution. See Constitution of India, Art. 14. AIR 1955 All 9 (DB).

——S. 15 — Proclamation levying punitive tax under sub-section (1) — Validity of — Grant of exemption under sub-s. (5) — Procedure for — Exemption can only be granted to a person or class or section of inhabitants of disturbed area — Proclamation fixing liability for such tax only on persons mentioned in the proclamation — Reverses the process laid down by sub-ss. (3) and (5) and consequently illegal — Proclamation held discriminated against persons mentioned therein — Offended against Art. 14 of the Constitution.

The scheme of the various sub-sections in Section 15 of the Police Act (1861) indicates that exemption from payment of punitive tax can be granted to such inhabitants or class or section of such inhabitants, who were not responsible for the conduct which may have necessitated the increase in the Police Force in that area. Hence proclamation, making only persons mentioned therein liable for the cost of additional Police Force quartered in the disturbed area concerned reverses the procedure to be followed under Section 15 of the Police Act (1861), in granting the exemption from payment of the costs and is not in accordance with what is required under Section 15 of the Act.

Held, on facts, that the order of the Government making only the persons specified in the notification liable to bear the cost of additional Police Force and exempting the members of the opposite faction living in the same area though there were several cases pending against them, was discriminatory and offended Article 14 of the Constitution. AIR 1960 SC 1208, Ref. W. Ps Nos. 520, 528, 547, 576, 581 and 585 of 1962; W. Ps. Nos. 342 and 555 of 1963 (Andh Pra), Applied. Held, further, that on the material on record it could not be held that the appellants had participated in the instances alleged against them, for not being granted the exemption from payment of the punitive tax and consequently Government's refusal to exempt them under S. 15 (5) of the Police Act was not justifiable. (1965) 2 Andh WR 294: 1965 Mad LJ (Cri) 708: 1966 Cr LJ 741: AIR 1966 Andh Pra 204 (207, 208) (Prs 4, 5, 6, 8) (DB).

——S. 15 — Validity — Section does not offend Art. 14 of the Constitution.

Section 15 of the Police Act is perfectly constitutional and does not offend Art. 14 of the Constitution. Regarding sub-section (1) no exception can be taken to it. Sub-section (2) is also an innocuous provision. Sub-section (3) does not impose any tax or penalty upon the inhabitants of the disturbed area. It only makes them liable for payment of the cost of stationing of the additional police force. The amount of cost is a fixed amount which can be ascertained and determined any moment. The State Government does not propose to realise from the inhabitants anything more than the actual cost for the employment of the additional police. Therefore, sub-section (3) cannot be challenged either on the ground of arbitrariness or on the ground of imposition of penalty. Sub-section (4) is equally good in law. Sub-section (5) has to be read and construed along with other provisions of Section 15. So construed the sub-section does not lay down any principle or policy for the guidance of the exercise of discretion by Government in respect of exemption. The policy and principle of exemption under sub-section (5) can be deduced from the purpose and object of stationing the police force, as indicated in sub-section (1) of S. 15. It cannot, therefore, be said that the State Government has been vested with absolute unfettered authority to grant exemption and that sub-s. (5) is discriminatory and violative of Article 14 of the Constitution. AIR 1958 SC 956 and AIR 1955 All 9 and AIR 1955 Raj 5, Rel. on; AIR 1956 Pat 137, Dist. 1962 BLJR 374: AIR 1962 Pat 303 (306, 307) (Pt B) (Pr 9) (DB).

——S. 15 — Scope — Notice — Necessity.

Under the Police Act it is not essential to inform the villagers before they can be asked to pay the expenses of the additional police. S. 15 gives the State Government no option in the matter of the manner of notification. The proclamation has to be notified in the Official Gazette but with regard to any other means the State Government is given full liberty and if the State Government so chooses it may content itself with publication in the Official Gazette alone. Therefore, the mandatory provision is confined to the publication of the proclamation in the Official Gazette. The rest of the section is merely directory. ——S. 15 — Imposition of punitive police force — Decision by Government — Interference by Court — (Constitution of India, Art. 226).

Under Section 15, Police Act, it is for the State Government to decide whether there is such conduct or misconduct of the inhabitants in an area because of which it is expedient to increase the number of police. ——S. 15 — Validity — (Constitution of India, Art. 14).

In view of the clause of sub-section (1) of Section 15 of the Police Act, sub-section (5) of the same section does not offend against Art. 14 of the Constitution. ILR (1954) 4 Raj 47: 1954 Raj LW 750: AIR 1955 Raj 5 (6) (Pt B) (Pr 3) (DB).

The exemption from liability to bear any portion of the costs on account of the posting of any additional police force, granted to Harijan and Muslim inhabitants because they were Muslims or Harijans and therefore peaceful, cannot stand, as it offends against Art. 15 of the Constitution. Therefore, the order exempting Harijan and Muslim inhabitants of the area declared to be in a disturbed and dangerous state under the order of 31-5-1952, was illegal. ILR (1954) 4 Raj 47: 1954 Raj LW 750: AIR 1955 Raj 5 (6) (Pt C) (Pr 4) (DB).

SECTION 15-A

——S. 15-A (3) — Even though the provision may be widely worded, it is not necessarily void. In case, however, the discretion is abused such exercise of discretion can be challenged and annulled under Article 14 which includes within its purview both executive and legislative acts. See Constitution of India, Art. 14. AIR 1955 All 9 (DB).

SECTION 17

——Ss. 17, 1, 28, 29, 35 —Magistrate and office exercising powers of Magistrate — Difference — (Words and Phrases) — There is a vital difference between the phrase "a Magistrate" and the phrase "an officer exercising the powers of a Magistrate". The bare word "Magistrate" includes a person who does not enjoy all the powers of a Magistrate but enjoys some of them, whereas the expressions "an officer exercising the powers of a Magistrate" has a technical meaning assigned to it. Under Ss. 28 and 29, the word 'Magistrate' means 'a Magistrate either of the First class, or the Second class or the Third class. But the words "an officer exercising the powers of a Magistrate" in Section 35 refer only to a Magistrate of the First class. Hence, Section 35 is not rendered redundant by the provisions of Sections 28 and 29. See Police Act (1861), S. 1. 1956 Cri LJ 174: AIR 1956 All 96 (SB).

——S. 17 — Offence justifying appointment of special police officers — Nature of.

The three offences mentioned in Section 17 of unlawful assembly, riot and disturbance of the peace appear to indicate that such appointment of police officers should be made only when and where the public peace or tranquillity is threatened or disturbed. Therefore, the crimes or offences must be of such a nature that public peace or tranquillity is threatened.

In 1861 when the Police Act came into force there was no Criminal Procedure Code and no provision like the present Section 107 or S. 144 of the Code of Criminal Procedure. It is, therefore, necessary that a liberal and broad construction should be given to the meaning of the words "disturbance of peace" appearing in Section 17 of the Act. The Court should not be too astute to conceive limitations on the idea of "disturbance of peace" but must remain unfettered to decide on the facts of each case and determine whether in a particular case, disturbance of peace as commonly or ordinarily understood has taken place or is apprehended.

Thus where the affidavit filed by the District Magistrate showed that there were five cases of rioting arising out of a large number of wagon breaking cases and, in fact, the local patrol party employed for duty to prevent such tampering with the railway wagons had even to resort to firing in three such cases:

Held, that the condition of "disturbance of the peace" as specified in S. 17 of the Act existed to justify the appointment of special police officers. AIR 1958 Cal 365 (368, 371) (Pt A) (Prs 13, 23).

——S. 17 — Appointments under — Who are proper persons.

As regards the persons who are primarily intended to be appointed special police officers under Section 17, the express statutory requirement under Section 19 is that they have to be residents of the locality in which the disturbance has occurred or is threatened. A non-resident therefore, clearly is not a proper person to be appointed special police officer under the section. Further, a criminal cannot be considered to be a suitable person. Appointments of criminals to be special police officers under the Police Act do not make either for efficiency or even serve the primary object of reducing the crimes mentioned in S. 17 of the Act. It may gravely imperil the morale of the people and the police alike.

Held, on facts that as the Government had appointed the petitioner describing him mistakenly as criminal but in fact he was not found to be a criminal, the appointment was not bad. Held, further that after all, what Section 17 required was that a suitable person should be appointed as special police officer and so long as he was in fact suitable, the appointment could not be had on the ground that the Government proceeded on a different basis or a mistaken view of the fact. AIR 1958 Cal 365 (370) (Pt B) (Pr 18).

——S. 17 — Appointments under, after Constitution — Validity — (Interpretation of Statutes) — (Constitution of India, Art. 372, Seventh Schedule, List 2; Entries 1, 2).

A statute is not to be regarded as a deed or document of grant. So long as a statute of competent authority and validity creates an institution and so long as the statute itself remains effective, the subsequent disappearance of the original legislative authority does not make the statute ipso facto inoperative. It is still less so when the Constitution, by Article 372 (1), expressly provides for the continuance of laws existing at the time of passing of the Constitution. A statute is perpetual unless it is expressly or by necessary implication made temporary.

Thus an order appointing certain person as a special police officer under section 17 of the Police Act, 1861, made on the 28th July, 1954, is a valid appointment although made by the Superintendent of Police and the District Magistrate subsequent to the Constitution, because at the time when the Police Act was passed full powers had already been granted to these authorities like the Superintendent of Police and the District Magistrate to make these appointments and the force and vitality of the Police Act are continued by Article 372 (1) of the Constitution. The fact that under the Constitution the subjects 'public order' and 'police' have ceased to be Central subjects and are now State subjects cannot affect the validity of the exercise of the power granted under the Central Act. AIR 1958 Cal 365 (371, 372) (Pt C) (Prs 26, 27).

——S. 17 — Validity — If contravenes Arts. 19 (1) (g) and 19 (1) (d) — (Constitution of India, Arts. 19 (1) (d), 19 (1) (g), 19 (5), 19 (6)).

In a democratic State it is a worthy obligation of a resident of a lacality to be called up for service as a special police officer to help in removing the threat or breach of the peace of the locality in which he resides. It is a civil obligation of every citizen to discharge this duty to the State which gives him security, protection and opportunity. It cannot be an unreasonable restriction on the citizen's right to carry on his trade or business under Article 19 (1) (g) of the Constitution. Similarly the right of free movement under Article 19 (1) (d) is also qualified by sub-cl. (5) of that Article which permits operation of any existing law in so far as it imposes reasonable restrictions on the exercise of such rights. Therefore, both under Article 19 (1) (d) and Art. 19 (1) (g) of the Constitution, an order under Section 17 of the Police Act by which the authorities are empowered to conscript the voluntary service of the residents to become special police officers are justified under the meaning and doctrine of reasonable restrictions. AIR 1958 Cal 365 (372) (Pt D) (Pr 27).

——Ss. 17, 19 — Appointment under, as police officer — Validity — If contravene Art. 23 (1) — (Constitution of India, Art. 23).

The words "other similar forms of forced labour" in Article 23 (1) should be construed ejusdem generis. The kind of forced labour that is contemplated in the constitutional prohibition has to be something in the nature of traffic in human beings. Even if it were permissible to hold that such conscription is a kind of similar form of forced labour within the meaning of the constitutional prohibition contained in Art. 23 (1), this forced labour of conscription is permitted by sub-article (2) of Article 23 as a kind of compulsory service for public purposes. SECTION 20

——S. 20 — Offence under U. P. Excise Act — Report made by Police Station Officer — Magistrate if can taken cognizanee of offence.

Per Roy J.: — A Station Officer in charge of a Police Station is an "Excise Officer" within the meaning of Section 3 (2) read with S. 10, Excise Act, and Section 20, Police Act does not forbid the conferment of the powers under Section 10, U. P. Excise Act on an officer in charge of a police station and such a police officer can make a complaint or report under Section 70, Excise Act. Consequently the Magistrate had jurisdiction to entertain the complaint upon the report of the station officer under Section 70 of the Act. See U. P. Excise Act (4 of 1910), S. 70. AIR 1955 NUC (All) 3600 (DB).

——Ss. 20, 23, 24 — Powers under — Station Officer — Power to report offence under — U. P. Excise Act.

The regulating of criminal procedure does not seem to be any of the objects behind the passing of the U. P. Excise Act and it cannot be said to have been passed for regulating criminal procedure. Therefore, under Section 20, a station-officer cannot exercise any authority conferred upon him under the U. P. Excise Act. But Section 20 permits him to exercise authority conferred upon him by the Police Act itself. So he can detect and bring offenders to justice and can lay any information before a Magistrate. Section 70 of the U. P. Excise Act specifically, and regardless of the provisions of the Police Act, permits a Magistrate to take cognizance of an offence on his report. It is of no consequence that he cannot validly exercise the powers of an Excise Officer; his ability to do so is not a condition precedent for his making a report, and his making a report is not necessarily exercising an Excise Officer's powers. His making a report can be treated as exercising his powers under the Police Act. 1953 All WR (HC) 680: 1954 Cr LJ 744: AIR 1954 All 342 (342) (Prs 1, 2).

——S. 23 — Applicability.

The section has to be construed as a whole and it would be wholly unwarranted to tear off a phrase or clause from its proper context and to attempt to give it a meaning which it can never bear. The clause relating to the duty of a police officer to prevent the commission of an offence does not give power which can be used by a superior officer of the police to correct an erring subordinate by appeal to the words "prevent the commission of an offence". The violation of the order passed by the superior police officer directing his subordinate to vacate the premises which he had unlawfully occupied does not come within the purview of the section. AIR 1955 NUC (Cal) 5611.

The words "Police officer" used in S. 25 is not to be considered in a strict sense but is to be given its more comprehensive and popular meaning. A member of the C. R. P. ● ——Ss. 29 and 35 — Scope — Departmental enquiry — If excluded.

Sections 29 and 35 nowhere exclude departmental enquiry. All that they lay down is that where an offence punishable under the Police Act is committed by a police officer above the rank of a constable and is to be tried by a Court of law it has to go before a First Class Magistrate. That does not mean that departmental enquiry cannot be held with respect to a matter where it is also possible to prosecute a police officer under the Police Act. Bhagat Singh v. ——S. 29 — Absence from barrack and at parade — Whether violation of duty — Proof.

Before a conviction under Section 29 can be made, it has to be proved that the police officer was guilty of any violation of duty. Where the accused who belonged to a police force was convicted for remaining absent from his barrack and at parade for certain period, the prosecution has to prove that the absence of the police officer from the barrack or at the parade was violation of some duty or wilful breach or neglect of some rule or regulation or lawful order made by competent authority. Where the defence was that the accused was detailed for duty elsewhere and as such it could not be possible for him to be present at the barrack or at the parade, this could be proved only if the register was produced. When the register was called for but it was not produced;

Held, that the prosecution did not prove if there was actually any violation of duty and the conviction could not stand. 1965 (1) Cr LJ 9: AIR 1965 Assam and Nagaland 6 (7) (Pr 3).

——S. 29 — Applicability.

——S. 29 — Sentence.

The accused who was convicted under S. 29, Police Act, appeared in the Magistrate's Court for the first time, on 29th May, 1952. There were as many as 30 hearings and the judgment was eventually delivered on 29th October, 1952. He had been discharged from police service and was employed under the District Board. In case he was sent to prison, he ran the risk of losing his present job. His character-roll showed that he was granted a commendation certificate for good work done.

Held, considering all the circumstances, that the ends of justice would be met by sentencing him to imprisonment till the rising of the Court and inflicting a penalty equivalent to one month's pay. 1955 Cr LJ 947: AIR 1955 Him Pra 29 (31) (Pt C) (Pr 7).

——Ss. 29 and 46 — Rules under S. 46, Rr. 16, 21 (1) — Police officer involved in criminal case — Suspension during pendency of case — Order to remain in police lines — Legality.

There is nothing whatever illegal if a Superintendent of Police places a subordinate Police Officer, who is accused of a criminal offence, under suspension and orders him to remain in Police lines during the pendency of the case against him, so long as the accused is given facilities for attending Court on the days when his presence is required. Although a surety is entitled to have some control over the movements of an accused, the control cannot be unlimited in extent or over a protracted period. Hence the accused is not entitled to lawfully disobey such an order and plead that he was forced to place himself at the disposal of the person who had stood surety for him in connection with his bail in the criminal case. ——S. 29 — Proceedings under for contravention of R. 6 of Rajasthan Government Servants and Pensioners Conduct Rules, can be taken — Rajasthan Government Servants and Pensioners Conduct Rules, R. 6 — General Clauses Act (1897), Section 51.

Police constables can be proceeded against under S. 29 Police Act, for the contravention of R. 6 of the Rajasthan Government Servants and Pensioners Conduct Rules, 1949.

The use of the words 'any rule or regulation' in S. 29, in the absence of any definition of "rule and regulation" in the Police Act, cannot be interpreted to refer to the rules that may be framed under the Police Act only. It will be proper to interpret them in terms of the provisions of the General Clauses Act and to extend them to all rules regulating the conduct of police servants that have been framed by any competent authority under any law.

The words "competent authority" as occurring in S. 29 also cannot be confined only to the Inspector General of Police. A competent authority in S. 29 has been used only in connection with lawful orders, the violation of which is sought to be punished under S. 29. It will be narrowly interpreting S. 29 to confine a rule or regulation to only such rule or regulation as may be framed by the Inspector General of Police, under S. 12 of the Act. 1960 Raj LW 598: ILR (1960) 10 Raj 1407.

2. Jurisdiction.

——S. 29 — Complaint under — Jurisdiction to take cognizance — Additional Sub-Divisional Magistrate has jurisdiction under S. 190, of Criminal P. C. in spite of Para. 486-II of U. P. Police Regulations — Police Act no bar — Nature of U. P. Police Regulations.

Under the Police Act there exists no bar to the taking cognizance by a Magistrate of a complaint of an offence under S. 29 of the Police Act. Consequently Section 190 of Criminal P. C. gives jurisdiction to a Magistrate as detailed thereunder to take cognizance of an offence under S. 29, of the Police Act. The Additional Sub-Divisional Magistrate is a Magistrate, though not the District Magistrate within the meaning of Section 1, of the Police Act and, therefore, has jurisdiction to try an offence under S. 29 of Police Act. The inference that any Magistrate can try an offence under S. 29 of the Police Act can be drawn from Ss. 29 and 35 of the Police Act. When the Police Act makes a clear provision that the offence under S. 29 of the Act can be tried by any Magistrate then the U. P. Police Regulations including Para. 486, II thereof even if framed under S. 46 of the Police Act, cannot take away the jurisdiction of the Magistrate which was conferred on him by the Legislature. Any rule repugnant to the enactment is void and ineffective. It is a different thing that the rule may be treated as an administrative order for the guidance of police officers. Such a rule cannot have the force of law and, in any case cannot take away the jurisdiction of Magistrates conferred on them under the general law and also under Ss. 29 and 35 of the Act. 1965 (2) Cri LJ 330: AIR 1965 All 415 (416) (Pt A) (Prs 5, 6, 7).

3. Lawful order by competent authority.

——S. 29 — "Any rule or regulation made by competent authority" — Interpretation — Expression refers not only to rules made under the Act such as rules made by I. G. of Police under S. 12 or by State Government under S. 46 — It refers also to rules and regulations in general without such restriction—U. P. Government Servants' Conduct Rules made by the Governor in exercise of powers conferred by proviso to Article 309 of the Constitution are rules made by competent authority and come within scope of S. 29 — Hence breach of R. 25 of those Rules by a Police Officer is punishable under that section. ——S. 29 — Lawful order — Order by Superintendent of Police confining a Sub-Inspector to quarters for more than fifteen days — Order contravenes Para. 478 of the Police Regulations, Uttar Pradesh and is not a lawful order — Disobedience does not entail conviction under Section 29. (1957) 1 Lab LJ 265: 1956 All WR (HC) 265: 1956 All LJ 181.

——S. 29 — Applicability — Foot-constable performing duties of drill instructor — Disobedience to lawful orders of superior authority to perform guard duty — Offence — Punjab Police Rules, Ch. 17, Rr. 17, 1.

The accused who was appointed as a foot-constable was asked to perform the duties of drill instructor in accordance with R. 17 (1), Ch. 17, Punjab Police Rules. The accused on being asked to perform the duties of a guard refused to do so on ground that he was a drill instructor and not an ordinary constable. The accused was prosecuted under S. 29, Police Act.

Held, that the accused was guilty of the offence under S. 29, Police Act. The allotment of duties is necessarily a matter within the discretion of the higher authorities. The proper course for him would have been to perform the duty allotted to him and in case he felt aggrieved, he could have made a representation to the higher authorities. There was no justification for him to refuse to perform the duties allotted to him. 1955 Cri LJ 947: AIR 1955 Him Pra 29 (31) (Pt A) (Prs 3, 6).

Sub-section (1) is not intended to control every-day conduct and something which happens every day is not an occasion. Where local parties are at war and some incident or other has brought factious felling to a boil, the situation may be described as an "occasion" but the mere existence of factions and the coming into being of a protracted state of what may be called cold war between factions would not be an "occasion" within the meaning of the sub-section. ——S. 30 — Construction — Thoroughfare — Meaning of.

Balakrishna Aiyar, J.:— The essential idea of a thoroughfare is the right of the public to pass and repass over it. A place to which the public are merely entitled to go and over which they have no right of way is not a thoroughfare. There may be thoroughfares across a public place, but nevertheless a thoroughfare is essentially different from a public place. In order to constitute a thoroughfare it is not however, essential that the public should have a right to ride or drive over it. AIR 1933 All 612; AIR 1951 Orissa 51, Rel. on.

Chandra Reddy, J.:— The term "thoroughfare" can include a public place which serves as a passage for the public. But every place of public resort cannot be a thoroughfare for purposes of S. 30 of the Act. It is only a place which is used by the public for passing from one place to another that will attract the provisions of S. 30 and the expression "thoroughfare" is not of such wide connotation as to include in its scope every place to which the public have a right to resort. AIR 1933 All 612; AIR 1951 Orissa 51, Rel. on. Ex. P. Ryan, (1889) 20 NS WLR 274, Distinguished. (1953) 2 MLJ 602: 66 Mad LW 877: 1954 Cr LJ 290: 1953 Mad WN 562: ILR (1954) Mad 372: AIR 1954 Mad 249 (252, 256) (Pt B) (Prs 6, 23) (DB).

——S. 30 — Issue of licence.

Balakrishna Aiyar, J.:— The Superintendent may, subject to the conditions laid down in sub-sections (2) and (3) require those who convene an assembly or take out a procession to obtain a licence from him. In that licence he may lay down detailed conditions for the conduct of the assembly or procession. So long as the conditions imposed are bona fide and fairly calculated to attain the purpose of preserving law and order and are not arbitrary or capricious, the Superintendent has an ample measure of discretion in the matter. (1953) 2 MLJ 602: 66 Mad LW 877: 1954 Cr LJ 290: 1953 Mad WN 562: ILR (1954) Mad 372: AIR 1954 Mad 249 (252) (Pt C) (Pr 7) (DB).

——S. 30 — Issue of notification — Duty of Police Officer.

The word used in the sub-section is "judgment" and not "apprehend" or "reason to apprehend" and it has a firmer connotation which requires that the Magistrate of the district or sub-division must have applied his mind to the matter and come to the considered conclusion that the assembly or procession if uncontrolled is likely to cause a breach of the peace before the police officers could exercise the power under sub-section (2). (1953) 2 MLJ 602: 66 Mad LW 877: 1954 Cr LJ 290: 1953 Mad WN 562: ILR (1954) Mad 372: AIR 1954 Mad 249 (252, 256) (Pt D) (Prs 8, 26) (DB).

——S. 30 (2) — Interpretation of.

Balakrishna Aiyar, J.:— The clause "which would, in the judgment of the Magistrate of the District, or of the sub-division of a district, if uncontrolled, be likely to cause a breach of the peace in the sub-section governs not only the word "procession" occurring immediately before it but qualifies also the word "assembly" occurring a little earlier. (1953) 2 MLJ 602: 66 Mad LW 877: 1954 Cr LJ 290: 1953 Mad WN 562: ILR (1954) Mad 372: AIR 1954 Mad 249 (252) (Pt E) (Pr 8) (DB).

——S. 30 — Scope — Forbidding procession — Legality.

Balakrishna Aiyar, J.:— As the section stands, the expression "in any such road, street or thoroughfare" applies only to the word "assembly". That being so a procession in any public place whether the place is a street, road, thorough fare or not—would be covered by the second sub-section. A procession, however, is only, an assembly in motion; an assembly that consciously intends to go from one place to another or to a place and back or may be even round a place. When the assembly becomes a procession, then even if it is not on a public road, street or thoroughfare it would become subject to control under sub-section (2). (1953) 2 MLJ 602: 66 Mad LW 877: 1952 Cr LJ 290: 1953 Mad WN 562: ILR (1954) Mad 372: AIR 1954 Mad 249 (252) (Pt F) (Pr 8) (DB).

——S. 30 — Issue of notification — Powers of Police.

Balakrishna Aiyar, J.:— In order to enable the Superintendent to act under sub-section (2) he must be satisfied on certain points. One is that any person or class of persons intend to collect an assembly or take out a procession. It is of course not necessary that he should know the names of the promoters. The requirements of the sub-section would be met if he is satisfied that a certain class of persons in a locality intended to take out a procession. But, he must be satisfied that they intend to do so. The powers conferred by the sub-section is not exhausted in respect of any occasion merely because it has been used in respect of a particular assembly or a procession. It can be used on the same occasion in respect of any number of assemblies or processions. The sub-section however does not contemplate a general order over a prolonged stretch of time so as to take in assemblies and processions which at the time the order is issued nobody has even thought of collecting or forming. What the sub-section visualises is something proximate, something concrete, some particular assembly or assemblies, some particular procession or processions. It does not empower a Superintendent to lay down a general interdict.

Chandra Reddi, J.:— According to sub-section (2) the officer concerned should be satisfied that any person or class of persons were intending to convene or collect a assembly or form a procession. The condition precedent to the promulgation of the order under this sub-section is a meeting or a procession in contemplation. It is something immediate or in prospect that is envisaged in the sub-section and not what is remote or something likely to happen in distant future. The object in requiring a licence to be obtained in a given situation is to direct the conduct of all the assemblies and processions on the public roads or in the public streets or in the thoroughfares in the interest of traffic and maintenance of order in those places by laying down conditions which have to be conformed to by the licensee. The police officers enumerated in the section have to deal with each case as it arises by applying their mind to it. A separate order must be passed as and when the police officer is satisfied that a public meeting is going to be convened or a procession is going to be taken out. Under S. 30 (2) it is utterly beyond the power of either the District or the Assistant District Superintendent of Police to pass an order which can be in operation for a particular period. ——S. 30 — Issue of notification — Procedure.

Balakrishna Aiyar, J.:— The notice may be general or special, depending upon the circumstances of the case. Where the names and addresses of the persons intending to convene an assembly or promote a procession are known it will be more appropriate to issue a special notice, but where the persons intending to convene an assembly or promote a procession belonging to a class of persons, upon every one of whom it may not be practicable to serve a special notice, or where it is likely that a particular individual intending to collect an assembly or promote a procession is likely to evade the notice general notice may be issued. In the licences which he issues the Superintendent may lay down detailed conditions for the conduct of the assembly or procession. (1953) 2 MLJ 602: 66 Mad LW 877: 1954 Cr LJ 290: 1953 Mad WN 562: ILR (1954) Mad 372: AIR 1954 Mad 249 (252) (Pt H) (Pr 8) (DB).

——S. 30 — Thoroughfare — Meaning — Comparison with public place — Words and Phrases.

If people gather as a matter of right in a particular place it may become a public place but it does not necessarily follow that the place is a thoroughfare". For a place to be thoroughfare there must be unobstructed transit. That is to say, the place must be used as a passage for the people to pass through. A "thoroughfare" is a wider expression than a "road" or a "street" but it is narrower than a "public place".

The foot of a hill close to a tank in the absence of evidence that it was used as a path by the public, cannot be held to be a thoroughfare even assuming that the public had a right to gather there. ILR (1950) Cut 584: AIR 1951 Orissa 51 (52, 53) (Prs 5, 7) (DB)

——S. 30 (1) — Scope — Police have no power to ban processions.

Sub-section (1) of S. 30 gives the Police power to control and regulate processions; but the Police have no power thereunder to forbid or to ban the procession. The power to control does not include the power to forbid. As the promulgation banning the procession is ultra vires the powers of the police under S. 30 (1), the accused committed no offence by violating it. ——Ss. 30 (2), 32 — Notification under — Validity of — General order issued by D. S. P. — Propriety.

Where a notification issued under S. 30 (2) of the Police Act did not ban or forbid any procession absolutely but only required that persons intending to do so should apply 3 days prior to taking out of the procession along the public streets or thoroughfares, setting out therein the particulars mentioned in the notice, it could not be said that the notice contained anything in excess of the powers given to Superintendent of Police under S. 30 (2) of the Police Act, especially when the notice was issued after consulting the District Magistrate, who was of the opinion that such procession might cause breach of the peace. The notice issued in the circumstances could not be said to be in any way illegal. AIR 1962 Pat 244, Dist. Further a general notification issued by the Superintendent under the section is not invalid for the words of the section are sufficiently general to enable the Superintendent of Police to issue a general notification containing prohibition against convening or collecting assemblies or directing or promoting processions without licence. The terms of section are also wide enough to cover a prohibition without any limit of time. If the person or persons against whom the notice is directed convenes or convene or collects or collect an assembly or promotes or directs a procession without license, he or they will be punishable under S. 32 of the Act. (1964) 2 Cri LJ 366: AIR 1964 Tripura 52 (53) (Pt A) (Prs 9, 12).

——S. 30 (2) — Notification under regulating processions and assemblies — Can be regarded as 'law'.

When a notification is issued by an Executive Authority in exercise of a power conferred by statute, that notification is as much a part of the law, as if it had been incorporated within the body of the statute at the time of its enactment. The command is in every respect a command by the appropriate legislative authority. In the instant case, as the notification was in compliance with Section 30, sub-s. (2) of the Police Act, it was a law and certainly a legal process. AIR 1923 Pat 1 (FB), Foll. 1964 (2) Cr LJ 366: AIR 1964 Tripura 52 (54) (Pt B) (Pr 13).

——S. 30 (2) — Offence under — Essentials of.

In order to bring an offence within the ambit of S. 30 (2) the prosecution must prove that the accused was directing or promoting the procession. To be an ordinary member of the procession, or at the head of the procession is no offence under S. 30 (2). 1964 (2) Cr LJ 366: AIR 1964 Tripura 52 (54) (Pt D) (Pr 14).

——S. 31 — "Thoroughfare" — Essentials of — "Public place" — When becomes thoroughfare — Proof requisite.

A "thoroughfare" is a wider term than a "road" or "street," but is narrower than a "public place". While a thoroughfare may be a public place the converse is not always true or correct. If people gather as a matter of right in a particular place, it may become a public place, but it does not necessarily follow that it is a thoroughfare. To be a thoroughfare it must be capable of unobstructed transit. That is to say, the place must be used as a passage for people to pass through. Every public place, therefore, will not necessarily become a thoroughfare unless the place is used as a passage for people to pass through. Even if it be assumed that a place such as the foot of a hill, near a temple and a tank, is a public place where people have a right to collect or gather, it cannot be held to be a thoroughfare in the absence of evidence that it was actually used as a path by the members of the public. ILR (1950) Cut 584: AIR 1951 Orissa 51 (52, 53) (Prs 5, 7) (DB).

——S. 34 — Penal Code (1860), Ss. 352, 353 — Applicability — Resistance to arrest by police officer without warrant — Offence.

Section 34 of the Police Act does not give any authority to the Police Officer to pursue the petitioners and arrest them, even though no such offence as alleged or contemplated by Section 34 of the Act was said to have been committed by them within his view.

If, therefore, in such a case the petitioners resist the questioning by the police officer or the attempt to arrest them, in course of which the police officer is alleged to have received some injuries on his person, the petitioners cannot be held guilty of any offence within the meaning of Section 353 or 352 of the Penal Code. ILR (1958) 10 Assam 73: 1960 Cr LJ 1420: AIR 1960 Assam 206 (206) (Pr 2).

——S. 34, Third — Offence under — Proof — Accused parking cycle in front of shop abutting on wide road — Act itself held not sufficient for raising inference of obstruction, etc.

For conviction under Section 34-third, it is not sufficient merely to prove that a cattle or conveyance had been kept standing on a public road, place or thoroughfare for an unreasonable length of time, but the prosecution has further to prove that the act complained of had caused obstruction and inconvenience, annoyance, risk, danger or damage. In some cases, the act complained of may be such from which an inference of annoyance, inconvenience or obstruction, etc., can well be raised and no further evidence would be necessary to prove that the conduct attributed to the person complained against had resulted in inconvenience or annoyance or risk, but in other cases evidence has to be adduced to prove that the act complained of had occasioned inconvenience, annoyance, etc., to the residents or passengers. The nature of the act may be relevant in determining whether it had caused inconvenience or annoyance, etc., to the public. Where a cycle was parked in front of the shop of the accused which abutted on a wide road the case is not of that type in which an inference of obstruction or annoyance, etc., can be raised from the very act itself. ● ——Ss. 35 and 29 — Scope — Sections do not exclude departmental enquiry. See Police Act (1861), S. 29. 1960 Cri LJ 1671: AIR 1960 SC 1210.

● ——Ss. 35, 1, 17, 28, 29 — Magistrate and officer exercising powers of Magistrate— Difference — (Words and Phrases).

The words "an officer exercising the powers of a Magistrate" in Section 35 refer only to a Magistrate of the First class. Hence Section 35 is not rendered redundant by the provisions of Sections 28 and 29. See Police Act (1861), S. 1. 1956 Cri LJ 174: AIR 1956 All 96 (SB).

● ——S. 35 — Applicability and scope — Departmental enquiries — 'Charge,' meaning of — (Words and Phrases — 'Charge').

Section 35 as it originally stood referred to judicial trials before a Magistrate and did not refer to departmental enquiries by the police. By the deletion of the words at the beginning of the Section in 1882 the Legislature did not intend to change the very basis of the section, that is to say, instead of its applying to a judicial trial before a Magistrate it should be made to apply not only to judicial trials but also to departmental enquiries and trials. The word 'charge' in S. 35 must retain the meaning which it had before the section was amended. Mahendra Singh v. State of U. P., 1956 Cr LJ 174: (1955) 2 Lab LJ 750: 1955 All LJ 643: 1955 All WR (HC) 548: ILR (1956) 1 All 178: AIR 1956 All 96 (98) (Pt D) (Prs 8, 10) (SB).

——S. 35 — Scope — Conflict with S. 7 — Effect — After amendment, provisions of Section 35 become contradictory to provisions of S. 7 — Effect should be given to Section 7 in preference to Section 35. See Police Act (1861) (as amended by Act (10 of 1882), S. 7). AIR 1955 All 400.

——S. 35 — Applicability — Proceedings under Section 7 and R. 861 — Police Regulations — Section 35 is not attracted. See Police Act (1861), S. 7. AIR 1955 Cal 183.

——S. 35 — Sections 7 and 35 are different in their scope and application. The proceedings are not alternative but cumulative. There is no illegality in resorting to either or both proceedings. Even when charges laid against a person are of a serious nature, departmental proceedings can be resorted to. See Police Act (1861), S. 7 AIR 1954 Cal 60 (DB).

——S. 35 — Scope and applicability.

Section 35, Police Act, does not require that every stage of the enquiry should be conducted by the Inspector-General himself. If at any stage of the enquiry the Inspector-General of Police participates in the enquiry as to the charges and comes to a decision as to the charges there is sufficient compliance with S. 35. Until the proceedings come to a close it cannot be stated whether Section 35 has not been substantially complied with or not. Section 35 was intended to apply to a judicial enquiry into the charges and not to enquiries in the nature of departmental proceedings.

Consequently, where the departmental proceedings against a police Sub-Inspector have been initiated by a Sub-Divisional Officer of the Police at the instance of the Inspector-General of Police and have reached the preliminary stage of framing charges, they cannot be declared to be illegal or void. AIR 1951 Cal 179 (181) (Pt A) (Pr 11).

——S. 35 — Scope and object.

Section 35 contemplates a criminal charge against a Police Officer and the object of this section is to prevent a Magistrate of the 2nd or 3rd Class enquiring into offences against Police Officers above the rank of a constable. This section has no relevance to a departmental enquiry to which a Police Officer is subjected. ILR (1956) Punj 361: AIR 1956 Punj 102 (104) (Pt B) (Pr 9).

——S. 35 — Applicability to departmental enquiries.

Section 35 of the Police Act does not deal with departmental enquiries but must be read 'ejusdem generis' with the offences mentioned in Ss. 28 and 29 of the Police Act. The words 'officer exercising the powers of a Magistrate' have been defined to mean a 'Magistrate of the first class' in Section 3 (2), Criminal P. C. which is an Act later than the Police Act, and therefore Section 35 was intended to apply to a judicial enquiry into charges and not to enquiry in the nature of departmental proceedings. AIR 1951 Cal 179 and AIR 1954 Cal 60, Rel. on. ILR (1955) Punj 934: AIR 1955 Punj 118 (120) (Pt C) (Pr 6).

——S. 35 — Applicability to departmental enquiries — Section 35 is intended for judicial enquiries into charges under the Act and not to departmental enquiries which fall within the scope of Section 7 and which are to be held subject to the provisions of Art. 311 of the Constitution. AIR 1951 Cal 179, Rel. on. See Criminal P. C. (1898), S. 197. 1957 Cr LJ 394: AIR 1957 Tripura 18.

——Ss. 42, 36 — Prosecution under S. 218, Penal Code of Police Officer — Limitation prescribed by Section 42 has no application.

The period of three months prescribed for commencing a prosecution under this section is only with respect to prosecution of a person for something done or intended to be done by him under the provisions of the Police Act or under general police powers given by the Act. S. 42 does not apply to prosecutions against any person for anything done under the provisions of any other Act or under Police powers conferred under any other Act. A combined reading of the provisions of Sections 42 and 36 leads to the conclusion that Section 42 only applies to a prosecution against a person for an offence committed under the Police Act. Section 44 imposes a duty on every officer in charge of a Police Station to keep a General Diary in such form as prescribed. If the officer does not discharge his duty in the matter of keeping a regular diary, he commits an offence under Section 29 of the Act. If he is prosecuted for such an offence, under Section 42, it should be done within the time laid down thereunder but where the prosecution is for an offence under Section 218 of the Penal Code which is an offence under a different Act and for which a much higher punishment is prescribed by reason of Section 3€ of the Police Act, S. 42 cannot apply. ——S. 42 — S. 42 how much repealed.

Section 42, Police Act, 1861, was amended in part by the Limitation Act, 1871. But the first schedule to that Limitation Act makes it clear that only so much of Section 42 was repealed as relates to the limitation of suits. The portion of the section relating to prosecutions was allowed to remain unaltered. ('51) 53 PLR 124: 52 Cri LJ 1511: ILR (1951) Punj 272: AIR 1951 Punj 135 (137) (Pt C) (Pr 7) (DB).

——S. 42 — Applicability and scope.

Section 42 does not have any application with regard to prosecutions arising out of the exercise of powers under Criminal P. C. It is only with respect to actions and prosecutions against a police officer for something done or intended to be done by him under the provisions of the Police Act or under the general police powers given by the Act that Section 42 can come into play and not otherwise. SECTION 44

——S. 44 — U. P. Police Regulations, Reg. 295 (14) and (15) — Impression gathered or circumstances ascertained by police officer at spot are not required to be entered in general diary — They are not relevant facts under Section 35, Evidence Act and hence not admissible in evidence — Criminal P. C. (1898), S. 172 — Evidence Act (1872), S. 35.

Section 35 of Evidence Act says that an entry in any public or official book, register or record made by a public servant in the discharge of his official duty is itself a relevant fact. It is necessary that the entry must be made by a public servant in the discharge of his official duty. The making of an entry in a diary is enjoined on a police officer by Section 44 of the Police Act. But that section as well as the Regulations framed thereunder mention the specific matters which are to be recorded in the general diary. If a matter which is not covered by the provisions of Section 44 of the Police Act or Regulation 295 is nonetheless entered in the general diary it will not be an entry made in the discharge of the official duty. The impression gathered or the circumstances ascertained by a police officer at the spot are not required to be entered in the general diary and as such they will not be relevant facts under Section 35 of the Evidence Act. These matters are appropriately to be mentioned in the diary of the case under Section 172, Cr. P. C. Such matters have been specifically prohibited under Section 172, Cr. P C. from being used as evidence. Hence even though such matters have been recorded not in the diary of the case but in the general diary yet since they properly fall within the purview of Section 172 the prohibition will apply and they cannot be used as evidence in that case. There is well known principles laid down for distinguishing between a tax and a fee. ——Ss. 9 and 10 — Jurisdiction of High Court at Madras under — Nature and scope of — French Criminal Law — Property stolen within the French Territory and concealment in a foreign territory — Jurisdiction of French Courts to try the offence.

Under S. 180 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, a person accused of receiving or retaining stolen goods can be tried either by the Court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction the goods were stolen or by the Court within whose jurisdiction such goods were dishonestly received or retained. Under the French Law a person cannot be tried by Courts within the French Settlements for concealment of stolen property outside the territorial limits. Still where the articles are removed from French Territory by a stranger, which are or have been subject of theft in French territory, French tribunals will have jurisdiction to take cognizance of both the theft and the receipt of the stolen goods. Under Ss. 9 and 10 of the Pondicherry (Administration) Act, 1962 the High Court at Madras is not merely clothed with the powers of cessation but is vested with a general appellate jurisdiction. Hence the High Court at Madras has all the powers of an ordinary Court of criminal jurisdiction in relation to an appeal from Pondicherry and can, in suitable cases, reduce the sentence in the interests of justice. 1965 (2) Cri LJ 105: 1965 Mad WN 275: (1965) 2 MLJ 31: ILR (1964) 2 Mad 290: 1965 MLJ (Cr) 474: AIR 1965 Mad 329 (330, 331) (Pts A, B) (Prs 3, 6) (DB).

Under Ss. 9 and 10 of the Pondicherry (Administration) Act, the High Court at Madras has jurisdiction to entertain revision under S. 439 of the Criminal P. C. from Pondicherry Courts. Section 4 (1) (r) of the Criminal Procedure Code vests a judicial discretion in the Court to permit any other person to act in the proceedings in a proper case. This judicial discretion is to be exercised by Courts in Pondicherry without being influenced by any Arrete issued in Pondicherry. An Arrete has no doubt the force of law within its own limit, but it cannot take away or abrogate the judicial discretion vested in Courts under S. 4 (1) (r) of the Criminal P. C. which has been extended to Pondicherry.

An Advocate of Madras State has no vested right to appear and plead before the Courts in Pondicherry State. Neither the earlier Bar Councils Act nor the recent Advocates Act has been made applicable to Pondicherry State and there is no question of fundamental right under the Constitution either. (1964) 2 MLJ 194: 77 Mad LW 132: (1964) MLJ (Cr) 524: ILR (1964) 2 Mad 255.

——S. 10 — Conviction in absence of legal evidence — Power of Court to interfere in appeal — Dalloz Repertoive Pratique, Art. 694.

It is a cardinal principle of all systems of criminal jurisprudence, including French Criminal jurisprudence, that suspicion cannot displace proof, and that guilt cannot be inferred by guess work of any kind. Where a conviction is based on material which is totally destitute of legal elements of the crime, the High Court under powers in cessation, even apart from Section 10, can interfere in appeal. 77 Mad LW 403: (1964) 2 Mad LJ 261: ILR (1964) 2 Mad 811: 1964 Mad WN 426: 1965 (2) Cri LJ 224: AIR 1965 Mad 351 (352) (Pr 4) (DB).

Held, that the enquiry was not made in accordance with the regulations governing departmental enquiries laid down in Posts and Telegraphs Manual, Vol. II and therefore, the order of removal could not be upheld. There was breach of Regulation 12-C (b) (2) as the Enquiring Authority failed to record the evidence of witnesses in support of the charges and afford opportunity to the petitioner to cross-examine them. Cross-examination cannot be refused on the ground that no useful purpose would be served thereby. Further, the manner in which a witness was allowed to participate in the enquiry at the time of interview was not proper. He was only a witness and not an enquiring Officer. The Enquiring Officer was in error in combining the notice to show cause against the proposed punishment of dismissal with the charge-sheet Regulation 12-C (c) should have been strictly observed. 1957 Jab LJ 52: AIR 1957 Madh Pra 52 (54) (Pt B) (Prs 10, 11, 12).

——Vol. 2, Regns. 17 and 21 — "Investigation" — Meaning of — Employee, when may be placed under suspension.

The "investigation" referred to in Regulation 17 of the General Regulations contained in Posts and Telegraphs Manual, Vol. II, embraces within its scope "any investigation" whether it is being conducted in a Court or by the Police or by the officers of the department concerned. It is clear from this Regulation that it is only when an investigation is actually pending that the employee whose conduct is being investigated can be kept under suspension.

Where a postal employee is suspended on his arrest by the police on charges under I. P. Code, the order of suspension spends its force the moment he is discharged by the Magistrate to whom he is sent up for trial. He cannot subsequently be kept validly under suspension by virtue of that order although some time after his discharge by the Magistrate fresh criminal proceedings are started against him. In the absence of a fresh order of suspension, the continuance of the employee under suspension after his discharge by the Magistrate, is not warranted. (1952) 56 CWN 676: AIR 1953 Cal 504 (505) (Pt C) (Prs 11, 12).

The Posts and Telegraphs Manual, General Regulations, are merely departmental instructions and have no statutory 'authority'. In any event there is nothing in Regulation 149-A which could prevent the authorities from proceeding with the departmental proceedings notwithstanding that the criminal case ended in a discharge. 58 Cal WN 492: AIR 1955 Cal 166 (168) (Pt A) (Pr 2).

• ——Ss. 3 (a) and 52 — 'In course of transaction by post" — Meaning — Delay in delivery of postal article — Not sufficient to hold that article has ceased to be in course of transmission.

The mere fact that there is even a delay of several months in delivering a postal article to the addressee would not mean that the article had ceased to be 'in course of transmission'. The definition in Section 3 (a) clearly lays down that until an article despatched by post is delivered or can be said to be delivered it will be deemed to be 'in course of transmission'. ——Ss. 6 and 30 — Envelope containing railway receipt sent by V. P. P. not delivered to addressee but was returned to sender in damaged condition, with R/R missing from it — Central Government is protected under Section 6 and cannot be made liable for loss — AIR 1960 All 672, Dissented from. AIR 1965 All 184 (186) (Pt A) Pr 10).

——S. 6 — Liability of Post Office — V. P. Article not delivered to addressee and not traceable — Presumption.

Section 6 of the Post Office Act providing that Government shall not be liable for loss, damage, non-delivery or misdelivery of postal articles entrusted to its charge was intended by the legislature to serve as shield for the protection of the Post Office and its officials in the legitimate discharge of their functions, but the shield cannot be converted into a weapon of inequity in the hands of Government Department enjoying a monopoly of an essential service. Apart from its liability under the Post Office Act, Government cannot repudiate its responsibility for the property of any person under its custody and control, except to the extent that it has been exempted under the Act. But the exemptions do not give it the right to do what it likes with the articles entrusted to its care.

Where the V. P. article was not delivered to the addressee there is no question of the sender being entitled to a decree for money had and received on his behalf. The disappearance of a postal article raises no presumption that it has been 'lost' within the meaning of Section 6. In the absence of further evidence, the Court will hold that it is just as likely as not that the missing articles have been misappropriated by some one within the department.

Where it was admitted that the parcel was never delivered to the addressee it must be held that the Government department cannot claim that it functioned in a normal manner. The failure to return the article to the sender speaks for itself and displaces the presumption that the post office functioned in a normal manner. The post office must give a detailed account of what happened to the article from the date when it was entrusted to its custody to the date when it claims to have lost possession of it. The Court will make the maximum presumption against it for its failure to disclose facts. (1722)1 Str. 505, Relied on. Where it has not so disclosed, the post office is liable to the sender for the value of the article which was entrusted to its care and in respect of which it cannot claim exemption under S. 6. AIR 1960 All 672 (682, 683) (Pt C) (Prs 38, 40 to 44).

——S. 6 — Loss — Meaning of.

Loss in Section 6 does not mean pecuniary or other loss by the owner of the goods though being wrongfully deprived of the possession or enjoyment thereof but means loss by the postal department of the Government and such loss occurs whenever the department involuntarily or through inadvertence loses possession of the goods and for the time being is unable to trace them.

In this view, the Government of India cannot escape liability to pay compensation for loss caused by non-delivery of an article it received for carriage and delivery where the article has not been proved to be lost by the Government 59 Cal WN 254: AIR 1955 Cal 371 (372) (Prs 8, 9) (DB).

——Ss. 6 and 33 — Liability of Post Office — Damage to insured postal article — Liability is not contractual but purely statutory — Post Office is not common carrier — Limitation — Limitation Act (1908), Art. 30 or 31 cannot apply. See Post Office Act (1898), S. 33. AIR 1965 Orissa 118 (DB).

——S. 6 — Applicability — Insured parcel containing attar bottles — Damage due to leakage — Exemption from liability — Post Office Rules (1933), Rr. 35, 76 and 81 — Scope of.

Rule 35 and the other connected rules in Part II deal with ordinary postal parcels. First Section of Part IV from Rule 72 to Rule 83-A deals with insurance of Inland postal articles. For the purposes of Rule 81, method of packing that is to be considered is the manner of packing as provided in the section relating to insurance of inland postal articles. The manner of packing in such cases is provided for in Clause (2) of Rule 76 and where packing is improper and insecure having regard to the provisions of that clause, the defendant is absolved from liability under Clause (e) of Rule 81. In consideration of Clause (e) of Rule 81, a rule like Rule 35 cannot be picked up from another part of the rules not connected with rules on insurance of postal articles and then used to show that there is no liability under Clause (e) of the Rule 81. So what has to be seen for the application of Cl. (e) of Rule 81 is whether the packing was in accordance with Cl. (2) of Rule 76.

An insured parcel containing attar bottles packed securely in accordance with provisions of Rule 76 (2) was despatched from Delhi to Bombay where it reached in a leaking condition. The plaintiff refused to take delivery as the postal authorities were not prepared to give open delivery after preparing an inventory with a complete and accurate measure of the contents of the bottles. The plaintiff sued the Union of India for damages.

Held, that the defendant was not exempt from liability under Rule 81, Post Office Rules. Since the packing was neither improper nor insecure Clause (e) of Rule 81 had no application. So also the covers or seals of the parcels being visibly damaged, R. 81 (f) had also no application. The plaintiff was therefore entitled to the damages claimed by him. ILR (1958) Punj 367: AIR 1958 Punj 174 (176) (Prs 5, 6) (DB).

——Ss. 7 and 9 and Sch. I — Post Office Rules, R. 30 — Application for registration or renewal of registration as newspaper — Conditions — Subjective satisfaction of exeecutive authority — If justiciable by Court — Constitution of India, Art. 226 — Interference with administrative or executive order — Grounds — Mandamus.

An application for registration as registered newspapers as also an application for renewal of registration must fulfil all the provisions of sub-clause (2) of Section 9 and the conditions in sub cls. (1) and (2) of Rule 30. As regards the question of right of hearing or an obligation to state reasons for any decision made for an appeal, the question is left to be determined by subjective satisfaction of the executive authority. Even though a publication, periodical, etc., falling under the connotation of word newspaper as mentioned in sub-section (2) of Section 9 are entitled to the right of transmission at concessional rates as registered newspaper, the question of enforcement of such right is left for the determination and final disposal of the Post Master General by reason of the provisions in the statutory rules and the note under R. 30 (3).

The 'enquiries' referred to in Rule 30 (3) are made departmentally and for satisfaction of the authority. In a matter left to be determined by executive discretion and satisfaction there is no question of principles of natural justice being observed.

Where the application for renewal of registration as newspaper is refused by the Post Master General on stated grounds the only grounds on which a court of law woud be justified in interfering with the decision of the executive authority are that the decision is mala fide, arbitrary or capricious or altogether extraneous and outside the purpose of the Act. The decision of the Post Master General being purely administrative and ministerial the petitioner is not entitled to any writ of mandamus unless the decision is extraneous to the purpose of the Act. 62 Bom LR 832: 1960 Nag LJ 717: AIR 1961 Bom 105 (108, 109, 110, 111) (Pt A) (Prs 14, 15, 18, 23, 28).

——S. 9 — Rules under R. 30 — Condition for registration of a publication as a newspaper — Powers of Post Master-General.

From a reading of Rule 30 (5) along with Section 9 it is clear that the conditions specified in sub-section (2) of Section 9 referred to in that rule only mean the conditions, namely:—(a) that it is published in numbers at intervals of not more than thirty-one days: and (b) that it has a bona fide list of subscribers. If any of these two conditions cease to continue to be fulfilled the registration may be cancelled. The Post Master-General may have to enter into an enquiry as regards the nature of the contents of the periodical when the first registration is granted or when the renewal application is made after the expiry of the period of the first registration.

But there is no such power given to the Post Master-General when the application for renewal has been made within time under Rule 30, sub-rule (3), with the note added by order, dated 3-1-1955. It is inconceivable that a power should be given to successive Post Master-General to take different view regarding the contents of a periodical every time when the period of registration is about to expire.

There is no power in the Post Master-General to refuse the renewal of registration on the ground that in his opinion the contents of the magazine did not fulfil the requirements of Section 9 (2). ILR (1957) 2 All 328: AIR 1957 All 662 (666) (Pt B) (Prs 12, 14).

——S. 9 (2) — Periodical when to be deemed as newspaper — Articles relating to political or other news or to other current topics — Meaning of.

It is not possible to give any exhaustive meaning of the words 'articles relating to political or other news or to other current topics'. The definition of a newspaper in Section 9 is obviously larger in its import than the dictionary meaning of the word "Newspaper" but it is not possible to give the full scope of the word "newspaper" as defined in Section 9 (2). Each periodical will have to be examined and it may be possible to say on examination whether it comes within the definition of a newspaper or not. ILR (1957) 2 All 328: AIR 1957 All 662 (666) (Pt C) (Pr 14).

——S. 9 (2) — "Current topics" — Meaning of — (Words and Phrases).

A current topic necessarily implies a topic relating to matters on events which are current. The words "current topics" do not necessarily imply that it must relate to current events. Events, which have happened in the past, may have, due to certain circumstances, become of interest to the public. If the general public takes interest in any topic, such a topic can be regarded as a current topic, even though it may deal with events which happened in the past. 1956 All LJ 886: AIR 1956 All 87 (88) (Pt A) (Pr 6).

——S. 9 (2) — Component parts of section — Latter part a separate category — Topic relating to development of art and culture.

Section 9 (2) covers two distinct categories. The first part of the section deals with publications consisting wholly or in great part of political or other news or of articles relating thereto, and the second part deals with articles relating to other current topics. If the latter part only means that the current topic must relate to current news, it was not necessary for the Legislature to have used two different categories in the section. The public may have acquired interest in the art and culture and it may be that the topic relating to the development of art and culture and suggesting improvements in the art may be matters of current topic. In order to discuss any such topic, it may sometimes be necessary to refer to the historical background. 1956 All LJ 886: AIR 1956 All 87 (88) (Pt B) (Pr 6).

——S. 9 (2) — Post and Telegraphs Manual, R. 30 (5) — Power of Post Master-General to cancel registration of magazine during period of registration — Scope of Rule 30 (5).

When the registration is to be renewed or is to be granted originally it may be open to the Post Master-General to come to the conclusion that the Magazine, registration of which is sought, cannot be regarded as a newspaper for purposes of Section 9; but, after having once held that it does come within the purview of Section 9 of the Post Office Act, it is not open to the Post Master-General, on the same set of facts, to come to a different conclusion sometimes afterward during the period when the registration is in force and cancel the registration on that ground.

The power to cancel is given by Rule 30 (5), Post and Telegraphs Manual, only when subsequent to the registration the publication has failed to continue to conform to the provisions of Section 9; but the Rule does not give power to the Post Master-General to cancel a registration, if during the course of the period of registration it appears to the Post Master-General that the registration has not been properly granted. In a case of renewal, the position may be different. In that case the words 'continued to be fulfilled' necessarily mean that in the past it may have complied with the provisions of Section 9 but at the time when the renewal is sought, it may have ceased to conform to the provisions of S. 9.

The registration of a publication as a newspaper may depend upon the discretion of the Post Master-General but it cannot be left to the sweet will of every Post Master-General every month to form a different opinion about a particular publication. The Rule, which gives power to the Post Master-General to cancel a registration, does not authorise the Post Master-General to change his opinion subsequently and to hold that a publication already registered did not come within the scope of Section 9 of the Act at the time of the registration. 1956 All LJ 886: AIR 1956 All 87 (88, 89) (Pt C) (Prs 7, 8).

——S. 9 — Post Office Rules, R. 30 — If ultra vires.

The right of the petitioner to get his publications registered as newspaper does not only arise under the sections of Post Office Act but also under those rules. Statutory rules cannot be held to be ultra vires merely because they provide for final determination of statutory rights by executive authority. 62 Bom LR 832: 1960 Nag LJ 717: AIR 1961 Bom 105 (110) (Pt C) (Pr 25).

——S. 33 — Scope — Compensation payable for shortage — Right of addressee to claim — If barred.

Section 33 lays down the general rule under which compensation will be payable normally to the sender in the event of loss of the postal article or its contents or in the event of any damage caused to it in the course of transmission by post But that will not debar the rightful owner (addressee) from claiming compensation for the article lost. (1958) 62 Cal WN 276.

——Ss. 33 and 6 — Liability of Post Office — Damage to insured postal article — Liability is not contractual but purely statutory — Post Office is not common carrier — Limitation — Limitation Act (1908), Art. 30 or 31 cannot apply.

From a scrutiny of the provisions of the Indian Post Office Act, it will be noticed that the post office is a mere department of the State and not a common carrier. Section 6 of the Act exempts the Government from any liability by reason of loss or delay or damage to, any postal article, in the course of its transmission, except in so far as in express terms that liability is undertaken by Government as provided in the succeeding sections of the Act and no officer of the Post Office shall incur any liability unless he has caused the same fraudulently or by his wilful act or default. Though postage is not expressly defined as 'revenue' nevertheless the use of the expression 'fees' in some of the provisions of the Act seems to indicate that though postage and fee are charged for specific services rendered, nevertheless they form part of the revenue of the Union Government. Moreover, the postal authorities have extensive Police powers of opening and examining any packet and withholding delivery of certain articles transmitted by post, including, in extreme cases, destruction of the same or handing them over to the Customs authorities. They are also subject to heavy penalties prescribed in Chapter X of the Act, for certain acts of misconduct. It is thus clear that the Postal Department is not a common carrier and that it does not enter into any contractual obligations while accepting letters and packets for transmission by Post: (1778) 2 Cowp 754 and 1906 KB 178 and (1957) 2 All ER 387, Rel. on.

If the intention of the Legislature was that there was contractual relationship between the Postal Department on the one hand and the person who transmits a package by post, on the other, they would surely have inserted an appropriate provision on the lines of S. 72 of the Indian Railways Act. The deliberate omission to insert such a provision leads to the reasonable inference that the Legislature intended that the liability between the post office and the sender of the package by post is not of a contractual nature but is purely statutory.

It is true that by the express provisions contained in S. 33 of the Act the post office is bound to pay compensation to the sender of the insured article for the loss of the article or its contents or for damage caused to it in the course of its transmission by post. But this liability does not arise by virtue of the general law of contract but by virtue of the express provision contained in that section read with S. 6 of the Act.

Therefore, the Post Office is not a carrier and Art. 30 or 31 of the Limitation Act (1908), cannot apply. ILR (1964) Cut 907: 31 Cut LT 387: AIR 1965 Orissa 118 (120, 121) (Prs 9, 10, 13, 14) (DB).

——S. 33 — Post Office Rules, R. 81 — Post Office Guide (corrected up to 30-6-1960), Part I, Para. 175 — Insured cover delivered to addressee with no visible damage to cover or seals—Cover found to contain only blank pieces of paper — Central Government not liable — Intactness of seal is conclusive on question of tampering by postal authorities.

No compensation is payable by the Central Government where there is no visible damage to the insured cover or the seals although the addressee finds only blank pieces of paper inside the cover. Intactness of the seals is conclusive on the question of tampering by postal authorities.

When the seals are found intact no inference that the currency notes were replaced by the postal employees during transit can be drawn from the mere fact that the paste on the flap which was pasted by the sender after putting in the contents, had spread or found besmered on the contents. The presence of the seals in the same position as before is sufficient to destroy the theory of tampering by postal authorities. The spreading of paste can at best raise some suspicion but cannot displace the conclusion afforded by the seals.

The fact that there is no hole in any of the contents though the cover had been sewn with thread in the middle before the seal was put or that the weight of the cover exceeded the weight as noted on the cover by about 2 per cent is not also sufficient to displace the conclusion afforded by the seals. AIR 1963 Pat 216 (217 to 219) (Pt B) (Prs 8, 10, 11, 16) (DB).

——S. 34 — Interpretation of.

The provision in S. 34 means that the Government shall incur liability in respect of the sum specified for recovery (in case of V. P. Articles) only if and after it has recovered it AIR 1960 All 672 (682) (Pt D) (Pr 39).

——S. 34 — V. P. P. delivered to Post Office — Parcel delivered to addressee but money not recovered — Liability for money had and received.

The plaintiff proved and the Post Office admitted that he had delivered the V. P. article to the post office for transmission to the addressee. The post office transmitted it for purpose of delivery to the addressee. The plaintiff also proved that on the same day he delivered four parcels to the post office of which three were delivered in due course to the respective addressee. The plaintiff alleged in his plaint that the addressee had informed him that he had received the article and made payment to the post office. In reply to this allegation, the post office stated in its written statement that the allegation did not concern it and was 'therefore, not admitted'. The plaintiff alleged that he never received the amount due on this parcel and filed a suit for its recovery.

Held, that, the plaintiff was entitled to rely on the presumption raised under S. 114 of the Evidence Act that the common course of business has been followed in this case and the parcel was duly delivered and payment received by the post office. The onus would shift to the Post Office to prove by cogent evidence that the normal course of business went wrong and that it did not in fact deliver the article or receive the price; and in the absence of proof the Court will presume that the article was delivered and the price received by the Post Office. That being so, it was liable, under the proviso to S. 34 of the Post Office Act to hand over the amount which it received on behalf of the plaintiff. The plaintiff was also entitled to recover the amount as money had been paid and received. If, on the other hand, it delivered the parcel without demanding payment from the addressee, it is liable for breach of contract as laid down by the Supreme Court in 1960 SCJ 153; AIR 1959 SC 1394. AIR 1960 All 672 (683, 684) (Pt E) (Prs 45, 46, 47).

——Ss. 34, Proviso and 48 (c) — Applicability — Value payable articles — Money recovered from addressees but withheld by Pakistan Government — Liability of Indian Government.

Proviso to S. 34 can protect the Central Government only when the money has not been received from the addressee of the value payable articles by it. Where, therefore, the money is received from the addressee but it had been withheld by the Pakistan Government due to monetary deadlock between the two Governments, the Indian Government cannot plead that it has not received the money from the addressee. The post offices in Pakistan in the circumstances, must be held to have been acting as agent of the Indian Government and the omission of its agent to hand over the amount to it could not affect the sender's right to get the money from the Indian Government. The Proviso to Section 34 cannot be of any avail to the Government. Further the Government cannot in this case invoke Clause (c) of Section 48 as it deals with money orders only and not with the claims in respect of value payable articles. AIR 1958 All 148 (149) (Prs 10, 13).

——S. 34 and Proviso — Liability of Post Office in case of V. P. Articles.

When the post office accepts a V. P. article it enters into a contract with the sender to deliver the Article only, against payment by the addressee of the sum specified by the sender. The proviso to Section 34 of the Post Office Act does not absolve the Post Office from liability to pay damages if, in contravention of its contract, it neglects to collect the specified sum on delivery. The value of the parcels and receipts of sale proceeds at Ratlam (which include the assessee's profits) in respect of the goods sent by him amount to receipt of income, profits or gains at Ratlam in Part B State. Similarly, where payment is made by Bank draft, the place where the payment is received is in law the place where the drafts are received by the assessee. The payment must therefore, be, held to have been received at Ratlam and though the drafts are encashed through the assessee's bankers at Bombay, it does not constitute receipts in Part A State. Under the general law and the provisions of Section 44 of Post Office Act a payee has no attachable interest in the amount of the money order during the course of its transmission and whilst it is still in the hands of the postal authorities. Having regard to provisions of S. 44 and R. 297 of the Rules made by the Central Government under S. 43 of the Act a money order amount in the hands of the postal authorities in the course of transmission is at the disposal of the remitter and does not cease to be the property of the remitter. It does not become the property of the payee. In spite of the amount having been handed over to the postal authorities by the remitter, he is entitled to recall the amount at any time before it is paid into the hands of the payee. There is no privity of contract between the postal authorities and the payee. The privity of contract is between the remitter and the postal authorities and, broadly speaking, it is the remitter who constitutes the postal authorities his agent for paying the amount to the payee so that so long as the agent has not carried out he instructions and fulfilled the mission, the principal has the right of directing to his agent as to how the amount shall be disposed of and the agent can ignore the instructions only at his peril. ——S. 44 — Remittance by money order — When operates as valid tender.

Mere remittance of the amount by Money Order within the time limit does not constitute a lawful tender. Until and unless the tenant proves that the amount was actually taken to the land-lord and offered to him for payment, there cannot be said to have been any lawful tender. See Houses and Rents — Travancore-Cochin Buildings (Lease and Rent) Control Order, 1950, Cl. 18. AIR 1955 NUC (Trav-Co) 1669.

——S. 47 — Applicability — Money order paid to person entitled — Postal authorities required to pay amount back to another — Amount paid to original payee — Recoverability as arrears of land revenue — Remedy.

Section 47, Post Office Act is meant for cases, e.g., where a money order is sent to 'A' and there are two persons having the same name 'A' and the amount of the money order is paid to that 'A' for whom the money order was not really meant. Then if that 'A' neglects or refuses to refund the amount of the money order, the Post Office authorities can avail of the provisions of this section and recover the amount from him as arrears of land revenue.

In a case where the Post Office Authorities have made payment of money order amount to a person who was entitled to receive it but if due to some other reasons such person cannot keep this amount with him or he is bound under law to pay it back to the postal authorities the Postal authorities should bring a regular suit for the recovery of this amount. They cannot use the provisions of S. 47 of the Act to recover the amount as arrears of land revenue. ILR (1960) 2 Punj 545: AIR 1961 Punj 436 (437) (Prs 10, 11).

——Ss. 48 (c) and 34, Proviso — Applicability — Value payable articles — Money recovered from addressees but withheld by Pakistan Government — Liability of Indian Government.

The Post Offices in Pakistan in the circumstances, must be held to have been acting as agents of the Indian Government and the omission of its agent to hand over the amount to it could not affect the sender's right to get the money from the Indian Government. ●——S. 52 — Scope of — Entrustment of postal article, not essential for offence under S. 52 — 'Secretes' — Meaning.

Bearing in mind the fact that an officer of the Post Office having in the course of his duties access to postal articles kept or lying in the Post Office, the Legislature has deliberately enlarged the scope of Section 52 so as to encompass secretion, destruction or throwing away of postal articles by an officer of the Post Office even though they may not have been entrusted to him or even though they are not articles with which he is required or is competent to deal in the course of his duties. The object of the provision is to prevent postal articles in course of transmission by post from being tampered with and so the 'secreting, destruction', etc. of postal articles to which the provision is directed is to such secreting, destruction, etc., as would frustrate or tend to frustrate their delivery to the addressee.

To secret means according to the dictionary, 'to hide'. In connection with a postal article addressed to some person, the fact that it is retained in his possession by an officer of the Post Office in an almirah and that too for an inordinately long period may be tantamount to hiding that article. Of course, what act amounts to 'secreting' would necessarily depend upon the facts of each case. Radha Kishan v. State of Uttar Pradesh, (1963) 1 SCWR 158: (1963) 1 Mys LJ (SC) 47: 1963 Mad WN 221: (1963) 2 Lab LJ 667: 1963 All LJ 397: 1963 BLJR 353: 1963 All WR (HC) 304: 1963 (1) Cr LJ 809: 1963 All Cr R 156: AIR 1963 SC 822 (825) (Pt D) (Prs 7, 10).

Held, on facts that it was proved that the articles were secreted in the course of transmission by post. Proof need not be direct evidence of the addressees, that the articles were not received by them. That the articles were not delivered could be proved by circumstantial evidence. Under Section 106, Evidence Act, it was for the accused (a postman) to show, how the registered articles came into his possession. ——S. 52 — Postal articles found in postman's house — House should be proved to be in exclusive possession of accused postman.

In order to bring a case under Section 52, Post Office Act, 1898, it is necessary to prove that the house from which the postal articles are alleged to have been recovered was in fact in sole occupation of the accused postman, where the prosecution has been able to prove that those articles were found in an almirah of the house in which the accused lived along with his son and of which the key was furnished by the son in the absence of his father, in the circumstances it is not legitimate to infer that almirah was in the accused's joint, much less in his exclusive possession. In the absence or any evidence it cannot be held that the accused in fact handed over the key to his son, or he himself was in exclusive possession of the articles. ——Ss. 52, 2 (1) — Applicability — "Postal article".

The money entrusted to a postman by the Post Master for payment of the money order cannot be said to constitute a 'postal article' in course of transmission by post or anything contained therein as contemplated by Section 52, Post Office Act. ILR (1954) TC 333: 1955 Cr LJ 1407: AIR 1955 T-C 247 (248) (Pr 4) (DB).

——S. 53 — 'Wilfully detains or delays' — Meaning of — Detention must be deliberate and for some purpose.

Per majority, Raghubar Dayal, J., Contra.

The meaning to be attached to the words 'wilful' and 'wilfully' has to be ascertained on a close examination of the scheme and the nature of the legislation in which the words appear and the context in which they are used. (1885) 31 Ch. D. 168 and 1933 (2) KB 669 and (1933) 78 Law Ed 381; AIR 1929 All 826 and 1951 (2) STC 26 (Mad) and AIR 1949 Mad 95, Rel. on.

Section 53 which makes punishable the wilful detention or delay of a postal article by an officer of the post office is one of the several sections which create offences under the Act. Comparison of various sections in Chapter 10 clearly shows that the legislature took a more serious view of the offence of wilful detention of a postal article (S. 53) than of many other offences in this Chapter. Wilful detention of a postal article is made, punishable with imprisonment extending to two years. The very fact that this comparatively heavy punishment of two years' imprisonment has been prescribed for wilful detention while lighter punishment has been prescribed under Sections 49, 50 and 51 justifies the conclusion that the word 'wilful' was used by the legislature to mean only such detention which was deliberate and for some purpose. Where the detention was not deliberate and on purpose, but as a result of either inadvertence or carelessness or negligence, the accused cannot be said to have detained or delayed the article 'wilfully'. SECTION 68

——S. 68 — A receiving B's insured cover as his own — Allegation that it contained more amount — A ready to return cover with amount specified thereon — Nature of offence.

In cases where originally a property is received bona fide and subsequently after having come to know who the owner of the property was, the person who receives the property repudiates the ownership or converts it to his own use without making efforts to hand it back to the owner, an offence under Section 403, I. P. C. is made out, but in cases where the person who is alleged to have received the property denies that he ever received possession of the property, he may be convicted for theft or cheating but he cannot be convicted under Section 403, I. P. C. See Penal Code (1860), S. 403. AIR 1955 NUC (All) 1743.

——S. 72 — Applicability.

What is required by Section 72 is a complaint made by order of or under authority from the Director-General or the Post-Master General, and not a mere letter of authority from the Superintendent to the Inspector to prosecute the accused or take legal steps against him if there is prima facie case. Further Section 72 does not authorise the Director General and the Post Master General to delegate to another person the powers conferred on them by it. 1953 Ker LT 364: ILR (1953) Trav-Co 600: 1953 Cr LJ 1777: AIR 1953 Trav-Co 537 (538) (Pt B) (Pr 4) (DB).

POST OFFICE SAVINGS BANK RULES FOR THE GUIDANCE OF DEPOSITORS

——R. 21 — Applicability — Post and Telegraph Manual Vol. VI, R. 445 — Irregularity of postal clerk in allowing withdrawal of deposit — Suit to recover amount — Maintainability — (Civil P C. (1908), Section 9).

Rule 21 of the Rules for the Guidance of Depositors exempts the post office from a liability only it the obtaining possession of the pass-book and the fraudulent withdrawal of money are both effected through the negligence of a depositor.

A had an account in Postal Savings Bank under the Guardianship of his father B. On 15-7-1948, after withdrawal of certain amount the pass book was left with the clerk concerned for entry of interest. In December, 1948 when B asked for the pass book it was untraceable and on obtaining a duplicate B discovered that a certain sum had been withdrawn by some unknown person. In a suit to recover that amount

Held, that the signatures on the relevant withdrawal form were suspicious. The certificate as required by Rule 445 of the P. and T. Manual Vol. VI was not signed by B. This irregularity being of a serious nature the person responsible could not have allowed withdrawal. The payment made on such a suspicious and defective withdrawal form could be attributable only either to the connivance or extreme inefficiency and carelessness of the officials concerned. In these circumstances it was not possible to accord any protection to the person at fault on the ground of good faith. There being no evidence relating to negligence or to the effect that the person who obtained the pass book through the negligence of A or B was the person who made the withdrawal Rule 21 could not be a bar to the suit. (1957) All WR (HC) 19.

Where a special power of attorney said that the plaintiffs had filed a suit for possession of lands etc., on the file of the Court of the District Munsif of Tirupathi and as it was not possible for them to conduct the same personally, they appointed N. N. as an agent to conduct the said suit. He was also authorised to conduct the entire proceedings which had to be taken in the said suit :

Held, that the document conferred an express power on N. N. to conduct a particular suit pending in a particular Court. It did not expressly engage the attorney for the purpose of conducting the litigation generally in respect of the plaint schedule properties. Hence where the District Munsif returned the plaint on the ground that it was beyond the pecuniary jurisdiction of his Court the agent had no power to institute and conduct the suit in a proper forum.

——S. 2 — Construction — Rules.

Powers of attorney must be strictly pursued, and are construed as giving only such authority as they confer expressly or by necessary implication. The following are the most important rules of construction: (1) The operative part of the deed is controlled by the recitals. (2) Where authority is given to do particular acts, followed by general words, the general words are restricted to what is necessary for the proper performance of the particular acts. (3) General words do not confer general powers, but are limited to the purpose for which the authority is given, and are construed as enlarging the special powers only when necessary for that purpose. (4) The deed must be construed so as to include all medium powers necessary for its effective execution. 1952 Comp Cas 146: AIR 1952 Punj 99 (101, 102) (Pt A) (Prs 8, 14).

1. Rule of stare decisis.

●——Stare decisis — Supreme Court. In a proper case, the Supreme Court has inherent jurisdiction to reconsider and revise its earlier decisions. In exercising this inherent power, however, it would naturally like to impose certain reasonable limitations and would be reluctant to entertain pleas for the reconsideration and revision of its earlier decisions, unless it is satisfied that there are compelling and substantial reasons to do so.

When it is urged that the view already taken by the Supreme Court as to the construction of a statutory provision, should be reviewed and revised by it, it may not necessarily be an adequate reason for such review and revision to hold that though the earlier view is a reasonably possible view, the alternative view which is pressed on the subsequent occasion is more reasonable. In reviewing and revising its earlier decision Supreme Court should ask itself whether in the interest of the public good for any other valid and compulsive reasons, it is necessary that the earlier decision should be revised. When the Supreme Court decides questions of law, its decisions are, under Article 141, binding on all Courts within the territory of India, and so, it must be the constant endeavour and concern of it to introduce and maintain an element of certainty and continuity in the interpretation of law in the country. Frequent exercise by Supreme Court of its power to review its earlier decisions on the ground that the view pressed before it later appears to it to be more reasonable, may incidentally tend to make law uncertain and introduce confusion which must be consistently avoided.

It is not possible or desirable, and in any case it would be inexpedient to lay down any principles which should govern the approach of the Supreme Court in dealing with the question of reviewing and revising its earlier decisions. It would always depend upon several relevant considerations :— What is the nature of the infirmity or error on which a plea for a review and revision of the earlier view is based? On the earlier occasion, did some patent aspects of the question remain unnoticed, or was the attention of the Court not drawn to any relevant and material statutory provision, or was any previous decision of this Court bearing on the point not noticed ? Is the Court hearing such plea fairly unanimous that there is such an error in the earlier view ? What would be the impact of the error on the general administration of law or on public good ? Has the earlier decision been followed on subsequent occassions either by this Court or by the High Court ? And, would the reversal of the earlier decision lead to public inconvenience, hardship or mischief ? These and other relevant considerations must be carefully borne in mind whenever the Supreme Court is called upon to exercise its jurisdiction to review and revise its earlier decisions. These considerations become still more significant when the earlier decision happens to be a unanimous decision of a Bench of five Judges. AIR 1955 SC 661 and AIR 1965 SC 845, Ref.

In the case, it was urged that Supreme Court should revise its view as to construction of Section 66 (4), Income-tax Act 1922, in two earlier decisions, AIR 1959 SC 1177 and AIR 1963 SC 1484 (The latter was a unanimous decision of a Bench of five Judges). The Supreme Court conceded that the alternative view pressed for revising the earlier decisions was a reasonably possible view; but refused to revise the earlier decisions on ground that the earlier view had been followed by the Supreme Court on several occassions and had regulated the procedure on reference proceedings in the High Courts ever since the decision in AIR 1959 SC 1177, and that no reported decision was cited to support the alternative view. Keshav Mills Co., Ltd. v. Commissioner of Income-tax, Bombay, (1965) 2 SCA 101: 56 ITR 365: (1965) 2 SCJ 75: (1965) 1 ITJ 853: AIR 1965 SC 1636 (1643, 1644, 1645, 1646) (Pt A) (Prs 23, 28, 34).

●——Stare decisis — Supreme Court — How far bound by its own decisions.

Per Gajendragadkar, C. J., Wanchoo and Raghubar Dayal JJ. :—

The Constitution does not place any restriction on the powers of Supreme Court to review its earlier decisions or even to depart from them and in matters relating to decision of constitutional points which have a significant impact on the fundamental rights of citizens, it would be prepared to review its earlier decisions in the interest of public good. The doctrine of stare decisis may not strictly apply in this context and the said doctrine should not be permitted to perpetuate erroneous decision pronounced by the Supreme Court to the detriment of general welfare. Even so, the normal principle that judgments pronounced by the Supreme Court would be final, cannot be ignored and unless considerations of a substantial and compelling character make it necessary to do so, the Supreme Court should be slow to doubt the correctness of previous decisions or to depart from them.

In such a case the test should be, is it absolutely necessary and essential that the question already decided should be re-opened ? The answer to this question would depend on the nature of infirmity alleged in the earlier decision, its impact on public good and the validity and compelling character of the considerations urged in support of the contrary view if the said decision has been followed in a large number of cases, that again is a factor which must be taken into account. Sajjan Singh v. State of Rajasthan, (1965) 1 Mad LJ (SC) 57: (1965) SCJ 377: (1965) 1 SCWR 593: (1965) 1 SCA 875: (1965) 1 Andh WR (SC) 57: AIR 1965 SC 845 (855) (Pt E) (Prs 21, 22).

●——Principles of stare decisis — Applicability in India — Binding effect of decisions of High Court — Supreme Court can reconsider even its own decision — Decision not dissented from for long time — Not immutable.

Mudholkar, J. :— In so far as the principle of stare decisis is concerned, it is nothing more than a precipitate of the notion of legal justice. In other words it is the principle that judicial decisions have a binding character. But in India the position is not quite the same. Here the decision of a High Court is not even always binding upon it in the sense that it can be reconsidered by a Full Bench. In any case, the decision of a High Court has no more than persuasive character in so far as the Supreme Court is concerned In that view the decision of any High Court, even though it may not have been dissented from since the time it was rendered, cannot, in the proper sense of the term be regarded as stare decisis. What could be stare decisis in the Supreme Court would be its own previous decisions. But even here instances are not wanting where, unlike perhaps the House of Lords, the Supreme Court has considered themselves free to go back on previous decisions. Finally, even where a decision has not been dissented from for a long time, but has on the other hand been followed, it is not entitled to be treated as immutable, particularly where it deals only with a question appertaining to the adjective law, such as the law of limitation. Vidyacharan Shukla v. Khubchand Baghel, (1964) 2 SCA 505: (1964) 6 SCR 129: AIR 1964 SC 1099 (1116, 1117) (Pt F) (Pr 40).

●——Supreme Court — Powers of — Supreme Court is not precluded from considering the correctness of the decision of the High Court notwithstanding its having held the field for over forty years without question. C. Abdul Shakoor Saheb v. Aru Papa Rao, (1964) 1 SCJ 168: (1964) 1 Mad LJ (SC) 49: (1964) 1 Andh WR (SC) 49: (1963) Supp (2) SCR 55: AIR 1963 SC 1150 (1158) (Pt J) (Pr 22).

■——Sharp conflict in views of different High Courts on a given point — Question before Supreme Court to resolve the conflict — Supreme Court must independently construe the provision and divide which of the conflicting views should prevail — In such a case it would be singularly inappropriate to involve the doctrine of stare decisis and follow the view of the majority of High Courts. AIR 1961 SC 1795 (1801) (Pt B) (Pr 13).

● ——Stare decisis — Doctrine of — Applicability.

Under the stare decisis rule, a principle of law which has become settled by a series of decisions generally is binding on the Courts and should be followed in similar cases. This rule is based on expediency and public policy, and, although generally it should be strictly adhered to by the Courts it is not universally applicable. But previous decisions should not be followed to the extent that grievous wrong may result; and accordingly the Courts ordinarily will not adhere to a rule or principle established by previous decisions which they are convinced is erroneous. The rule of stare decisis is not so imperative or inflexible as to preclude a departure therefrom in any case, but its application must be determined in each case by the discretion of the Court and previous decisions should not be followed to the extent that error may be perpetuated and grievous wrong may result. Where the correctness of the decision has been challenged from time to time and in fact had been reversed and its decision has been considerably impaired by a Privy Council decision, the doctrine of stare decisis is not applicable. Maktul v. Mst. Manbhari, 1958 SCJ 1268: ILR (1958) Punj 2305: 1959 SCR 1099: AIR 1958 SC 918 (922, 923) (Pt B) (Prs 9, 10).

● ——Principle of stare decisis — Does not involve mechanical adherence to earlier decisions — High Court can differ from earlier decisions by reference to larger Bench.

The principle of stare decisis is a principle of policy. It is not a mechanical formula of adherence to the latest decision. There must no doubt be certainty about the law but if this certainty leads to the conclusion that an error once having been made in a judgment must be followed in all subsequent cases, then it would be a false certainty.

In India a High Court is not bound to follow its own earlier decision but may depart from it. The departure is done by a Bench of a large number of Judges. When there is a conflict among two decisions of Benches or a Bench does not agree with the decision of another Bench, it refers the case to a Bench of a larger number of Judges. Where, therefore, a larger Bench has been constituted specially to consider which of the two earlier Full Bench decisions should be followed it is the duty of the larger Bench to which the question is referred to consider each of the cases and to decide to the best of its own judgment which of them lays down the sounder law. A decision, even if given by a Full Bench, is not a statute and the effect of overruling a decision is not that of invalidating a statute. Overuling a decision only means reassertion or vindication of the law. State of U. P. v. Firm Deo Dutt Lakhan Lal, 1965 All WR (HC) 546: 1965 All LJ 862: 1965 All Cr R 348: ILR (1965) 2 All 917: AIR 1966 All 73 (79, 82) (Pt C) (Prs 22, 29) (FB).

——Stare decisis — Two persons prosecuted under same charge — Offences committed in same transaction — Basis of evidence same — Acquittal of one must lead to acquittal of the other on the basis of stare decisis. AIR 1956 SC 415, Foll. 1965 All LJ 11: 1965 All WR (HC) 113: 1965 All Cr R 117: 1966 Cri LJ 2: AIR 1966 All 19 (21, 22) (Prs 6, 7).

——Stare decisis — Principle of stated. AIR 1958 All 101 (DB).

——Long established practice — Upsetting of.

No doubt that there should be finality in the matter but the Court must not lose sight of another salutary rule, that Courts should not be debarred from correcting their decisions in the event of their finding that they had gone wrong. When there is a competition between a rule of expediency and the rule of what may be called absolute justice, then the latter rule should prevail. AIR 1955 NUC (All) 2294 (DB).

——Stare decisis.

Points covered and decided by Supreme Court and Full Bench cannot be re-agitated. 1952 RD (HC) 340: 1952 All WR (HC) 599: 1952 All LJ 677: AIR 1953 All 92 (95) (Pt C) (Pr 16) (DB).

——Stare decisis — Precedent not followed for some time — Weight of.

It is not correct to say that merely because there was no occasion for a Court to follow the precedent of the same Court for some time those decisions should be treated with no respect and should be disregarded. (1958) 2 Andh WR 527: 1958 Andh LT 1008: AIR 1958 Andh Pra 705 (706) (Pt A) (Pr 6) (DB).

● ——Application of principle.

There is always force in the argument of stare decisis and a Court of law should never be in a hurry to later well settled law which may result in disturbing titles based upon the laws as understood by the litigant. Bahubali Vasant Katage v. Gundappa Tatya Duge, 56 Bom LR 501: ILR (1954) Bom 1026: AIR 1954 Bom 451 (456) (Pt D) (Pr 16) (FB).

——Stare decisis — Civil P. C. (1908), Preamble.

Certainty (as well as justice) is the object of the law, and it is more so when questions of title to property are involved, Law which has been laid down by the Courts and which has been followed by subjects within jurisdiction should not be lightly unsettled.

The principle of stare decisis has been accepted not only in regard to the decisions of the Courts of co-ordinate jurisdiction but also in regard to the decisions of Courts, which have only a conditional authority as precedents.

Even a case where the appellate Court would be normally entitled to overrule a decision reached by a subordinate Court it would apply to principle of stare decisis and not overrule the same after lapse of time subjects acting upon that decision and the like considerations making it more expedient for the appellate Court not to unsettle the law which had been pronounced at one time and acted upon by the subjects. 53 Bom LR 192: ILR (1951) Bom 576: AIR 1951 Bom 57 (66, 67) (Pt C) (Prs 22, 23) (DB).

● ——Long courses of decisions — Effect of.

The Court will not take a contrary view even if it be more logical where by doing so it would upset a series of decisions spread over a considerably long period and thereby offend against the doctrine of stare decisis which is always more important and more to be respected than any logical doctrine resulting from any particular view as to the strict law. Sakarchand v. Narayan, ILR (1951) Bom 217: 52 Bom LR 888: AIR 1951 Bom 10 (12, 13) (Pt B) (Pr 10) (FB).

——Stare decisis.

If a particular procedure has been held and declared to be the correct procedure by judicial decisions speard over almost half a century contrary it would not be proper to seek to re-open the question over again, unless some very strong reasons could be made out. AIR 1954 Cal 389 (392) (Pt A) (Pr 11) (DB).

●——It would not be proper to unsettle a well entrenched practice and create hardships. C & I. Bank v. M. S. Ali Khan. ILR (1955) Hyd 79: AIR 1956 Hyd 65 (70) (Pt B) (Pr 13) (FB).

■——Principle of stare decisis — Applicability.

Per Monohar Pershad J.:— The principle of stare decisis is applicable only where the effect of departing from an establishment rule of decision will be to unsettle transactions which have been previously supposed to be finally settled. That principle does not come into operation where the result of departing from an incorrect view of law is merely this, that in dispute on a subject to which the law applies, a new set of defence would be put forward in the Courts. Case law referred.

Per Alikhan J.:— The principle of stare decisis can be departed from when there is a clear balance of convenience and when it does not upset transactions. Case law referred. Basappa v. Parwatamma, ILR (1952) Hyd 245: AIR 1952 Hyd 99 (102, 103, 111) (Pt B) (Prs 6, 40) (FB).

●——Overruling of cases — Decisions unchallenged for many years.

Per Qumar Hasan J.:— The Courts must always hesitate to overrule decisions which are not manifestly erroneous and mischievous, which have stood for many years unchallenged and which from their nature may reasonably be supposed to have affected the conduct of a large portion of the community in matters relating to rights of property. ——Stare decisis.

The principle of stare decisis cannot be applied when the view taken in a series of decisions comes in conflict with a dictum of the Supreme Court, and when it does not stand the test of reason. 1960 Jab LJ 222: 1960 MPLJ 879: 1960 MPC 441: AIR 1960 Madh Pra 237 (238) (Pt B) (Pr 10).

——Stare decisis— Applicability.

Held, on facts that (i) according to the State of law as understood before 1897 when A died, there is no doubt that Judicial Commissioner's Court of Nagpur specifically excluded the rule of survivorship and coparcenary in the matter of devolution to tenancy holdings. As such it could not be said that G and S sons of A who were members of a joint family inherited the suit property as joint tenants after their father's death. They could only inherit as tenants in common, with the result that, upon the death of G, his interest would devolve on his daughters and not on the surviving joint coparcener S. (ii) From the circumstances in the case it was clear that the parties for a long time from the year 1897 to the year 1954, acted on the view of the law as declared by the Court of the Judicial Commissioner. Otherwise there was no occasion for S to give to the daughters of G their share of the crop produce. Therefore, this case would be a suitable case for the application of the principle of stare decisis so as not to unsettle the vested and settled rights of the parties on account of a subsequent authoritative interpretation of the law in AIR 1941 FC 72 or on account of the later C. P Tenancy Amendment Acts introducing the rule of survivorship. Hence the question whether G and S inherited the tenancy lands of their father before 1897 as tenants in common or as joint tenants ought to be decided on the principle of stare decisis and not on the principle of the general Hindu law or the later exposition of the Hindu law by the Federal Court in AIR 1941 FC 72. (iii) Plaintiffs, therefore, became tenants in common along with the daughters of S and as such they had a right to claim partition to the extent of their half share. 1959 MPC 400: 1959 MPLJ 1011-: 1960 Jab LJ 729: ILR (1959) Madh Pra 43: AIR 1959 Madh Pra 301 (303, 304) (Pt A) (Prs 13, 14, 19) (DB).

——Stare decisis — Principle of — Equitable doctrine on which it is based.

The principle of stare decisis is based on the equitable doctrine that parties act on the basis of the view of the law as declared by the law Courts from time to time and if the law has been declared in a particular way by the law Courts for a long time, which has been the accepted view of that Court, the settled rule should not be unsettled, merely because subsequently a different view of the law is taken or because the law is amended. 1959 MPC 400: 1959 MPLJ 1011: 1960 Jab LJ 729: ILR (1959) Madh Pra 43: AIR 1959 Madh Pra 301 (303) (Pt B) (Pr 12) (DB).

●——Stare decisis — On change in law, contrary decision of superior Court, or subsequent discovery of serious error, even Full Bench decisions may be re-considered — Judge taking different view is no ground for re-consideration.

It may be necessary at times to re-consider even a Full Bench decision, for example, owing to a change in the law or owing to a contrary decision of a superior Court or some palpable and serious error affecting the decision discovered subsequently; but such occasions are very rare. But no Judge can ask for re-consideration of such a case merely because he happened to take a different view. Dagdu v. ■——Stare Decisis.

Per Raghava Rao J.:— The Rule of Stare Decisis only means that where a rule has become settled law it is to be followed although some possibe inconvenience may grow from a strict observance of it, or although a satisfactory reason is wanting, or although the principle and the policy of the rule may be questioned. The rule can bear no application to a situation in which there is conflict between two Full Bench decisions of equal strength. Permanayakam Pillai v. Sivaraman. S. When the section itself is based on customs and manners of the country which cannot but change it is extremely difficult to fall back upon judicial precedents when customs and manners in public opinion as regards them were widely different. If the Judges continue to follow judicial precedents of several years ago in the matter of interpreting a section like Section 132, Civil P. C., without keeping abreast of changing times they shall be exposing themselves to the criticism of being janitars of the purda system and acting as impediments in the way of the emancipation of women from its confines. 1949 Mad WN 678: (1949) 2 Mad LJ 517: AIR 1950 Mad 151 (153) (Pt B) (Pr 7).

——Stare Decisis — Law laid down in old decision neither unjust nor opposed to public interest — Change likely to affect number of transactions — Re-opening of law by reference to Full Bench is improper.

When there is nothing in the view of the law adopted in a decision which is in itself unjust or opposed to the public interest, and the case was decided many years ago so that it is not improbable that many transactions have been made in the light of that decision, it would be improper to re-open such a question by a reference to a Full Bench and so possibly create confusion and unsettlement: 40 Mys HCR 435, Foll. 55 Mys HCR 263: AIR 1950 Mys 13 (17) (Pt C) (Pr 13) (DB).

——Reference casting doubt on correctness of a reported decision.

In the absence of conflict of authority, a reference, casting a doubt on the correctness of a reported decision of the Court, but not formulating a reasoned criticism of the view accepted therein or offering an alternative to it, disturbs the comity of the Court. This would only lead to an uncertainty of the law and should be avoided. ILR (1956) Nag 630: AIR 1956 Nag 115 (117) (Pt C) (Pr 11) (DB).

●——Stare decisis — Principle of — Grant of leave to appeal under Letters Patent — Effect of.

Where Judges following the decision of a single Judge think fit to grant leave for appeal under the Letters Patent, the appellate Court cannot on the principle of stare decisis refuse to examine the foundation on which the Court below rested its decision. The very object of granting leave to appeal is to bring the decision under the review of an appellate Court. Ramdeo v. Mst. ——Stare decisis — Value — Precedents.

Binding judicial decisions or stare decisis has rightly been described to constitute a sort of a viaduct over which law travels in transporting the cargo of justice. Accordingly whenever a doubt is raised, prudence and sense of duty dictates, that the piers of this viaduct must be tested to make certain that they are sound, strong, free from serious infirmity and capable of properly supporting the weight. Adopting of such a course also tends to strengthen the citizens' faith in our judicial process. This rule of practice is of considerable value in a set-up controlled by rule of law. 1965 Cur LJ 330 (Punj).

●——Binding effect of decisions.

Per Majority:— The binding effect of a decision does not depend upon whether a particular argument was considered therein or not, provided that the point with reference to which an argument was subsequently advanced was actually decided. ——Courts do not create law, only declare it — Reference declared illegal by certain decisions — Reference does not become illegal because of the decisions.

It is obvious that Courts only declare the law, which is deemed to have existed always and that they cannot create a law when pronouncing judgments, much less alter it.

Certain accused who were prosecuted for lock-out during the pendency of a reference of their dispute to the Industrial Tribunal, pleaded on the basis of certain subsequent High Court rulings that the reference was vague and illegal and hence they committed no offence by locking out their concern. It was contended that the accused could not rely on decisions which were subsequent to their alleged offence;

Held, that the reference was illegal and void even when it was made and even before the Court's rulings were issued proving it to be illegal and void and that beings so, it was clear that accused did not commit any offence. 62 Mad LW 866: (1949) 2 Mad LJ 800: 51 Cri LJ 589: 1949 Mad WN 842: (1949) 1 FJR 242: AIR 1950 Mad 231 (233) (Pt C) (Pr 4).

——Value of.

Per Dua, J.:— Precedents are employed, as is often said, only to discover principles and principles are employed only to discover justice. To discover the true ratio decidendi is, therefore, ethical and is creative evaluation as opposed to mechanical application of a precedent. A rule of law defined by precedent in its further extension is essentially subject to review in the light of varying analogies and differences of facts and concepts involved in new cases. A rule of law acted upon by a Judge while deciding a controversy, is rarely, if at all stated with the completeness of a statutory draftsman, confining his successors to mere interpretation, with the result that it is always open to later Courts to consider to what extent the earlier judicial statement can safely be applied to materially different facts. Santa Singh v. Rajinder Singh, ILR (1965) 2 Punj 97: 1965 Pun LR (Supp) 1: AIR 1965 Punj 415 (427, 430) (Pt F) (Prs 42, 52) (FB).

——Reliability — Precedents, it may be pointed out are authorities on their own facts and on the provision of law which they are called upon to construe for solving the particular problem facing the Court — Not everything contained in a judicial decision is a source of law for subsequent cases — If the facts are different and the legal provision is differently worded and designed or meant to achieve a different object, then isolated passages from such earlier decisions instead of assisting and guiding the subsequent Court in judicial thinking on the right lines may tend to mislead it. ILR (1964) 2 Punj 450.

——Importance of respecting judicial precedents.

A single Judge is bound by the decision of a Bench of two or more judges and a Division Bench is bound by the decision of another Division Bench and he cannot ignore or disregard the earlier decision, unless such decision has been overruled by a Full Bench or the Supreme Court. Subordinate Courts are bound by the decisions of the High Court. Jaiwant Rao v. State of Rajasthan, 1960 Raj LW 687: ILR (1960) 10 Raj 1703: AIR 1961 Raj 250 (265) (Pt F) (Pr 51) (FB).

——Judgment of High Court — Value as judicial precedent — Advocate has right to apply for its copy — Judgments being public records their copies should be available as a matter of right to all persons prepared to pay the prescribed fee — Judicial decisions form important part of Indian law and the authority of precedent is so potent and pervading in Indian Courts that any restriction on the access to those decisions cannot but affect adversely the proper administration of justice. See High Court Rules and Orders — Civil Rules of Practice (Travancore-Cochin), Rule 212. AIR 1957 Trav-Co 31 (DB).

2 (A). Extent of authority.

——Evidentiary value of — Reliance on facts — Proof of.

The ruling of a case is an authority for the proposition of law contained therein. If it is sought to rely on any facts contained in the judgment of a case published in a Law Report then the party should file that as a piece of evidence in the case in order to enable the other side to file any documents in rebuttal of the same.

Held, that in the circumstances of the case, the party filing a judgment in its support could not rely on the admission of certain fact contained therein. 1952 All LJ 310: AIR 1953 All 378 (379) (Prs 5, 6).

——Authority of.

Decisions cannot be pressed into service in support of propositions which they do not expressly lay down. AIR 1955 NUC (Andh Pra) 15.

——Authority of.

A decision is an authority and is valuable as a precedent only on the facts on which it is based, and where the facts are different, they are of no avail to the assessees. (1957) 8 STC 258: AIR 1957 Assam 31 (33) (Pt B) (Pr 11) (DB).

● ——Value of — Extension of particular decision — Permissibility.

——Decision of highest Court — Authority of — Corollary following from it — Force of.

A decision of the higest Court is a decision which is true with regard to the facts on which that decision is based. Logical corollary may follow from that decision and a Court may be asked to accept the logical corollary and to extend the principle of that decision, but the binding nature of the decision depends upon what is the ratio which applies not only to the facts in that particular case but would be applicable to other facts as well. It is perfectly true that no two decisions can have identical facts and it is not in that sense that one decision should be distinguished from another. But once the ratio is discovered then the case is not an authority for a proposition that may seem to follow logically from it. 58 Bom LR 709: ILR (1956) Bom 693: (1956) 30 ITR 753: AIR 1956 Bom 586 (590) (Pt C) (Pr 10) (DB).

● ——Finality of decision.

Decision of a Full Bench or of any Court for the matter of that, is binding provided it is a considered decision. ——Binding effect — Extent of.

It is not always safe logically to extend a ratio to be deducted from a particular case decided by a particular tribunal. A decision is good with regard to the facts found in a particular case and the principle that emerges on a consideration of those facts. Different facts may lead to a different decision and it is not proper to apply a principle based on the facts of one case to the facts of another case merely because relentless logic may so require. ——Precedents — Retrospective operation — Applicability of principle in regard to statutes.

When legislation is amended except in matters procedural the amendment is not retrospective unless a specific provision therefor is made, and interests acquired under the Act as it stood before the amendment are not disturbed, this principle is applicable in respect of the law as laid down by highest judicial authority. Where decree-holder had obtained his final decree for foreclosure and had acquired a definite and absolute interest based on the view of the law stated by the highest tribunal in ILR (1942) Nag 357 at the time, which the Court granting the final decree was bound to follow, the right so obtained cannot be disturbed by subsequent overruling of the decision by a Full Bench (AIR 1944 Nag 289) during the pendency of the appeal. AIR 1951 Nag 433 (433, 434) (Pr 3).

——Judicial precedent and obiter dictum.

An appeal may present two distinct questions for decisions Both these questions may be equally potent and a determination of any one of them in favour of the appellant may well result in the appeal being allowed. Yet, the Court of appeal may very properly deal with both the questions and express its conclusions on them. This a Court is surely entitled to do; it is indubitably proper to do so and no allegation of judicial irrelevancy can attach to its decision on either of the points. There is, in such a case, no travelling beyond the scope of the appeal, no dealing with anything immaterial or irrelevant and no effort which is not directed to an adjudication of the appeal. The decision on both the points will therefore have the full weight of judicial precedent. (1964) 2 Andh WR 426: AIR 1965 Andh Pra 115 (118) (Pt C) (Pr 12).

——Obiter — More than one point urged and considered — Observations on them are not obiter.

Obiter dictum is one which is not necessary for the decision of the case. Where more than one point which fell for determination had been urged and considered, and though the case could be disposed of on one point, but it has been disposed of on all the points, it cannot be said that the disposal on the other points was not necessary or that the observations in relation thereto are obiter (1961) 1 Andh WR 202: 1961 Andh LT 233: ILR (1961) 1 Andh Pra 499: AIR 1961 Andh Pra 305 (308) (Pt C) (Pr 7) (DB).

——Obiter dicta.

An obiter dictum is an expression of opinion on a point which is not necessary for the decision of a case. This very definition draws a clear distinction between a point which is necessary for the determination of a case and a point which is not necessary for the determination of the case. But in both cases points must arise for the determination of the tribunal. The question which was necessary for the determination of the case would be the ratio decidendi; the opinion of the tribunal on the question which was not necessary to decide the case would be only an obiter dictum. Obiter dicta must lay down a rule. It is not sufficient that they should be merely dicta of a superior Court, but from the dicta one must be in a position to deduce a rule laid down by the higher authority. No difference in principle exists between a definite opinion arrived at by the Tribunal itself and an opinion based upon a concession made at the bar. 56 Bom LR 1156: ILR (1955) Bom 318: 1955 Cri LJ 423: AIR 1955 Bom 113 (115, 116) (Pt B) (Prs 6, 7, 8) (DB).

In considering the weight of a precedent, it is necessary to see that the judicial pronouncement, which is sought to be made the precedent, was based on the material facts as found in the case If a conclusion was not necessary on the particular facts as found, it is obvious that any principle enunciated, which does not arise on the said facts, can only be treated as an obiter dictum. Where in an appeal under Order 43, Rule 1 against an order dismissing the plaintiff's suit, on the ground that the dismissal was the result of fraud practiced on the Courts the High Court dismissed the appeal as not competent under O. 43, Rule 1, and observed that the plaintiff might file regular appeal against the decree framed upon dismissal in the suit, the observations indicating the proper remedy are in the nature of obiter and are not binding either on the parties or on the Court and cannot be pressed as a precedent. The plaintiffs are therefore free to take recourse to any other remedy as they are advised. 1960 MPC 517: 1960 Jab LJ 209: 1960 MPLJ 33.

——Obiter dicta — Has no binding effect — No reference to Division Bench necessary. 1959 MPLJ (Notes) 159.

● ——Meaning of — Dicta and obiter dicta — Distinction.

A precedent is a judicial decision which contains in itself, a principle. The underlying principle, which thus forms its authoritative element is often termed the ratio decidendi. The concrete decision is binding between the parties to it, but it is the abstract ratio decidendi which alone has the force of law as regards the world at large. The only judicial principles which are authoritative are those which are thus relevant in their subject-matter and limited in their scope. All others, at the best, are of merely persuasive efficacy, They are not true ratio decidendi and are distinguished from them under the name of dicta or obiter dicta, things said by the way. The prerogative of judges is not to make law promulgating and declaring it — this pertains to the legislature — but to make law by applying it. Judicial declaration, unaccompanied by judicial application, is not of binding authority.

Passages from Salmond on Jurisprudence, 11th Edn. pp. 223 and 224 quoted.

Obiter dicta though they may have great weight as such, are not conclusive authority. Obiter dicta in this context mean that what the words literally signify — namely statements by the way. If a Judge thinks it desirable to give his opinion on some point which is not necessary for the decision of the case that has not the binding weight of the decision of the case and the reasons for the decisions: (1934) 2 KB 132 (154), Foll; Stroud's Judicial Dictionary cited. ——Ratio decidendi and dicta — Binding effect.

That part alone of a decision of a Court of law is binding upon Courts of co-ordinate jurisdiction and inferior Courts which consists of the enunciation of the reasons or principles upon which the question before the Court has really been determined. This underlying principle which forms the only authoritative element of a precedent is often termed as the ratio decidendi. Statements which are not necessary to the decisions, which go beyond the occasion and lay down a rule that is unnecessary for the purpose in hand (usually termed dicta) have no binding authority on another Court, though they may have some merely persuasive efficacy. 1956 Nag LJ 261: ILR (1956) Nag 246: 1959-29 ITR 1013: AIR 1960 Nag 84 (85) (Pt B) (Pr 9) (DB).

● ——Obiter dicta — Value as precedent

Any judgment of any Court is authoritative only as to that part of it called the 'ratio decidendi', which is considered to have been necessary to the decision of the actual issue between the litigants.

Every expression of opinion in a judgment is not a binding authority or a precedent in a subsequent case and it is open to the judge dealing with such a case to distinguish for himself between what was and what was not essential to the prior decision.

Observations of the judges in a judgment, which are not the foundation of their decision, must be regarded as obiter dicta. Such dicta cannot be regarded as a precedent binding in subsequent cases. ——Obiter dictum — Prima facie view.

There is a real distinction between an obiter dictum of a superior Court and a prima facie view taken by the superior Court. ——Authority of — Extent of — Ratio and obiter — Distinction.

The principle of a case is limited to the sum of all the facts held by the Court to be material in that case, and all observations of a general nature are merely obiter. The distinction between what is ratio and what is mere obiter should always be borne in mind when following a precedent. It is the abstract ratio decidendi which alone has the force of law. AIR 1951 Orissa 71 (75) (Pt B) (Pr 10) (DB).

● ——Obiter dicta — Decision based on two grounds — Decision upon one ground is not obiter because decision upon other is itself sufficient.

● ——Dicta in judicial pronouncements — True meaning — How to be ascertained.

Per Dua, J.:— The observations from the decision of a Court of justice however high, must not be detached or isolated and taken out of context, for such a process may at times tend to be misleading and to create confusion in the discovery of the true ratio decidendi. The formulation of a rule in a judicial pronouncement is invariably imbedded in the rest of judgment and the entire context must always be examined in order to discover the true intended meaning of a given passage in a judicial decision. ● ——Obiter dicta — What is — Alternative trains of reasoning — Neither of them can be regarded as obiter.

A dictum which does not form the integral part of the train of reasoning directed to the question decided may be regarded as obiter. ● ——Decision on questions of fact — Value of.

Decisions even of the highest Court on questions which are essentially questions of fact, cannot be cited as precedents governing the decision of other cases which must rest in the ultimate analysis upon their own particular facts. The general principles governing appreciation of circumstantial evidence are well established and beyond doubt or controversy. The more difficult question is one of applying those principles to the facts and circumstances of a particular case coming before the Court. That question has to be determined by the Court as and when it arises with reference to the particular facts and circumstances of that individual case. It is no use, therefore, appealing to precedents in such matters. No case on facts can be on all fours with those of another. Prakash Chandra Pathak v. State of U. ● —Authority of decision involving interpretation of words of statute — Decisions not unanimous — Weight of.

The argument that in accordance with the current authority of the different Courts of India, a different interpretation should not be placed on the words of the section is of little avail in a case where the decision has not been acquiesced in for long or the authorities are not absolutely unanimous and moreover it is not a case of disturbing the course of construction which has continued unchallenged for such a length of time as to acquire the sanction of continued decisions over a very long period and in such a case therefore there is no principle which will preclude the Supreme Court from correcting the error. ●——Decision on construction of contract — Value of.

It is no doubt true that a decision upon the construction of one contract cannot be regarded as an authority upon the construction of another contract in different words and entered into in different circumstances and that each case must be decided on the construction of the particular document. But the general principle underlying the cases can be looked into and applied. Gulabchand Gambhirmal v Kudilal Govindram, 1959 MPC 143: 1959 Jab LJ 78: 1960 MPLJ 334: AIR 1959 Madh Pra 151 (161) (Pt G) (Pr 18) (FB).

——Constructions of deeds — Decision of Bench when binding.

No decision of any Bench on the construction of any particular document can be binding authority for the construction of another document — But where the decision of a Bench lays down a principle of interpretation of certain words on the basis of a decision of higher authority which enters into the construction of any document containing such words which come before the Court in any other given case, that principle of interpretation must be treated as binding on the Court in such other case, unless on other relevant facts and circumstances the principle is to be denied the effect, which it must otherwise have. 1950-2 Mad LJ 466: 1950 Mad WN 691: 63 Mad LW 1006: AIR 1951 Mad 318 (320) (Pt B) (Pr 5).

——Value of, in discretionary matters.

2 (F). Decision on concession or assumption.

——Authority of — Decision based on concession — Binding nature.

In order that decision of a Court on a concession should be considered to be a binding decision and a decision which should bind Courts of co-ordinate jurisdiction two conditions are necessary. The first is that the concession must be necessary for the decision of the case. The other condition is that the Court must accept that concession and put its own imprimatur upon that concession and must accept that concession as the true statement of the law. 56 Bom LR 873: AIR 1954 Bom 518 (524) (Pt E) (Pr 13) (DB).

——Privy Council — Obiter dicta — Statement made on concession made by counsel is not even an obiter dicta and will not have the sanctity of an endorsement of a particular legal position by their Lordships of the Privy Council. 53 Bom LR 192: ILR (1951) Bom 576: AIR 1951 Bom 57 (63) (Pt B) (Pr 15) (DB).

——Assumption in course of arguments — Value of.

When during the course of arguments, Judges in order to elicit the scope of an issue, or limit a proposition or to clarify the meaning or interpretation of any section or Art or for any other purpose, put questions or assume a position for the purposes of argument, anything said cannot be deemed to be an agreement with the persons making a particular submission so as to be binding. What is binding is what is stated in the order or judgment after due consideration of the arguments and the points involved in the case. ILR (1950) Hyd 345: AIR 1952 Hyd 166 (1951) (Pt D) (Pr 8) (DB).

2 (G). Ratio decidendi.

——Decision of High Court in suit between A and Government that recovery of certain forest dues as land revenue from A is illegal. Ratio of decision is binding on Government and they cannot collect similar dues from B on ground that B was not party to decision in suit between A and Government. See Civil P. C. (1908), Section 11. AIR 1952 Madh Pra 130 (DB).

——Extent of authority.

Per Raghava Rao J.— No case is binding authority except for what is actually decides. In considering the binding force of the judgment in a decided case sought to be used as precedent regard must be had to what is called the ratio decidendi. The ratio decidendi which ought to be neither unduly whittled down nor unduly extended consists of the enunciation of the reason or principle upon which the question before the Court has been actually determined. 1951 Mad WN 686: 64 Mad LW 689: 1951-2 Mad LJ 209: AIR 1952 Mad 1 (3) (Pt B) (Pr 13) (DB).

—— Ratio decidendi and dicta — Binding effect.

That part alone of a decision of a Court of law is binding upon Courts of co-ordinate jurisdiction and inferior Courts which consists of the enunciation of the reasons or principles upon which the question before the Court has really been determined. This underlying principle which forms the only authoritative element of a precedent is often termed as the ratio decidendi. Statements which are not necessary to the decisions, which go beyond the occasion and lay down a rule that is unnecessary for the purpose in hand (usually termed dicta) have no binding authority on another Court, though they may have some merely persuasive efficacy. 1955 Nag LJ 201: ILR (1956) Nag 246: 1956-57 ITR 10: AIR 1956 Nag 84 (85) (Pt B) (Pr 8) (DB).

——Formulation of ratio of judicial decision. — Not isolated part but entire context of judgment must be taken into account.

The formulation of a rule in a judicial decision is invariably embedded in the rest of the judgment and the entire context must be taken into account to discern the Court's intended meaning rather than take the formulation in isolation. AIR 1965 Punj 382 (386) (Pt B) (Pr 8) (DB).

——Authority of — Ratio decidendi always qualified by facts of the case — Not an authority for what logically follows from it.

It is well settled that a precedent is an authority on its own facts and for the legal proposition or principle of law enunciated therein, in order, therefore, to understand and apply the true ratio decidendi of a decided case it is always necessary to see its facts and the precise point which had to be decided. The generality of expressions found in a judgment can scarcely be intended to be the exposition of the whole law and they must always be governed and qualified by the particular facts of the case in which they are found. A precedent may not safely be quoted as binding authority for what may be argued to be merely a logical extension of the ratio decidendi. ILR (1954) 2 Punj 150: AIR 1954 Punj 239 (241) (Pt F) (Pr 22) (DB).

——Ratio decidendi, what amounts to.

To discover the ratio decidendi of a judicial decision is ethical and is creative evaluation rather than mechanical application of the precedent. Not everything contained in a judicial decision is a source of law for later cases. Observations upon some broader aspects of the law relating to the problem posed before a Court for answers on hypothetical questions canvassed during arguments or some comments on social or other questions may be found in prior judicial decisions; but the ratio decidendi of a decision binding for later cases is to be found in the principle of law formulated in the earlier decision which forms the basis for deciding the problem before the Court. Further extension of a precedent is subject to a continuous review in the light of logical analysis and differences of facts etc., involved in subsequent judicial controversies. 18 Pun LR 1952: AIR 1954 Punj 168 (180) (Pt B) (Pr 7) (DB).

2 (H). Overruling previous decision — Effect.

——Authority of previous decision overruled — Overruling, if retrospective.

That overruling of a previous decision is a declaration that the supposed rule never was law. Hence any intermediate transactions made on the strength of the supposed rule are governed by the law established in the overruling decision. The overruling is retrospective, except as regards matters that are res judicata or accounts that have been settled in the meantime. If the trial Court comes to a particular decision relying on a view of law laid down in a certain decision which before the matter is finally decided in second appeal is overruled, the second appellate Court is bound to apply the overruling decision to the facts of the case. 1952 Nag LJ 502: ILR (1953) Nag 991: AIR 1953 Nag 182 (187) (Prs 4, 5) (DB).

C——Same decision — Case before Supreme Court to resolve conflict of views between High Courts as a question of construction of provision in a Statute — Supreme Court should decide independently of majority view.

In construing a particular provision of a statute, the Supreme Court would carefully have in heart in mind the views expressed by the majority of the High Courts; but where there is sharp conflict of opinion on the point and in almost all the High Court's different views have been expressed at one time or the other, and the matter has been brought to the Supreme Court for resolving the said difference of opinion, it would be singularly inappropriate to invoke the doctrine of stare decisis. In such a case it is open to the Supreme Court and indeed it is its duty, to construe the relevant provision and decide which of the two conflicting views should hereafter prevail. ——Law deliberately pronounced.

Where the Supreme Court deliberately with the intention of settling the law pronounces upon a question, the pronouncement is the law declared by the Supreme Court within the meaning of Article 141 and is binding on all Courts in India. It cannot be treated as a mere 'obiter dictum'.

It is true that where a point has not been argued and certain general observations have been made which may seem to cover points not argued, before the Court, may not be considered to be binding, and in such cases the binding nature of the observation of the Court may be limited to the points specifically raised and decided by the Court. It is also true that pronouncements made on concessions of counsel, when a point is not argued, are not binding but otherwise even what is generally called an "obiter dictum", provided it is upon a point raised and argued, is binding upon the Courts in India. 1958 All WR (HC) 257: 1958 All LJ 278: ILR (1958) 2 All 725: 1958 Cri LJ 1364: AIR 1958 All 613 (615, 616) (FB) (Pts 11, 13) (DB).

——Obiter dicta of Supreme Court — (Constitution of India, Article 141).

—— Obiter dictum of Supreme Court.

Even an obiter of the Supreme Court deserves the highest respect and it is incumbent upon the High Court to accept even the obiter as correctly laying down the law. When in a case, a particular clause of a section or an Article calls for interpretation and in order to interpret it the Supreme Court interprets the whole section or Article and lays down the proper canon of construction, it is impossible to contend that that interpretation is not binding upon the High Court, unless of course the Supreme Court in any subsequent decision has departed from the interpretation laid down by it in the decision. ——Obiter dicta.

At a time when the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council was the highest judicial tribunal in the Empire, as it then was, the Courts in India felt that it would be in the interests in judicial uniformity and judicial discipline that not only they accepted the decisions of the Privy Council, which indeed were binding upon them, but also accepted the obiter dicta of the Privy Council as binding upon them. The Supreme Court has now taken the place of the Privy Council and the Courts must show the same respect for the obiter dicta of the Supreme Court that the Courts did for those of the Privy Council. The Supreme Court is the highest judicial tribunal in India today and it is as much necessary in the interests of judicial uniformity and judicial discipline that all the High Courts must accept as binding the obiter dicta of the Supreme Court in the same spirit as the High Courts accepted the obiter dicta of the Privy Council. S. 8 of the Abolition of Privy Council Jurisdiction Act, 1949, attached the binding value only to the decree and the order of the Privy Council and to nothing more. The reasoning and the rules laid down in the decision appear to have been deliberately excluded from having such effect. The reasoning and conclusions in the Privy Council decisions; therefore, do not have now the compelling force which they had before 26th January, 1950. They are, however, entitled to great respect and while they are no longer binding on the Courts in this country, still retain, like the decisions of any other country, whatever persuasive value they may intrinsically have. ——Decision of Judicial Committee — Binding effect.

Courts in India are bound by decisions of Judicial Committee in so far as they lay down the law on any subject. It is the ratio decidendi of such decisions that matters. If the ratio decidendi of an earlier decision of their Lordships is expressly or impliedly abandoned or disssented from in a subsequent decision of their Lordships, the duty of the Courts in India is to treat the earlier decision as obsolete. The only final tribunal which can lay down the law in this country is the Supreme Court; and if the Supreme Court has not laid down the law, then the final authority in Bombay State is the High Court of Bombay, and it was not open to the Tribunal to consider the decision of the Privy Council if it was at variance with decision of the High Court, but to follow its decision till the Supreme Court laid down the correct principle ——Conflict between Privy Council and Federal Court — Law before and after the Constitution — Constitution of India, Article 141.

Where, before the coming into force of the Constitution of India, there was a conflict between the view of the F. C. and the view of the P. C. of a later date the Courts were bound, under Section 212, Government of India Act, 1935, to follow the view of the P. C. The passing of the Constitution, however, cannot make the law declared by the F. C. prevail against that declared by the P. C. as Article 141 of the Constitution refers to the law declared by the Supreme Court and not to that declared by the F. C. ILR (1952) 2 All 467: AIR 1951 All 205 (218, 221) (Pt G) (Prs 30, 42, 43) (DB).

[Reversed on another point in AIR 1955 SC 600.]

——Privy Council and Federal Court — (Constitution of India, Article 374 (2)) — (Government of India Act (1935), Sections 212, 205, 208).

High Courts in India must follow the subsequent decision of the Privy Council and not the earlier decision of the Federal Court to the contrary, as long as there is no pronouncement by the Supreme Court on the question.

What Section 212, Government of India Act, really means is that the law declared by the Federal Court to the extent that the Federal Court is the ultimate authority, and the law declared by the Privy Council to the extent that the Privy Council is the ultimate, authority shall prevail. But Courts have got to look to the other section of the Government of India Act in order to decide which is the ultimate authority with regard to any particular case decided. For that purpose that must look at Sections 205 and 208.

The final authority as far as the Government of India Act was concerned in constitutional matters was not the Federal Court, but if an appeal was entertained by the Privy Council, it was the Privy Council that was the ultimate authority It was only when no leave was granted by the Federal Court and no special leave was granted by the Privy Council that the decision of the Federal Court became final and effect was given to it under Section 212. Where the Federal Court took a particualr view in a case, and that very point came up before the Privy Council and the Privy Council took a contrary view, it is that contrary view which must prevail under Section 212 and not the view of the Federal Court.

The judgments and orders of the Federal Court referred to in Article 374 (2) of the Constitution are judgments and orders which were delivered by the Federal Court in those suits, appeals and proceedings which were transferred to the Supreme Court. The provision does not mean that all judgments of the Federal Court delivered before the Constitution have been given the same efficacy and the same binding authority as the judgment of the Supreme Court delivered after the Constitution came into force.

Prior to the Constitution it would depend upon the Government of India Act as to the decisions of which Court shall have a binding effect upon the Courts, and there can be no doubt that before the Constitution was enacted the Privy Council was the final judicial authority in India whose decisions were binding on all Courts. After the Consitution has been enacted it is open to the Supreme Court to lay down the law contrary to the view expressed by the Privy Council prior to the enactment of the Constitution. 56 Bom ○——Federal Court — Principle in clear terms laid down by Federal Court — Principle must be followed, though obiter.

Per Meredith, J.:— Where the Federal Court has laid down a principle in clear terms, it is for all the subordinate Courts to follow it although observations are obiter. The Federal Court has taken over the functions of the Privy Council. It is the highest Court now existing for India even though the new Constitution has not come into force. It is of the utmost importance at this stage of constitutional development in India, when the foundations are actually being laid for the future sound development of the judiciary, that a tradition should become established of treating the pronouncements of the Federal Court with the utmost respect, so that it may successfully step into the shoes of the Privy Council. ○——Conflict of decisions — Division Bench and Single Judge — Duty of.

A single Judge is bound by a decision of a Divisional Bench exercising appellate jurisdiction. If there is a conflict of Bench decisions, he should refer the case to a Bench of two Judges who may refer it to a Full Bench. A single Judge cannot differ from a Divisional Bench unless a Full Bench or the Supreme Court overruled that decision specifically or laid down a different law on the same point. But he cannot ignore a Bench decision on the ground that some observations of Supreme Court made in a different context might indicate a different line of reasoning. A divisional Bench must ordinarily respect another Divisional Bench of Co-ordinate Jurisdiction; but if it differs, the case should be referred to a Full Bench. This procedure would avoid unnecessary conflict and confusion that otherwise would prevail. AIR 1955 Mad 551: (1955) 1 MLJ 49. Rel. on.

Even a single Judge shall not differ from a Judgment of another Judge of the same Court. If he does not agree, the proper course for him is to refer the case to a Bench of two Judges. If this procedure is followed from the beginning, there will not be any confusion created by conflict of decisions. The public will know their rights and the subordinate Courts will be in a position to administer the settled law without any difficulty: In the interests of the smooth and efficient judicial administration of the State the Andhra High Court will in future follow strictly the aforesaid procedure without any deviation. ——Authority of.

Judicial precedents of a High Court should not be lightly brushed aside nor distinguished unless on very substantial grounds. It may be that the judgment in a particular case may have been delivered by one of the other Judges of the High Court, but the decisions are decisions of the High Court and binding as precedents. ——Judgment of High Court — Not binding on Judges of same High Court or of other High Courts — Constitution of India, Art. 219 — Evidence Act (1872), Ss. 43 and 165.

A judgment of a High Court is not binding on the other Judges of the same Court or upon the Judges of any other High Court. This is so, because of S. 43 and S. 165 of the Evidence Act and also because of Art. 219 of the Constitution of India and the oath taken by High Court Judges under that Article that they will act according to their judgment and not according to the judgment of others. It is open to a High Court Judge to agree with the judgment of another, but if he does not agree he must follow his own judgment.

For a High Court Judge, to treat a judgment of a High Court as binding on him and to decide a case in accordance with such judgment would contravene the provisions of Article 219 of Constitution and the oath taken by him in accordance with that Article that he will perform his duties to the best of knowledge and judgment. The conclusions contained in his judgment must be based on his judgment and not on a judgment of another High Court Judge or another Bench of High Court Judges. But before coming to his judgment he may consider various authorities and having considered various authorities, he must come to his own judgment. He may accept the view of another High Court Judge or of a Bench or of another Bench of High Court Judges but the conclusion must be his own and must be based on his own judgment. Of course, he has to apply the laws of India and one of the laws of India is contained in Article 141 of the Constitution of India, which provides that the law declared by the Supreme Court shall be binding on all Courts within the territory of India. Except when there is a judgment of the Supreme Court declaring the law to be applied, High Court Judges must use their own judgment even if they consider various decisions before forming their judgment. But without forming their individual judgment, to say that they come to a certain conclusion because a certain judgment of a High Court is binding on them would be to contravene the oath taken under Article 219 of the Constitution of India. The principle of the independence of the judiciary is enshrined in the oath taken by Judges and that principle cannot be overridden by any other principle. 1954 (2) Cri LJ 541: AIR 1954 Cal 223 (226, 229) (Pt B) (Pr 12, 34).

——Judgment of High Court — Not binding on another Judge of the High Court.

A judgment of a High Court cannot be binding on another Judge of the High Court and only the judgments of the Supreme Court which declare the law are binding on other Courts. A Bench consisting of three Judges or five Judges continues to be a Division Bench under the High Court Charter. Civil Revn. Applin. No. 1122 of, 1960 (Guj) Rel. on. Further for a judge to treat a judgment of the same High Court as binding and decide the case before him in accordance with such a judgment would contravene the provisions of S. 165, Evidence Act and Art. 219 of the Constitution.

The question of the binding nature of the judgments has been dealt with in the Constitution of India and it merely makes a judgment of the Supreme Court declaring the law as binding. There is no provision anywhere in the law to the effect that a judgment of a Division Bench of a High Court is binding on a Division Bench of two Judges but not binding on a Division Bench of three judges. It is not open to the Courts to create or add to the law of the land because Courts are not law-makers or law givers. They only interpret the law.

At the same time if there is a judgment of a Division Bench of the same High Court and a case comes up before another Division Bench which is not inclined to agree with that view, the Division Bench may request the Chief Justice to refer the entire case to another Division Bench and the Chief Justice may transfer the case to another Division Bench. But when there is a judgment of the Supreme Court as to the interpretation of a provision of law, it is not open to the Indian Courts to refer to judgments of other High Courts. The law as declared by the Supreme Court is binding on all Courts. AIR 1963 Guj 305 (309, 310) (Pt B) (Prs 8, 13 to 15).

——Decision of Division Bench of High Court — Who can overrule.

The decisions of one Division Bench of a High Court can only be overruled by the Supreme Court. No Division Bench of any High Court whether it consists of 3 Judges, 5 Judges or 7 Judges is given the power by High Court Charter to overrule the decisions of another Division Bench even if it consists of 2 Judges. (1963) 4 Guj LR 1096: AIR 1963 Gui 256 (257) (Pt B) (Pr 2).

——Division Bench decision — Power to overrule rests only with Supreme Court and none else. (1963) 4 Guj LR 242: AIR 1963 Guj 28 (29) (Pt B) (Pr 3).

——Difference in opinion between two Judges — Case referred under Section 429, Criminal Procedure Code, to third Judge — Opinion of third Judge constitutes judgment, not the opinion of the differing Judge. 1962 MPLJ (Notes) 317: 1963 Jab LJ 137.

——Duty of Court to follow.

That a certain prior decision of the High Court did not consider the decision of another High Court taking a contrary view, is by itself not a sufficient ground for disagreeing with the view taken in the prior decision and referring the case in question to a larger Bench for determination. 1957 MPC 367: 1957 Jab LJ 261.

——Decision of High Court — Binding effect.

A decision of a Court does not depend for its validity on the number of years it has been in force, and the number of decisions in favour of the particular point. The moment a valid and binding decision of a High Court is given, the days of non-decision disappear automatically, and this decision takes its place till it is displaced or overruled. 1957 Mad WN 197: 70 Mad LW 212: AIR 1957 Mad 353 (354) (Pt A) (Pr 3).

——Erroneous decision of High Court — Binding effect — Procedure to get it reversed — (Civil P. C. (1908), Pre.).

A judgment of the High Court may sometimes be erroneous due to the omission on the part of counsel to place before the Judge the latest case law on the subject and to invite the attention to the latest amendments made to a statutory provision bearing on the case. In such circumstances, when the judgment has been reported the obvious method of clarifying the position of law is to request the High Court to constitute a larger Bench to reconsider the matter when another case involving the same question is taken up before the High Court. A private party may take recourse to this step if he is aggrieved by another judgment based on that decision, but if the quession is of far-reaching administrative importance, likely to affect several cases pending in the files of subordinate Magistrates and also cases that are likely to be instituted in the future, the Government themselves may, when the matter is brought to their notice through the Advocate-General, move the High Court for constituting a larger Bench to clarify the legal position.

A reported decision of the High Court is binding on everybody within the State, and the mere fact that like any other party Government is entitled to take appropriate steps to challenge its correctness before a proper Tribunal and get it reversed does not make it any the less binding on them. ILR (1958) Cut 496.

●——Different precedents for different territorial jurisdictions.

On a general question of law the High Court cannot have a precedent applicable to one portion of its territorial jurisdiction and a different precedent on the identical question applicable to the remaining portion of its territorial jurisdiction. ——Binding character—Decision by Single Judge in proceeding for company's winding up — Preliminary point decided by Division Bench on reference — Division Bench exercises jurisdiction vested, in single judge also and thus exercises concurrent jurisdiction — Decision of Division Bench is in exercise of same jurisdiction vested in Single Judge and should be treated as part of Single Judge decision by which winding up peti-

Normally speaking, it would indeed be proper that if on a revision preferred by some of the accused persons, a Judge of the High Court sitting in Single Bench has taken a view favourable to them and acquitted them, another Judge dealing with another revision on a subsequent occasion by a different set of the accused persons should, as far as possible, fall in line with the view which has already prevailed on the previous occasion but if he finds, with due deference to the Judge who dealt with the case on that occasion, that it is not possible to do so, then he is at liberty to strike a different line altogether. ■ ——Practice — Full Bench decision of High Court discarded by Single Judge of that Court — Such practice deprecated.

Dictum — "There was a decision of the Full Bench (viz.), AIR 1946 Mad 287 (FB), which interpreted the texts and laid down the law on the topic and it is somewhat surprising that the learned Single Judge of the Court thought it proper to refuse to be bound by the judgment and proceeded on his own line of reasoning based on authorities several of which were discussed by the Full Bench relying merely on the statement by the Editor or Mayne's Hindu Law that the decision required reconsideration. We cannot but deprecate this practice as it destroys the certainty of the law which the theory of judicial precedent seeks to establish. Not merely convention but rules framed by several High Courts require that where a learned Single Judge or a Division Bench does not agree with a Full Bench decision he or they either make a reference to the Full Bench or place the papers before the Chief Justice for such a reference being made. But that was not, however, what the learned Single Judge did in the present case. He took the unusual step of practically overruling the Full Bench and refusing to be bound by it.". Kamalammal v. ● ——Full Bench decision — Power of Single Judge to doubt and refer it for reconsideration.

In view of S. 29 (b) of the M. B. High Court Judicature Act, 1949, it is clear that a Single Judge can entertain a doubt in respect of a Full Bench ruling and write to the Chief Justice for reconsideration of it by a larger Full Bench. Babulal, ILR (1952) Madh B 1: AIR 1952 Madh Bha 171 (171, 172) (Pt A) (Prs 3, 5) (FB).

● ——Full Bench decision — Binding effect — Can be disregarded by subsequent Full Bench of more Judges.

The rule of practice laid down by every High Court and now very well settled is that a Single Judge is bound by a Division Bench ruling and the Division Bench is bound by a ruling of the Full Bench irrespective of the fact whether it is a unanimous decision or only a majority decision. Similarly a practice had grown up and is very well established that a former ruling of Full Bench of less number of Judges can be 'disregarded' by a subsequent majority opinion of the Full Bench consisting of more number of Judges. Though it is doubtful whether the subsequent Full Bench can in the strict sense of the term overrule the former Full Bench ruling; it does not imply that they cannot examine the matter or that it is not competent to them to take a contrary view, if they are convinced that the decision is erroneous.

So far as Full Bench decisions are concerned in India the practice has been that till a Superior Court sanctions one as a good law and overrules the other the High Court concerned and the Inferior Courts under the High Court are bound by the later ruling of a Full Bench consisting of more Judges. Chandulal v. Baboolal, ILR (1952) Madh B 1: AIR 1952 Madh Bhr 171 (172, 173) (Pt 2) (Pts 2, 3, 5) (FB).

○——Full Bench decision.

Per Majority (Subramania Iyer, J., Contra) — When specific questions of law are referred to a Full Bench for decision, the Full Bench is bound to give its verdict on those questions, irrespective of any consideration as to whether the questions are separately and independently referred or whether the questions are referred along with the case which gave rise to the order of reference. Where the case is also referred, the Full Bench will have to decide the case in the light of the answers to the questions referred, and on a consideration of the evidence on record. Even if the question of law referred to the Full Bench for decision does not strictly arise from the facts of the case, the decision of the Full Bench on those questions cannot be relegated to the position of obiter dicta. On the other hand, the decision will have to be accepted, as the decision will have to be accepted as the authoritative ruling of the Full Bench on the question which it was expressly called upon to decide. ——Conflict among decisions of Benches of same High Court — Practice to be followed.

When a Bench of the High Court gives a decision on a question of law, it should, in general be followed by other Benches unless they have reasons to differ from it, in which case the proper course to adopt would be to refer the question for the decision of a Full Bench.

It is desirable that in case of difference of opinion, the question should be authoritatively settled. It sometimes happens that an earlier decision given by a Bench is not brought to the notice of a Bench hearing the same question, and a contrary decision is given without reference to the earlier decision. When two such conflicting decisions are placed before a later Bench, the correct procedure to follow in such a case would be for the Bench hearing the case to refer the matter to a Full Bench in view of the conflicting authorities without taking upon itself to decide whether it should follow the one Bench decision or the other. Jafari Sahu v. Kaldewan Dubey, 1962 MLR 158: (1962) 1 SCJ 573: (1962) 1 Mad LJ (SC) 255: 1962 All WR (HC) 355: (1962) 1 Andh WR (SC) 255: (1962) 2 SCR 255: ILR 41 Pat 100: AIR 1962 SC 93 (97, 98) (Pt B) (Pts 9, 10).

○——Division Bench disagreeing with view of previous Division Bench of same High Court — Procedure — Reference to larger Bench.

A Division Bench should not take upon itself to say that an earlier Division Bench ruling of the same High Court cited before it, is wrong, but should follow the usual procedure in case of difference of opinion with an earlier decision, of referring the question to a larger Bench. Judicial discretion no less than legal propriety forms the basis of judicial procedure. Similarly, a Single Judge differing from a decision of another Single Judge in a previous case on a question of law should refer the case to a larger Bench instead of deciding the case in accordance with his own view. It is the uniform practice in all the High Courts in India that if one Division Bench differs from an earlier view on a question of law of another Division Bench, a reference is made to a larger Bench. In Calcutta High Court a rule to the effect has been in existence since 1867. Mahadeo Lal Kabodia v. Administrator-General of ●——Conflict of views between Full Benches of equal strength — Procedure.

Where a Full Bench of three Judges is inclined to take a view contrary to that of another Full Bench of equal strength, the better course would be to constitute a larger Bench. ——More than one decision of Supreme Court on same point — Duty of High Court Judge to reconcile them.

It is no doubt true that the task of the Judges of the High Court becomes very heavy where there are more than one decision of the Supreme Court on the same point, not following or overruling or explaining the other. The subsequent decision where the earlier decision has been explained and/or distinguished by their Lordships of the Supreme Court presents no difficulty, but where in the later decision the attention of their Lordships of the Supreme Court to the earlier decision was not at all drawn or where in the later decision though the earlier decision is noted but it is neither expressly overruled, explained or followed, the task of the Judges of the High Court becomes still heavier. In such circumstances it is the duty of the High Court Judges to attempt to reconcile and harmonise all the decisions of the Supreme Court given on the same point, though the most part of their time might be occupied in attempting the said reconciliation, instead of giving their attention to the main problem arising in the case. No attempt should be made by them by ignoring or bypassing or by not taking notice of all the Supreme Court decisions relevant on the point, however much time the hearing of the case might take, causing the piling up of the alleged arrears of work. To do the contrary, might utmost amount to disposals but not decisions (1964) 1 ITJ 246: 68 Cal WN 281: (1964) 54 ITR 54: AIR 1964 Cal 254 (257) (Pt B) (Pr 11) (DB).

——Earlier Privy Council decision laying down law giving good reasons — Later decision expressing contrary view — Which prevails.

When an earlier Privy Council decision lays down the law and legal principles by giving good reasons therefor and another Privy Council decision expresses a contrary view without adverting to the earlier decision at all, and without giving much reason for its dictum then the Court will prefer to follow the earlier one that has given reason. An ipse dixit emanating even from Privy Council need not bind the Court from following an earlier Privy Council decision that has been followed consistently for well over 50 years. ——Decision of Single Judge — How far binding on another Single Judge.

It is true that Judges are not entitled to bind their successors by a construction of an Act which the language plainly does not justify but a Judge sitting singly is generally bound to follow a decision of another single Judge of the same High Court on a question of law leaving it to the Court of Appeal to say whether or not that decision is wrong. 55 Cal WN 608: ILR (1952) 1 Cal 76: AIR 1952 Cal 113 (121) (FB) (Pr 12).

——Binding effect — Decision of one Division Bench not binding on another Bench.

When a Division Court gives a decision, it is acting on behalf of the High Court and the decision of the High Court cannot be overruled or treated as incorrect by the same High Court. One Division Court cannot sit in appeal over the decision of another Division Court. To hold that a Division Court of more than two Judges can overrule a Division Court consisting of two Judges is not justified by the Constitution of the High Court, would also lead to anomalies, and would also result in chance and accident. Where the law is written law as in India, the binding nature of the written law cannot be superseded by decisions of Courts of co-ordinate jurisdiction. At the same time, there is no doubt that previous decisions of the Courts of co-ordinate jurisdiction are entitled to the greatest and most profound respect and must as far as possible be followed if the reasoning adopted is convincing. Though one Division Court cannot overrule or declare as incorrect the decision of another Division Court it has the liberty of differing, if necessary. It is not competent for one Division Court even if it is a Full Bench, to give directions to another Division Court as to in what manner it should come to a conclusion or exercise its judgment. AIR 1941 Bom 403, Not Foll. 1952 (2) Cri LJ 830: AIR 1952 Bom 250 (252, 254 to 257) (FB) (Prs 3, 18, 19, 21, 23) (DB).

——Extent of binding character of precedents in India — Principle of superiority of numerical strength — Applicability to Full Benches.

Per Bhagwati, J.: — The doctrine of judicial precedents as developed and formulated in England has achieved some measure of certainty in law but has laid itself open to the criticism of rigidity. The position in India is, however, different and the doctrine as it prevails in India has achieved a certain amount of balance between the opposing point of view and without sacrificing the merit of certainty, it removes to a large extent the vice of rigidity in law by accepting in principle of superiority of numerical strength in its application to the High Courts in India. The rule which requires a Court to abide by the decision of another Court of co-ordinate jurisdiction is sacrificed in favour of the principle of superiority of numerical strength in the case of Single Judges and Division Benches of the High Court. A Division Bench of the High Court is not bound by the previous decisions of a Single Judge of the High Court and can in effect overrule such decision by pronouncing it to be incorrect and, similarly, a Full Bench of the High Court is not bound by the previous decision of a Division Bench of the High Court and can examine the correctness of such decision and declare that the law is not correctly laid down in such decision. In these cases, the principle of superiority of numerical strength amongst Benches of co-ordinate jurisdiction is recognised and given effect to and a departure is made from the rule which requires that a court should hold itself bound by the decision of another of co-ordinate jurisdiction.

The same principle of superiority of numerical strength applies [illegible] Benches of co-ordinate jurisdiction prevails so far as Full Benches of the High Court are concerned. It is of course axiomatic that a Full Bench constituted of three Judges of the High Court, which is the minimum strength of a Full Bench, is bound by the previous decision of another Full Bench constituted of three Judges of the High Court. That this should be so is clear from the fact that both the Full Benches are Benches of co-ordinate jurisdiction and the numerical strength of the Judges composing both the Full Benches is the same. But a Full Bench consisting of a larger number of Judges can override the decision of another Full Bench consisting of a lesser number of Judges and declare that the law was not correctly laid down in such decision.

The result in all such cases of course would be that the previous decision of a Single Judge, Division Bench or Full Bench would cease to be a binding authority and would, for all practical purposes, be regarded as overruled by the later decision of the Division Bench, Full Bench or Full Bench consisting of larger number of Judges. State of Gujarat v. Gordhandas Keshavji Gandhi. (1961) 3 Guj LR 268: AIR 1962 Guj 128 (121, 124) (FB) (Pr 7, 17) (FB).

——Previous inconsistent decisions — High Court free to follow either.

Where there are previous inconsistent decisions of its own, the High Court is free to follow either. It can follow the earlier, but equally, if it thinks fit, it can follow the later. (1962) 3 Guj LR 508.

——Principle of comity of judgments — Exception to — Decision given per incuriam — What is.

One of the well-recognised exceptions to the rule that a decision of a court of co-ordinate jurisdiction should be followed by another court similarly constituted, is that a judgment delivered per incuriam is not binding on a court of co-ordinate jurisdiction.

The doctrine of binding precedent of a co-ordinate court is not absolute, in its applicability. It does, however, rest strongly on the principle of comity which requires uniformity of decisions of courts and certainty about the law. Precedents of a court of co-ordinate jurisdiction should be respected and followed unless there is strong permissible reason for not doing so, for instance, in case of a decision delivered incuriam. It is not, however, every relevant consideration or aspect or fact of a question or point for determination about which there may have been some mistake or misapprehension or which might have been overlooked by the court which decided the question or point that can be regarded as adequate ground for treating the decision as per incuriam. (1960) 1 Guj LR 242: (1961-62) 21 FJR 573: (1962) 2 Lab LJ 194: AIR 1961 Guj 22 (26) (Pt C) (Prs 10, 11) (DB).

A Judge has always the right of expressing his own opinion and indicating that he is not in agreement with an authority binding on him, but he is nevertheless in duty bound to follow it. ● ——Two conflicting Full Bench decisions — Effect — Civil P. C. (1908), Pre.

Per Raghava Rao J.: — The fact that a Full Bench decision of four Judges has not been accepted by another Full Bench of four Judges does not certainly show that the former has ceased to be and that the latter has, in its place, become binding authority on the point. Nor does the mere fact that later Divisional Benches have accepted the later Full Bench ruling and refused to consider themselves bound by the earlier Full Bench ruling make any difference to the continuing existence of the conflict between the two Full Bench decisions unless one of them is upheld and the other overruled formally and in an appropriate manner. If there are two conflicting Full Bench decisions of equal strengh on any point, it is necessary that the conflict should be submitted to fuller Bench for determination in any case in which the question on which the conflict exists does arise for decision. If this course is not adopted, courts subordinate to the High Court are left without guidance as to which Full Bench ruling to follow and which to reject. Peramanayakam Pillai v. ——Decision of Division Bench is binding on another Division Bench.

The decision of a Division Bench is binding on another Division Bench as much as it is binding on a single Judge. ——Desirability of avoiding conflicting decisions by Single Judges.

If a single Judge of a High Court finds that the decision of another single judge reported or otherwise, has taken a view which does not commend itself to that Judge, the best course to follow is to refer the case for decision by a larger Bench and bring it to the notice of the Chief Justice. Otherwise, there is the danger of conflicting precedents confusing the subordinate judiciary.

The view taken by a single Judge is either correct or otherwise. If it is correct it has got to be followed by another single Judge or even by a larger Bench. If it is erroneous, then the proper course is to have that opinion revised by a larger Bench, so that the subordinate judiciary may know where they stand. The most essential quality of precedents is that they should render the law clearly ascertainable by lawyers who advise litigants and not to add to the confusion, which very often does arise as a result of conflicting decisions given by single Judges. 1952 Nag LJ 488: ILR (1952) Nag 453: AIR 1953 Nag 38 (39) (Pt B) (Pr 7) (DB).

——Decision of single Judge — Reference to larger Bench — Practice.

It is true that a single Judge of a High Court should ordinarily follow other single Bench decisions and that in case the former does not agree with the view taken therein he should refer the matter to a larger Bench. Where however though there were single Bench decisions holding that there was inherent power of review vesting in the tribunals under the Motor Vehicles Act there was no grave or serious manifest injustice in the matter and there was therefore no occasion for the exercise of the discretionary power of granting a prerogative writ against the order of review, the High Court did not refer the matter to a larger Bench and the case was remanded back to the Appellate Authority for considering the whole matter over again. 64 Punj LR 884: AIR 1963 Punj 92 (94, 95) (Pt B) (Pr 7).

——Authority of — Extent of — Judge disagreeing with judgment of single Judge of the same High Court — Question should be referred to larger bench.

A precedent is an authority on its own facts and it is permissible to refuse to accept a mere logical extension of a given decision. The doctrine of precedents is not something to be developed by analogy.

A judgment of a single Judge on a point of law, though technically not binding on another Single Judge, is entitled to respect and should in the interest of uniformity and certainty be followed. In case the correctness of the law laid down by a single Judge is doubted by another single Judge, the matter should unhesitatingly be referred to a larger Bench for an authoritative decision. When the legal proposition laid down in the earlier decision is in conflict with the law laid down by a higher or superior Court or by a larger Bench of the same High Court, the more authoritative decision undoubtedly commands greater respect and priority, being binding on both the Courts. 9. Duty of Subordinate Courts and Tribunals.

——Duty of subordinate Courts.

Subordinate Courts are bound to follow implicitly the decision of their own High Court — AIR 1946 All 509. Rel. on. 1966 All WR (HC) 155: 1960 All Cr R 125: 1960 All LJ 216.

——Lower Court to follow ruling of High Court specifically dealing with the point and not those impliedly dealing with it. See Civil P. C. (1908), Preamble. AIR 1954 All 486.

——Subordinate Courts — Duty to follow ruling of High Court.

When there is a specific ruling dealing with the point, the Sessions Judge is not justified in following the other cases which only impliedly accepted that point. The principle always is that a decision of the High Court is a ruling on a point which is specifically decided in that case and where such a specific decision is available cases, in which action may have been taken contrary to that view, should not be followed. It is only when there is no specific decision by the High Court that it may be possible for the lower Courts to follow the course adopted by the Court impliedly in other cases. 1954 All WR (HC) 175: 1954 All LJ 185: 1954 Cri LJ 1031: AIR 1954 All 486 (486) (Pt A) (Pr 2).

● ——Duty of subordinate Courts.

Subordinate Courts are bound to follow bench decisions of their High Court even if they do not agree with it. Bankey Lal v. Babu, 1953 All LJ 349: 1953 All WR (HC) 293: ILR (1953) 2 All 299: AIR 1953 All 747 (748, 749) (Pt C) (Pr 15) (FB).

——Magistrate is bound to follow authority of his High Court — Disregard of authority amounts to insubordination.

A Magistrate is bound to follow the authority of the High Court to which he is subordinate. Whenever, therefore, he is called upon to decide a question of law it becomes his duty to ascertain whether any pronouncement of the High Court exists on the point. Omission to do so is as much dereliction of duty as omission to refer to sections of the statute. The disregard of authority is, however, something still more objectionable. It amounts to an act of insubordination. 51 Cri LJ 436: 1949 All LJ 413: ILR (1950) All 935: AIR 1950 All 134 (137) (Pt B) (Pr 11).

——Practice — Duty of Bench and Bar — Subordinate Courts must refer to decisions binding on them — Bench and Bar must keep themselves informed of march and progress of law, both statutory and case law — They should read law reports regularly — When ignorance of law is no excuse in case of illiterate person, it is much more so with them who are concerned with administration of law. (1954) 2 Mad LJ (Andh) 195: 1954 Andh LT (Civil) 163: AIR 1955 Andhra 49 (54) (Pt E) (Pr 27) (DB).

● ——Special Tribunal — Duty of.

Income-tax tribunal is bound by decision of High Court to which reference lies, unless the decision was overruled or modified: Per Ram

Labhaya, J.— Proper course for tribunal is to follow the ruling and then make a reference to the High Court at the instance of the Commissioner if it felt aggrieved by the decision. Sm. Jyotikana v. Commissioner of Income-tax, Assam, (1954) 26 ITR 424: AIR 1954 Assam 113 (115, 116) (Pt A) (Prs 4, 7) (SB).

——Decision of High Court — Binding nature of — Subordinate Courts and Tribunals, duty of, to follow. (1965) 69 Cal WN 249.

——Interpretation of provision of section of statute by Judge — It has a binding force and due weight must be given to it in subsequent cases — Precedent.

If a particular case has interpreted the provisions of a particular section of a statute whether it is in course of a civil proceeding or in course of a criminal prosecution the interpretation so put will have a binding force and a due weight may be given to the effect of such interpretation by Judges who are confronted with similar questions in subsequent cases coming up before them for determination. ('64) 68 Cal WN 974.

——Special Tribunal — Duty of Income-tax Tribunal — (Income-tax Act (1922), S. 33).

The Tribunal cannot disregard the decision in a case arising in the State of West Bengal. Its clear duty is to follow it, irrespective of what views it might itself hold and leave it to the Commissioner to bring up the matter on a reference to the High Court, if he was so advised. (1953) 24 ITR 70: 92 Cal LJ 94: AIR 1954 Cal 225 (231) (Pt I) (Pr 19) (DB).

——Extent of authority — Earlier and later decisions.

A judicial decision on a question of law is not a piece of legislation but only an exposition or correct interpretation of what the law on the subject is. The fact that there was a previous judicial decision in which another view was taken does not make the view taken in the later decision a fresh piece of legislation. The later decision only says what the correct law is and amounts in effect only to a pronouncement that the earlier case was decided wrongly. Therefore, the subordinate Courts would be acting wrongly in not following the later decision. 1958 KLT 83: 1958 Ker LJ 83.

——Tendency to refer decisions of other High Courts to decisions of one's own High Court deprecated.

The growing tendency on the part of the subordinate Courts as well as of the lawyers to take recourse to the decisions of other High Courts in matters covered by decisions of their own High Court must be deprecated. Madh BLJ 1955 HCR 1941: AIR 1956 Madh Bha 44 (47) (Pt B) (Pr 6) (DB).

——Contempt of Courts Act (1926), S. 1 — Criticism of High Court's decision by inferior judicial officer or Magistrate — Amounts to contempt. See Contempt of Courts Act (1926), Section 1. AIR 1953 Madh Bha 60.

——Subordinate Courts are bound to follow decisions of the High Court. 1965 Mah LJ (Notes) 108.

——Binding nature of — Disregard of — Effect.

When the High Court interprets a statutory provision and declares the law it is binding on all the administrative officers and they are obliged to follow it. Where the Regional Transport Authority indulged in sort of juggling in order to by-pass the two decisions of the High Court the attempt was held condemnable. (1964) 2 Mad LJ 305: 1964 Mad WN 466: ILR (1965) 1 Mad 376.

■ ——Conflict between decisions of High Court — Rule to be adopted by subordinate Courts.

The normal rule as to the precedents is that subordinate Courts are bound, in the absence of any decision of the Supreme Court, to follow the decision of the High Court to which they are subordinate. Where, however, there is a conflict between two decisions of the High Court, the rule to be adopted is as follows. Where the conflict is between the judgment of a single Judge and a Bench or between a Bench and a larger Bench, the decision of the Bench or the larger Bench, as the case may be, will have to be followed. But where the conflict is between two decisions both pronounced by a Bench consisting of the same number of Judges and the Subordinate Court after a careful examination of the decisions comes to the conclusion that both of them directly apply to the case before it, it will then be at liberty to follow that decision which seems to it more correct, whether such decision be the later or the earlier one. To enable the subordinate Court to do so, the two apparently conflicting decisions must directly relate to and expressly decide the question that arises before the Court; otherwise a Subordinate Court should follow that ruling which specifically deals with the point. Rama Subbarayalu Reddiar v. Rengammal, 1962 Mad WN 489: ILR (1962) Mad 1001: 75 Mad LW 452: (1962) 2 Mad LJ 318: AIR 1962 Mad 450 (452) (Pt A) (Pr 4) (FB).

——Disregard of decisions.

Disregard of decisions which are binding would amount even to dereliction of duty. 1956 Cr LJ 1202: 69 Mad LW 788: 1956 All WR (Supp) 114: (1956) 2 MLJ 43: AIR 1956 Mad 536 (540) (Pt F) (Pr 23) (DB).

——Disregard of reported decisions.

Dictum— Disregard of the reported decisions of the High Courts is highly objectionable on the part of the lower Courts and prosecutors and, as has been repeatedly pointed out, amounts to an act of insubordination. 1953 Mad WN 929: 1956 Cr LJ 1079: AIR 1956 Mad 452 (453) (Pt C) (Pr 9).

——Subordinate Courts — Duty of.

Every Magistrate is bound to follow the authority of his High Court and it is his duty to keep himself informed of the current decisions of at least his own High Court. Omission to do so is as much dereliction of duty as omission to refer to sections of the statute. (1953) 2 MLJ 28: 1953 Mad WN 494: 1953 Mad WN (Cri) 174: AIR 1955 NUC (Mad) 424.

● ——Decision of superior Court — Binding effect — Extent.

Per Mudholkar J.: — Where a decision of a superior Court is based upon more than one ground or supported by more than one reason, it is not open to an inferior Court, which is bound to follow its decision, to treat either of the reasons given as an obiter. Laxmibai v. State of M. P., 1951 Nag LJ 377: ILR (1951) Nag 563: AIR 1951 Nag 94 (117) (Pt G) (Pr 167) (FB).

[Held overruled on another point by AIR 1951 SC 332 in AIR 1953 Nag 58.]

——Subordinate Courts — Duty of.

Courts are bound implicitly to follow the decisions of the High Court to which they are subordinate. To render a decision of the High Court binding upon the Subordinate Courts, it is unnecessary that it should have been reported. An unreported decision is not any-the-less authority. To enable a Subordinate Court to find the law as laid down by the High Court, the production of a certified copy of the judgment is enough. ILR (1953) Trav-Co 905: 1954 KLT 941: AIR 1954 Trav-Co 226 (229, 230) (Pt G) (Prs 12, 14) (DB).

——Subordinate Courts — Duty of.

——Practice of Bombay High Court is to fall in line with decisions of other High Courts in the matter of interpreting Income-tax Act which is an all-India Act. But when it finds that a view is taken which is contrary to the provision of a section of the Income-tax Act, it cannot fall in line with such a view. More than authorities it is its duty to give effect to the provisions of the Act itself and when these are clear, no authority can persuade it to take a contrary view. (Civil P. C. (1908), Preamble). (1956) 29 ITR 903: 58 Bom LR 697: ILR (1956) Bom 648: AIR 1956 Bom 321 (323) (Pt C) (Pr 6) (DB).

——Rival views — That which gives Court wider powers to remedy defects and meet ends of justice should be followed. 1962 Kash LJ 115: AIR 1963 J and K 10 (10) (Pt B) (Pr 2).

——Conflict of decisions of different High Courts — Law to be followed — Practice in Kutch.

In Kutch, the decisions of the Bombay High Court are usually preferred where there is a conflict of opinion with the other High Courts and if a Court differs from that High Court it is desirable to state briefly the reasons for it. AIR 1952 Kut 14 (14) (Pt A) (Pr 5).

——Decision of other High Court to be followed in the absence of any conflicting decision of M. P. High Court.

The executing Court refused to follow a case direct on the point on the ground that it was a decision of another High Court.

Held, that the question of following or not following decisions of another High Court arose only when there was a conflict between the decisions of M. P. High Court and the decisions of other High Courts. In the instant case no conflict existed so the decision of other High Court was to be followed. 1962 MPLJ (Notes) 302.

——Different High Court — Decision of— Value of.

The Courts should ordinarily follow a decision of an other High Court in matters such as income-tax when it is desirable to lay down a common policy. But where the wording of the section is not clearly in favour of a decision against the tax-payer and it is, to say the least, a case of doubt, the statute has to be interpreted in favour of the subject when the Court is dealing with a case of fiscal enactment. ——Decisions of Madras High Court before 5-7-1954 are binding on Andhra High Court.

The High Court of Andhra is bound by the decisions of the Madras High Court delivered before 5th July, 1954, not only on the ground that the High Court of Madras and the High Court of Andhra were of co-ordinate jurisdiction, but also on the ground of stare decisis: AIR 1955 Andh 87: 1955 An WR 150 (FB), Foll. (1961) 1 Andh WR 202: 1961 Andh LT 233: ILR (1961) 1 Andh Pra 499: AIR 1961 Andh Pra 305 (307) (Pt A) (Pr 6) (DB).

● ——Decisions of Madras High Court before 5th July, 1954 — Binding effect on Andhra Pradesh High Court — Decision reversed by Full Bench decision of Madras High Court after inauguration of Andhra High Court — Effect — Value of Full Bench decision — Reference to Full Bench of Andhra Pradesh High Court.

In the Order of Reference— Bench decision of the Madras High pronounced before 5th July, 1954, is binding on the Andhra High Court. A precedent overruled is definitely and formally deprived of all authority. It becomes null and void like a repealed statute. If the judgment of a Division Bench of the Madras High Court is reversed by a Full Bench of that High Court after 5th July, 1954, the Division Bench of the Andhra Pradesh High Court might, if they agree with the decision of the Full Bench refer the matter to a Full Bench of the Andhra Pradesh High Court: AIR 1955 Andhra 87; 1955 Andh WR 150 (FB), Rel. on.

Per Full Bench — Full Bench decision of the Madras High Court after the inauguration of the Andhra High Court is not a binding authority on the Andhra (now Andhra Pradesh) High ——Conflict between two bench decisions of Madras High Court — Duty of single Judge of Andhra High Court.

The decisions of the Madras High Court rendered before 5th July, 1954, are binding upon the Andhra High Court and if there is a conflict between two binding Bench decisions, it should be resolved by a Full Bench. ● ——Decisions of Madras High Court delivered prior to 5th July, 1954, how far binding on Andhra High Court — Courts of co-ordinate jurisdiction — Meaning of.

Per Full Bench— The binding nature of the precedents of one Court on another depends upon whether such Courts are Courts of co-ordinate jurisdiction or not. Co-ordinate jurisdiction does not connote the same idea as concurrent jurisdiction or simultaneous jurisdiction. It would not be inappropriate to call a successor Court a Court of co-ordinate jurisdiction with its predecessor, if their jurisdictions at the point of time they exercised it are similar to or co-extensive with each other.

The test to ascertain whether two High Courts are of the co-ordinate jurisdiction or not, is whether the two Courts are of equal rank and status or of equal authority and exercise similar jurisdiction.

The Andhra High Court is in a real sense an offshoot of the Madras High Court exercising the same jurisdiction and administering the same laws, which the Madras High Court had exercised before the 5th July, 1954, in the territories included in the Andhra State. To use a convenient terminology, the Andhra High Court may be treated as one succeeding to the High Court of Madras and exercising all the powers and administering the same law which the Madras High Court exercised in the territories comprised in the Andhra State. The Andhra High Court and the Madras High Court prior to 5th July, 1954, are therefore, Courts of co-ordinate jurisdiction; even if the two High Courts are deemed to be not Courts of co-ordinate jurisdiction, the Andhra High Court shall follow the Madras decision on the principle of stare decisis in the same manner that the Madras High Court follows its own decisions and subject to the same limitations. AIR 1955 Andhra 49: (1954) 2 MLJ 195 (Andhra). Overruled.

Per Bhima Sankaram, J.:— Where territories under the jurisdiction of one High Court are divided into two, each to be under the jurisdiction of a separate High Court, it seems to me that the principle underlying the rule of precedents requires the continuity of case-law to be maintained, because there is no reason at all why the certainty of the law should be affected. The Andhra High Court is in one sense, new of course, but its jurisdiction is a jurisdiction which once was subject to one High Court and until 5th July, 1954, governed by the case law as laid down by that High Court. A Court should be reluctant to favour innovations unless they are indispensable.

There may be cases where decisions rendered by the Madras High Court before 5th July, 1954, may be overruled by the Madras High Court itself, but in such cases where it is brought to the notice of this Court that the earlier decisions have been departed from, in Madras, this Court will re-consider them in the light of the subsequent rulings. M. Subbarayudu v. The State, 1955 Cr LJ 770: 1955 Andh WR 150: 1955 Andh LT (Cri) 53: ILR (1955) Andhra 1: AIR 1955 Andhra 87 (90 to 95) (Pt A) (Prs 7, 12, 16, 17, 18, 21, 31, 33) (FB).

——Full Bench decision of Madras High Court— Not binding on Andhra High Court.

The Andhra High Court which was inaugurated in July, 1954, is not bound by the Full Bench of the Madras High Court or other High Courts and is at liberty to examine the question in the light of well-established legal principles and arrive at a proper conclusion. 1954 Andh LT (Civil) 163: (1954) 2 MLJ (Andhra) 195: AIR (1955) Andhra 49 (54) (Pt D) (Pr 25).

——Decisions of Madras High Court — Duty of Subordinate Courts in Andhra State.

The Andhra High Court which was inaugurated in July 1954, is not bound to blindly follow all the decisions of the Madras High Court and is entitled to examine the soundness or the correctness of those decisions in proper and appropriate cases. But those decisions are entitled to the greatest respect and weight. The Subordinate Courts in Andhra State are primarily bound to follow the decisions of the Andhra High Court. If there are no decisions of the Andhra High Court directly governing the case, they ought to follow the decisions of the Madras High Court as they have been previously doing in preference to the decisions of other High Courts. It is only when there are no decisions of the Andhra High Court or the Madras High Court dealing with the point that they are free to follow the decisions of other High Courts. 1955 Cr LJ 339: 1954 Andh LT (Cri) 38: (1954) 2 MLJ (Andhra) 158: AIR 1955 Andhra 33 (36) (Pt B) (Prs 10, 11).

●——Decisions of Bombay High Court prior to 1-5-1960 — Binding on Gujarat High Court — Bombay Reorganisation Act (1960), S. 87 — Law in force — Connotation of.

The decisions of the High Court of Bombay given prior to the appointed day, viz., 1-5-1960 are binding on the Gujarat High Court. The expression 'any law in force immediately before the appointed day' in Section 87 of the Bombay Reorganisation Act, 1960, must lead to the conclusion that decisions of the High Court of Bombay given before the appointed day are binding on Gujarat High Court as the law in force.

Simply because the Gujarat High Court is in a sense a successor to the High Court of Bombay in respect of the territories which now form part to the State of Gujarat, it cannot be a Court of co-ordinate jurisdiction with that predecessor. ●——Conflict between two Full Bench decisions — Subsequent Division Bench not referring question to larger Bench — Refusal on ground that earlier decision did not fully discuss the question and that it was noticed in later decision — Refusal not justified.

When a Division Bench finds that there is a conflict between two Full Bench decisions, their refusal to refer the case to a larger Bench is not justified by the fact that the question was not as elaborately discussed in one decision as in the other or that the earlier Full Bench decision had been noticed in the later dicision. The necessity for reference to a larger bench arises only from a conflict and if there would have been a conflict if the earlier decision had not been noticed in the later decision, it would exist even if it had been noticed. ● ——Decisions of High Courts of covenanting States forming Madhya Bharat — Binding effect — Duty of subordinate Courts— Held that (1949) 1 Madh BLR 81: AIR 1950 MB 31 (FB), should be disregarded.

By no stretch of imagination Madhya Bharat High Court can be looked upon as successor to Indore High Court or any High Court of any Covenanting States. It was in fact a voluntary merger of 22 smaller units, some of them, of course, with distinct progressive outlook but all with autocratic rule, to form a larger unit of Madhya Bharat in order to fall in line with other sister States of India with democratic institutions. It is true that these smaller units had integrated to form the new Madhya Bharat State; but it is not true that the High Courts of Covenanting States had also integrated to form the present Madhya Bharat High Court. In fact the High Courts in Covenanting States were altogether abolished and an independent High Court with power and stability and fresh outlook had come into existence. Consequently High Courts of former Covenanting States cannot be regarded as of equal rank with the present Madhya Bharat High Court.

If rulings of any High Court of Covenanting States are cited before the subordinate Courts and if any guidance is needed, they should be asked to consider them on their own merits. Where there is no ruling of the Madhya Bharat High Court or of the Supreme Court, and if a ruling of a High Court in India differs from a ruling of a High Court in a Covenanting State, the subordinate Courts should follow that ruling which, in their own judgment, appears to be the better ruling, but it does not imply that they are bound to follow a ruling of any High Court, if in the exercise of their own reason and judgment they come to a different conclusion.

Held, that the Full Bench decision in (1949-1 Madh B LR 81; AIR 1950 MB 31 FB) should be disregarded and that the decision of former Indore High Court should not be held binding on the Madhya Bharat High Court or on the Courts subordinate to it. Decisions of the Indore High Court, being of a tribunal of co-ordinate jurisdiction, are binding authorities in the same manner as though they are decisions of the Madhya Bharat High Court, and should be followed by all subordinate Courts in respect of matters decided therein. The Tribunals constituted under Andhra Pradesh (Andhra Area) Estates (Abolition and Conversion into Ryotwari) Act cannot therefore ignore the decisions of the High Court. Even apart from the question whether the doctrine of precedents could apply in full vigour to Tribunal of the nature of Board of Revenue, it is certainly a consideration of natural justice that the authorities in the sphere of taxation cannot hold the citizen to the whims and caprices in matters, concerning essential practices of trade and business allowing deductions under certain statutory provisions in some cases and disallowing such deductions in some others, although the circumstances, appertaining to both the categories, were exactly similar. In the matter of operation of Acts like the Sales Tax Act, the Board of Revenue is, ordinarily, the highest authority and decisions of that Tribunal are binding on the taxing authorities. It is only just and fair that the citizen who has taken his guidance from the earlier decisions of the Board shall not be allowed to be prejudiced or victimised by sudden and unreasoned reversal of the view point of that highest authority. 67 Cal WN 179: (1964) 15 STC 186: AIR 1963 Cal 409 (415) (Pt E) (Pr 24) (DB).

23. Law Reports.

● ——Law reports — Reporting rules — Decisions on question of fact — Reporting deplored — Precedents.

The practice of reporting decisions on questions of fact, which do not materially assist future Courts, has to be deplored. To report a case of "very special facts" is to mislead the profession. A case deciding only question of fact is no better reportable then a case deciding a question of law but of "very special facts".

A case is an authority for what it actually decides and not for cases to arise in future and a proposition of law contained in a judgment, however widely it may be expressed, is applicable only to the facts of the case.

Judicial declaration unaccompanied by judicial application is not authority. Jawala Mohan v. State. 1962 All LJ 1119: 1962 All Cri R 471: 1962 All WR (HC) 880: 1963 (1) Cri LJ 404: ILR (1963) 1 All 585: AIR 1963 All 161 (165) (Pt C) (Prs 6, 7) (FB).

——Law reports — Authority of — Proposition of law only — Facts stated in a reported ruling — If proved by.

The ruling of a case is an authority for the proposition of law contained therein. Facts (such as admissions) contained in the judgment published in a Law Report are to be proved by filing the same as a piece of evidence to enable the other side to adduce rebutting evidence of the said facts. 1952 ALJ 310: AIR 1953 All 378 (379) (Pr 6).

——Law reporting — Necessity of reporting High Court decisions.

Decisions of High Court dealing with questions of law deserve due publicity and should be liberally reported in the Law Reports. If some one were to produce certified copies of the unreported Bench decisions of the High Court and the reported Bench decisions were also to be cited the subordinate Court might well find itself in somewhat embarrassing position for it may not be an easy task to deduce agreed ratio from the observations contained in these decisions. It is true that sometimes even the reported decisions may not be cited but then such lapses cannot be helped. One must remember that this Republic is under the rule of law which has certain fundamental requisites. Two of such requisites are: (i) that law must be certain so that people can act safely on it and (ii) law is readily ascertainable so that people may know what their rights and duties are. These requisites may well be considered to constitute the basic structure—or at least a substantial part of it—on which the rule of law depends. Liberal reporting of judgments helps to bring them to the notice of the bar, the Courts and the people whereas unduly restricted reporting tends to keep the law concealed in the Court record rooms. A Court decision rightly decided deserves publicity on its own merit, a decision which may be considered by some to be wrong must also be open to easy access and scrutiny so that it may be reconsidered and the correct principle of law finally laid down by the superior tribunal. 1964 Cur LJ 192: AIR 1964 Punj 346 (Pt C) (Pr 13) (DB).

——Necessity of unrestricted reporting — Judicial precedents.

One cannot over-emphasise the importance of certainty and easy ascertainability of law in all legal systems; more so in our system of administration of justice where judicial precedents play a vital role in interpreting the existing law, conflicting judicial precedents must not, so far as possible, be allowed to remain in the field and it is eminently desirable in the interest of rule of law to strive to sustaim uniformity in this domain, so that law may be both certain and predictable. The proper functioning of the rule of law requires liberal and not restricted report ing of decisions laying down law for the guidance of the citizens, the bar and the Courts. (1962) 66 Punj LR 421.

——Decisions of American Courts — Value of, in interpreting Articles of the Constitution — (Constitution of India, Arts. 25, 26).

There is no room for too much reliance upon American and Australian precedents. Our Constitution makers have embodied the limitations which have been evolved by judicial pronouncements in America or Australia in the Constitution itself and the language of Arts. 25 and 26 is sufficiently clear to enable us to determine without the aid of foreign authorities as to what matters come within the purview of religion and what do not. ——English decisions, use of in writ petitions.

Article 226 is not confined to the particular forms of writs obtained in England and mentioned in the Article but covers a much wider ground and jurisdiction. It will not, therefore, be proper to understand and interpret the scope and ambit of Art. 226 and the nature, width and content of the powers conferred by that Article, in the light or by application of the English principles of the Court's jurisdiction either in actions or writs or other proceedings. Having regard to the language of Art. 226 and the variety of matters which it may comprehend and the purposes, which are not defined, for which directions can be given under the Article, no question of maintainability of the petition as such under the Article can normally arise and the grant or refusal of a petition under the Article will largely be a matter of discretion and undoubtedly vested in the Court. (1963) 2 Lab LJ 304: AIR 1964 Mad 335 (338, 346) (Pt A) (Prs 4, 14).

——English decisions — Codified Indian law — Interpretation of — Reference to English Law and precedents.

Where a principle has been embodied in a statute in this country, the wording of the section is of greater importance than a reference to the back-ground of the English authorities which may undoubtedly be of great value, but which may be equally misleading in certain contingencies. Codification has its own advantages and disadvantages but it is a well-settled rule of interpretation of the Indian Law, that the Courts must primarily look to our own enacted law and its terms and refer to the back-ground of the English common law and precedents, only where there is no repugnancy or in order to throw futher light upon the principle taken from that source in order to make it part of the codified law in this country. AIR 1960 Mad 452 (455) (Pt B) (Pr 7) (DB).

——English and American decisions.

The judgments of the superior Courts of England and United States of America are only persuasive precedents. The Judges of India are under no obligation to follow them but, in many cases they have followed them though they have not hesitated to differ from them when they conflict with the statutory provisions contained in Indian Acts and Civil P. C. AIR 1955 Mad 430 (432) (Pt B) (Pr 10).

● ——American decisions – Use of, in interpreting Constitution.

American decisions are not directly applicable in construing Arts. 15 (1) and 29 (2) of the Indian Constitution, though they may have same bearing in construing Art. 14 of the Constitution.

Implicit reliance should not be placed on American precedents without due regard to the fact that the Indian Constitution, unlike the American, runs into details and considerably narrows the scope of judicial interpretation and without paying due attention to the difference in language between the article of the two constitutions. Srimathi Champakam Dorairajan v. State of Madras, AIR 1951 Mad 120 (124, 129) (Pt C) (Prs 13, 28) (FB).

● ——American precedents — Use of, in examination of constitutionality of Indian Acts.

The framers of the Indian Constitution have sedulously avoided the phrase 'due process' and put instead 'authority of law' 'according to procedure established by law'. The Constitution does not also leave it to the Court what is within 'police power' and what is not. Wherever rights are guaranteed there is also an indication of the limits of the guarantee and the qualifications to which it is subject. By avoiding the term 'due process' and by prescribing action 'according to law' the inquiry has been limited to the content of the power of the legislature except where the Constitution itself says that the reasonableness of the restriction is the test. With a constitution so explicit the Courts in India cannot borrow light from America to interpret the Constitution. Sheoshanker v. State of M. ——Use of English decisions.

The English decisions may well have been influenced by considerations peculiar to England and cannot be applied in India where the conditions are different and where the law with regard to the authority of a Full Bench vis-a-vis the other Benches is settled. Further, if the appellants had any grivance against the decision of the Full Bench, the remedy cannot be by

The Indian Income-tax Act is not in pari materia with the English Income-tax statutes. ——American decisions, reference to construing Article 14 of the Constitution.

Article 14 of the Constitution is adopted from the last clause of S. 1 of the 14th Amendment of the U. S. A. Constitution and it may reasonably be assumed that the Indian Constitutent Assembly was aware of its content delimited by judicial interpretation in the U. S. A. In considering the authorities of the superior Courts in the U. S. A. the Courts in India would not, therefore, be incorporating principles foreign to Indian Constitution or he proceeding upon the slippery ground of apparent similarity of expressions or concept in an alien jurisprudence developed by a society whose approach to similar proceeding on account of historical or other reasons differ from India. It is true that the scheme of the English Income-tax Act is different from the scheme of the Indian Income-tax Act but where there are observations made which are of a general nature and which do not depend for their validity on any particular provision of the English Statute, there is no reason why Courts in India should not receive light from them. (1965) 1 ITJ 155: (1965) 56 ITR 152: AIR 1965 Guj 262 (268) (Pt B) (Pr 16) (DB).

——English decision.

Generally in interpretation of Indian Income-tax Act, it is not desirable to rely on English decisions on interpretation of English Income-tax statute since these two are not in pari materia— Arrangement and language differ greatly — English authorities have to be examined with caution but where observations are made by eminent Judges expounding and illumining similar principles, they may be referred to as valuable guide to our Courts. ILR (1962) 2 Punj 352: (1963) 50 ITR 513: AIR 1963 Punj 411 (415) (Pt D) (Pr 11) (DB).

——English decisions.

Courts in India have often been called upon and indeed, their powers in this respect have seldom been questioned, to decide cases according to principle of justice, equity and good conscience. Normally no doubt, English decisions and the principles, underlying them or derived from English equity cases, have served and do serve as useful guides in this matter, but the Courts are reluctant to introduce English principles which are admittedly unjust and inequitable into Indian system of justice, equity and good conscience in the absence of compelling authority or to extend their application beyond the rigid limits of such authority. 59 Cal WN 1131: ILR (1957) 1 Cal 371: AIR 1956 Cal 36 (39) (Pt C) (Pr 15) (DB).

——S. 9 — Rules under — Rules of Practice and Procedure (Calcutta), Ch. 23, R. 1 (3) and Ch. 33, Rule 1 — Withdrawal of application to sue as poor person without leave of Court to bring fresh application — Second application not barred — Civil P. C. (1908), Section 8.

Under the Rules of Practice and Procedure framed under Section 9 of the Presidency Small Cause Courts Act, rules under Chapter 33 are made for "suits by poor persons". It is clear from these rules that unlike the Civil Procedure Code scheme under Order 33, here there is no combined application to sue as a poor person with particulars of plaint stated therein. The application to sue as a poor person is kept separate from the plaint. The application has to be presented with the plaint. The application is first to be granted and then the plaint presented along with it will be dealt with as a plaint duly presented and not before and not otherwise. Hence, withdrawal of an appliction to sue as a poor person cannot mean withdrawal of the suit itself. Therefore, under the special procedure recognized by the Rules of Practice and Procedure made under Section 9 of the Presidency Small Cause Courts Act read with Section 8 of the Civil Procedure Code a withdrawal of an application to sue as a poor person does not bar a second appliction to sue as such poor person and such a withdrawal without leave of the Court to bring a fresh application for suit is not hit by either Order 23, Rule 1 (3) of the Code of Civil Procedure or by Rule 1 (3) of Chapter 23 of the Rules of Practice and Procedure under Section 9 of the Presidency Small Cause Courts Act. Even assuming that Order 33, Rule 15 of Civil P. C. is applicable to the procedure to suits by poor persons under the Presidency Small Cause Courts Act, the word 'refuse' in that rule means "refusal on merits" and does not cover a case where the appliction has been simply withdrawn by the applicant. AIR 1931 Rang 79 (2), Rel. on. 69 Cal WN 580: AIR 1965 Cal 233 (235) (Prs 8, 9, 11).

——S. 18 — It is not open to the Court of Small Causes to grant leave for amendment of plaint in respect of a substantially different cause of action which was not considered by the Court when granting the original leave to sue. Leave to sue which is granted by the Court in respect of one cause of action will not be available to confer jurisdiction on the Court in respect of substantially different cause of action, the reason being that the cause of action as sought to be amended was not judicially considered at the time when the first leave was granted. ILR 15 Bom 93 and AIR 1939 Bom 345, Applied.

Plaintiff originally claiming on basis of commission agency on subsisting account — Amendment seeking to base claim on pucca adatiya basis and on open, current and mutual account — Amendment held would alter original cause of action into substantially different cause of action and would not be allowed. 7 Bom LR 57, Relied on. 63 Bom LR 169: ILR (1961) Bom 659: AIR 1961 Bom 284 (285, 286) (Prs 5, 6).

——S. 18 (b) — Expression "carry on business" meaning of.

Reading Section 18 (b) as a whole, the context requires a somewhat narrow and restricted meaning to be placed on the word "business" used in the expression "carry on business". In its wider denotation, the word "business" may have a more extensive meaning than the word "trade". But in the context of Section 18 (b), it means commercial business; what may be treated as commercial in the hands of private agencies would not necessarily continue to partake of the same character when they are undertaken by the Government in pursuit of its welfare policies. For example, the running of the Railway would be treated as a business in the hands of the Railway Company but it would not necessarily show that it is business when it is undertaken by the Government or the State.

In this view, the Union of India, which represents the B. B. and C. I. Railway having its Head Office at Bombay could not be said to carry on business within the meaning of Section 18, sub-section (b), and the suit, cause of action for which had arisen wholly outside Bombay, could not be entertained by the Court of Small Causes at Bombay. 55 Bom LR 746: ILR (1953) Bom 1157: AIR 1954 Bom 129 (131) (Pt B) (Prs 7, 8) (DB).

●——S. 18 (a) — "Cause of action" — Notice under Section 77, Railways Act.

The facts constituting the cause of action must precede the suit. Section 77 of the Railways Act refers to certain requirements which are to be fulfilled before the Court will pass a decree entitling the plaintiff to refund or compensation. The expression 'entitled to a refund or to compensation" does not connote that the suit cannot be filed till notice of the claim is given. The fact that the notice of a claim under Section 77 of the Railways Act need not precede a suit for a refund or for compensation necessarily leads to the conclusion that the service of such notice cannot form part of the cause of action within Section 18 (a). SECTION 19

——S. 19 — Applicability — Suit for recovery of Income-tax due — Cognizance by Presidency Small Cause Court — Bar of — Income-tax Act (1922), Ss. 29 and 45 and 46 (2).

The amount of Income-tax, as assessed may become due after demand is made under Section 29 and Section 45 of the Indian Income-tax Act. It may, thereafter, become a debt due to the Crown. As such debt it may be realised under the Public Demands Recovery Act. But because it becomes a debt, it does not lose its character as arrear of revenue. A suit for recovery of outstanding balance of Income-tax is a suit for recovery of debt, due as an arrear of revenue, for the realisation of which the Presidency Small Cause Court is not a proper forum and the Court has, therefore, no jurisdiction to try it. (1961) 65 Cal WN 1090: (1962) 45 ITR 622: 67 Cal WN 373: ILR (1962) 2 Cal 202.

——Ss. 19 (g), 41, 43 — Proceedings under Section 41 — Right of sub-tenant to apply under Section 11 (3) of West Bengal Premises Rent Control (Temporary Provisions) Act (38 of 1948).

In view of the summary character of the jurisdiction of the Small Cause Court in proceedings under Chapter VII, the Presidency Small Cause Court will have no jurisdiction to entertain an application under Section 11 (3) of the West Bengal Premises Rent Control (Temporary Provisions) Act, 1948. Moreover, as the right which the sub-tenant seeks to enforce is a right of statutory tenancy in the premises the Presidency Small Cause Court has no jurisdiction to enter into that question under Section 19 (g): 53 CWN 474, Rel. on. (1951) 87 CLJ 181 (DB).

——Ss. 19 (g) and 41 — Applicability — Landlord terminating lease under forfeiture clause — Application for ejectment — Tenant disputing validity of termination — Jurisdiction of Small Cause Court.

Section 19 (g) of the Presidency Small Cause Courts Act applies only to suits properly so called and does not apply to applications under Section 41 of the Act. Chapter VII of the Act, which contains Section 41, is a complete Code in regard to applications filed under Section 41. An application under Section 41, though it is to be in the form of a plaint, does not become a suit; it is only an application.

Where a landlord, after terminating a tenancy applies under Section 41 for ejectment of the tenant, and the tenant pleads that the tenancy has not been validly terminated and that the lease still subsists, it cannot be said that there is a dispute as to title and, therefore, the jurisdiction of the Small Causes Court is excluded. The termination of a tenancy based upon the landlord taking advantage of a forfeiture clause falls within Section 41 and the Court has jurisdiction to decide the question. The fact that the defence raises the question of title in that the tenancy has not been validly terminated does not oust the jurisdiction of the Court which is bound to decide the question under Chapter VII of the Act. ——S. 21, as amended by Section 5 of W. B. Act 10 of 1958 — Suit to recover amount exceeding Rs. 100 but not exceeding Rs. 2,000 — High Court's jurisdiction to entertain not taken away — (Letters Patent, Cl. 12) — (Bengal, Agra and Assam Civil Courts Act (12 of 1887), Section 21). AIR 1960 Cal 443 (443) (Prs 6, 7).

——S. 31 — Decree of Presidency Small Cause Court — Execution — Section 52 of Bengal Act 7 of 1936 does not apply — Exclusion of period of proceedings before Board cannot be allowed. See Debt Laws — Bengal Agricultural Debtors Act (7 of 1936), Section 52. AIR 1955 NUC (Cal) 2902 (DB).

——S. 38 — Jurisdiction of Full Court.

The comment that the trial Court had not applied its mind can be made with justification only where the Full Court is satisfied that the comment can be properly made. This formula cannot be used for interfering with questions of fact in a matter that comes before the Full Court merely because the Full Court takes a different view of facts in that particular case. One can say that a Judge has not applied his mind to the points of evidence before him only where it appears clearly that some important and salient features of the case have completely escaped the attention of the Judge.

Where the Advocate acting on behalf of both the defendants in his reply solemnly told the plaintiff that defendants 1 and 2 were partners concerned with the production of the picture "Sinbad the Sailor" and the trial Judge did not consider the significance and the effect of this admission, it was open to the Full Court to say that one very important fact on which the plaintiff relied had escaped the attention of the trial Judge completely. It could not, therefore, be said that in coming to this conclusion, in the light of the fact that the trial Court had completely failed to consider one important fact, the Full Court had exceeded its jurisdiction. AIR 1944 Bom 189, Rel. on. AIR 1956 Bom 125 (126) (Prs 3, 5).

——S. 38 — Language of Section 38 does not limit the proceeding to only questions of law — Jurisdiction of Full Bench under Section 38 is not limited to questions of law — Full Bench admitting facts of trial Judge and drawing different inference — Full Bench also applying Sections 29 and 40, Contract Act — Held, those were questions of law. AIR 1965 Cal 446 (448, 449) (Prs 10 to 13).

——S. 38 — Iron safe attached in execution of decree — Claim preferred under Vol. I, Chap. XXI Part III, Rule 47 of Calcutta Small Causes Court Manual — Question of possession involved — claim dismissed — Application for new trial by unsuccessful claimant — Full Bench under Section 38 has no jurisdiction to differ from trial judge on question of fact, viz., the possession of iron safe. (1962) 66 Cal WN 251.

——Ss. 38, 8-A — High Court Rules and Orders (Calcutta), Chapter 39, Rule 4 — Application under Section 38 — Hearing of — Constitution of Bench — Absence of Judge who heard the matter — Direction under Rule 4 is necessary. AIR 1955 NUC (Cal) 5349 (DB).

——Ss. 38, 8-A — Application for new trial — Acting Chief Judge cannot hear unless he has been appointed a Chief Judge by the State Government under Section 8-A. AIR 1955 NUC (Cal) 5349 (DB).

——S. 38 — Powers of Full Bench — Re-hearing on one issue only — Full Bench can transmit case for re-hearing on one issue only. AIR 1955 NUC (Cal) 3671.

——S. 38 — Powers of Bench — Alteration of finding.

Assuming that the powers of a Full Bench of the Small Causes Court at a new trial are only revisional, the Bench certainly has jurisdiction to alter a finding if it was arrived at on a clear misunderstanding of the evidence. Misappreciation of evidence would not entitle a revisional Court to interfere with findings of fact, but a misunderstanding of evidence certainly will. AIR 1951 Cal 470 (471) (Pt A) (Pr 3).

——S. 38 — New trial application — Scope of power of Court — Perfunctory order dismissing new trial application — If justified — Civil P. C. (1908), Sections 2 (9), 8, Order 20, Rule 4 — Small Cause Court Rules (Madras), Order 1-A, Rule 4 (6), Order 41, Rule 12.

Though the wording of Section 38 of the Presidency Small Cause Courts Act is very wide it is now settled by a number of decisions over a long period that the New Trial Court of the Presidency Small Causes Court can dismiss an application under Section 38 on the ground that there is no error of law in the judgment under appeal. But errors of law can be of various descriptions and the New Trial Court must say in its judgment, what is the question of law raised before it and give its opinion on it. A blanket judgment that there is no error of law is no judgment at all. The term "judgment" in the Small Cause Courts Act has to be understood in the same sense in which it is used in the Civil Procedure Code. 32 Mad LJ 213; AIR 1917 Mad 135 (2), Rel. on. (1962) 2 MLJ 443: 75 Mad LW 620: ILR (1963) Mad 905: AIR 1963 Mad 87 (87 to 89) (Prs 2 to 5).

——S. 38 — Full Bench — Powers of — Question of fact raised for first time in the New Trial application — If can be decided.

A Full Bench of the Court of Small Causes under Section 38 of the Presidency Small Cause Courts Act has no power to decide question of fact when it first arises before it in consequence of its finding on another question of fact or law. If an occasion should arise before the Full Bench to come to a conclusion on a new question of fact, the proper procedure is not to give its fresh findings of fact, but to order a retrial at which the facts may be gone into afresh: 1956 MWN 535 and AIR 1956 Bom 125, Dist. (1958) 2 MLJ 437: 71 Mad LW 743.

——S. 38 — Suit on accounts — Burden of proof is on plaintiff to prove that moneys are due to him from defendant. See Evidence Act (1872), Sections 101-103. AIR 1955 NUC (Mad) 3160.

——S. 38 — Interference — Grounds — Misunderstanding of evidence is ground for interference in revision — The power exercised by the Full Bench is substantially in the nature of revisional jurisdiction though not limited to matters mentioned in Section 115 Civil P. C., and is not limited to points of law and in the guise of revision, it cannot treat the new trial application as an appeal.

Though misappreciation of evidence would not entitle a revisional Court to interfere with findings of fact, a misunderstanding of evidence certainly will. AIR 1955 NUC (Mad) 3160.

——S. 38 — Order, meaning of — Order returning plaint for presentation to proper Court is not order within Section 38.

An order passed by a Presidency Small Causes Court after hearing both sides and discussing many contentions and issues, returning the plaint for presentation to the proper Court having jurisdiction is not an order entitling the party for a new trial under Section 38, Presidency Small Cause Courts Act.

Every order in a suit, even if passed after contest, will not be an order in respect of which a new trial can be claimed under Section 38, only when the merits of the suit claim are gone into and an order passed, can the order come within the meaning of the word 'Order' in Section 38. The phrase 'new trial' itself implies an old trial and disposal on merits. 26 Mad 163; ILR (1938) 2 Cal 637, Rel. on.

It is wrong to contend that the orders which could be brought up for revision under Section 25 of the Provincial Small Cause Courts Act could also be brought up for new trial under the Presidency Small Cause Courts Act. The two Acts and sections are different, and Section 25 of the Provincial Small Cause Courts Act, dealing with revisions to the High Court, cannot be relied on for bolstering up a new claim for a new trial under Section 38 of the Presidency Small Cause Courts Act. 1952 Mad WN 172: 65 Mad LW 156: (1952) 1 Mad LJ 171: AIR 1952 Mad 594 (595) (Prs 4, 5).

——S. 38 — Application to set aside order of dismissal for default — Competency of Full Bench to entertain.

A bench of the Small Cause Courts has no power to entertain an application to restore a matter under Section 38 of the Presidency Small Cause Courts Act that has been dismissed for default.

A proceeding under Section 38 of the Presidency Small Cause Courts Act cannot be treated as a suit or a proceeding in the nature of a suit. The jurisdiction of the Small Cause Court under Section 38 is substantially in the nature of revisional jurisdiction. 64 Mad LW 137: 1951 Mad WN 50: (1951) 1 MLJ 81: AIR 1951 Mad 672 (672, 673) (Prs 2, 5).

——S. 38 — Suit for recovery of money — Fact whether plaintiff put her thumb impression on counterfoil of receipt of vital importance in suit — Trial Judge not applying his mind to this circumstance — Judge held committed error of law — Defendant held was entitled to apply under Section 38.

Where in a suit for recovery of money the fact as to whether it was true or not that the plaintiff put her thumb impression on the counterfoil of a receipt was of vital importance in determining as to who, the plaintiff or the defendant was speaking the truth in the case, but the trial Judge did not apply his mind to this relevant circumstance before he made up his mind to believe one of the versions:

Held, that in so far as the trial Judge failed to perform this duty and simply contended himself by saying that he had no means of verifying whether the thumb impression was really that of the plaintiff or not, while actually ample means were readily available to him he must be considered to have committed an error of law, the error consisting in that he failed to determine the question of fact when it was vital to the decision in the case and it would not be sufficient explanation that the attention of the trial Judge was not drawn to the existence or availability of the material on record to enable the required comparison of the impressions and the defendant against whom a decree was passed was entitled to take up the matter before the Full Bench of the Court of Small Causes by way of a new trial application under Section 38 of the Act and the rules framed thereunder: AIR 1943 PC 208, Foll. (1949) 2 Mad LJ 737: 63 Mad LW 58: AIR 1950 Mad 269 (270) (Pt A) (Pr 4).

——S. 38 — Findings of trial Court not supported by evidence and justifying interference in revision — Proper course is to send back matter to trial Court for fresh trial.

Whenever it is found that the findings of the trial Court are not supported by the evidence and are such as to justify interference in revision, the proper course for the Full Bench of the Small Cause Court would be to send back the matter to the trial Court for fresh trial and decision according to law. The jurisdiction of the Full Bench of the Presidency Small Cause Court is not always confined to questions of law alone: AIR 1941 Mad 769, Foll. (1949) 2 Mad LJ 737: 63 Mad LW 58: AIR 1950 Mad 269 (270) (Pt B) (Pr 4).

CHAPTER 7

——Chap. 7 (Sections 41-49) — Nature of jurisdiction conferred on Court under Chapter 7.

The jurisdiction conferred on the Small Cause Court under Chapter 7 is a very special and limited jurisdiction. It entitles parties to recover possession by a summary procedure. There is nothing to prevent a party from obtaining possession in the ordinary Courts of the land if he has a right to possession under the ordinary law. But when a party comes to the Small Cause Court under Chapter 7 and makes an application, he must satisfy the Court that his application is maintainable and that he is entitled to the order as provided by that Chapter. 60 Bom LR 1282: ILR (1958) Bom 1416: AIR 1960 Bom 18 (19) (Pt A) (Pr 4) (DB).

(Presidency Small Cause Courts Act (1882), Section 41.)

1. Nature of proceedings under.
2. Jurisdiction.
3. Limitation for execution of order.
4. Parties to proceedings.
5. Right to remove fixtures.
6. Revision.
7. Decree and building — Meaning of.

1. Nature of proceedings under.

——S. 41 — Applicability — English mortgage — Possession of property under an English mortgage A mortgagee is entitled to the same rights as the mortgagor himself had in the property and one of the most important rights is the right of possession. Under such circumstances the mortgagee is entitled under Section 41 to institute proceedings for ejectment. (1881) 6 QBD 345, Rel. on.; AIR 1939 PC 14 Dist., and explained. See Transfer of Property Act (1882), Section 58. AIR 1954 Bom 81.

——S. 41 — Applicability — Application for ejectment under Section 41, Presidency Small Cause Courts Act — Occupant, alleged licensee, refusing to vacate on notice — Defence claim for protection of Act on basis of tenancy — Order for ejectment — Decree against the defendant must be treated as one under Section 28 of Bombay Rent Act and appealable under Section 29 of that Act. See Houses and Rents — Bombay Rents, Hotel and Lodging House Rates Control Act (57 of 1947), Section 28. AIR 1951 Bom 294. [Overruled by AIR 1951 Bom 390.]

——Ss. 41 and 44 — Order for possession made under Section 41 — Person having independent title threatened to be dispossessed under Sec. 44 —Such person is not bound by an order under Section 41 of the Act — But he has little protection under that Act for maintaining his rights — Even if the bailiff gives possession by force to the person directed in the summons, no action lies against him and summary proceeding under Order 21, Rule 100, C. P. C. for recovery of possession does not lie. AIR 1955 NUC (Cal) 1021.

——Ss. 41, 43 and 47 — Proceedings for recovery of possession — Order for possession by consent of occupant — Application by occupant for stay on ground of intention to file suit in High Court — Application held should be granted AIR 1955 NUC (Cal) 664.

——S. 41 — Rules under Section 9 (1) (aa) by Calcutta High Court, Rule 107 — Scope of R. 107 — Application for possession of immovable property — Proceedings — Nature of — Registrar dealing with it — If proceeding on such an application for possession of an immovable property is not defended it becomes an undefended suit within Section 9 (1) (aa) and the Registrar gets jurisdiction to deal with it under Section 41 and in default of appearance of the defendant can pass an ex parte order. See Presidency Small Cause Courts Act (1882), Section 9 (1) (aa). AIR 1955 NUC (Cal) 648.

——S. 41 — Proceedings under Chapter VII are not a suit. 54 Cal WN 376: ILR (1951) 1 Cal 350: AIR 1950 Cal 244 (245) (Pt A) (Pr 5).

——Ss. 41, 43, 47 — Proceedings under Sec. 41 by landlord — Subsequent suit by tenant for relief under Section 47 — Delivery of possession to landlord during pendency of suit — Such delivery can only be subject to the result of the suit.

On 8th November, 1948, landlord who had by then terminated the lease in favour of the tenant filed an application under Section 41 for eviction of the tenant. An order was passed directing him to delivery vacant possession by 1st August, 1950. On that date the tenant applied to the Court under Section 47 of the same enactment for stay of further proceedings, undertaking to institute a suit to establish his right to continue in possession of the property and the Court granted stay until the suit under Section 47 was disposed of. The tenant filed the suit for relief specified in Section 47 and claimed in that suit that the lease as well as the construction of the superstructure on the property were prior to the year 1921, and that he being entitled to the benefits of the Madras City Tenants Protection Act, the order for eviction passed by the Court of Small Causes contrary thereto was invalid. He also applied for an interim injunction during the pendency of the suit against the landlord from enforcing the order for eviction. That application, however, proved fruitless. The landlord thereupon applied to the Court of Small Causes and obtained an order for delivery of the land after removing the superstructure. That delivery was effected on 6th February, 1953.

Held, that the delivery of possession made to the landlord during the pendency of the litigation could only be subject to the result of it. The suit could be regarded only as a continuation of the proceedings initiated under Section 41. Therefore, if in the suit it were to be held that the tenant could not be evicted, the order under Section 43 would stand vacated and any possession obtained thereunder would have to be restored to the tenant on the principle of restitution. For the application of this principle it would make no difference whether the tenant obtained the decree in a suit filed under Section 47 upholding his right to possession on the basis of facts or law existing on the date of suit or by reason of any right conferred on him pending an appeal. 76 Mad LW 381: ILR (1963) Mad 1054: AIR 1963 Mad 369 (372) (Pt D) (Pr 11) (DB).

——S. 41 — Scope of — Lease of land with superstructure followed later by new lease of vacant land forming part of land and superstructure already leased — Eviction of lessee from land under second lease — Jurisdiction of Small Cause Court. See Houses and Rents — Madras Buildings (Lease and Rent Control) Act (25 of 1949), Section 2 (1). ('57) 70 Mad LW 295.

2. Jurisdiction.

●——Ss. 41, 47 and 49 — Suit for declaration that plaintiff is tenant of sub-tenant of defendant and for injunction restraining defendant from proceeding under Section 41 or from executing order passed on application under that section — City Civil Court, Bombay has no jurisdiction to entertain suit of the nature specified herein — Section 28 of Bombay Rent Act (57 of 1947) will prevail over Sections 47 and 49 of Small Cause Courts Act. See Houses and Rents — Bombay Rents, Hotel and Lodging House Rates Control Act (57 of 1947), Section 28. AIR 1965 Bom 177 (FB).

——Ss. 41, 47 and 49 — Order for evicting plaintiff passed in favour of defendant under Section 41, Presidency Small Cause Courts Act — Suit by plaintiff to declare that he is tenant and for an injunction restraining defendant from executing the order—City Civil Court has no jurisdiction to entertain the suit. See Civil P. C. (1908), Section 9. AIR 1964 Bom 85 (DB).

——Ss. 41, 46 and 47 — Scope — Suit for declaration that defendant's application under Section 41 amounts to act of trespass and for damages — Plaintiff also claiming protection under Bombay Act (57 of 1947) — Jurisdiction of Bombay City Civil Court.

A suit for declaration that the defendant's application for ejectment against the plaintiff under Section 41, Presidency Small Cause Courts Act, was an act of trespass and for damages is essentially a suit falling under Sections 46 and 47 of the Presidency Small Cause Courts Act and the Bombay City Civil Court has jurisdiction to entertain it. The question whether the defendant is or is not entitled to an order for possession under the summary procedure under Chapter VII of the Presidency Small Cause Courts Act cannot attract the exclusive jurisdiction of the Courts specified in Section 28 of the Bombay Rent Act. The fact that the plaintiff alleged that he was a lawful sub-tenant of the defendant since before the Rent Act came into force and that he was entitled to protection under the Rent Act would not change the nature of the suit as framed. Even though the plaintiff has claimed alternatively that as the alleged licence given to him was not duly determined, defendant was not entitled to obtain the order of ejectment against him, that would not come in the way of the Bombay City Civil Court entertaining the suit as the Small Causes Court had decided that point against him. Such a suit will not fall within the ambit of Section 28 of the Rent Act. 61 Bom LR 1223: ILR (1960) Bom 103: AIR 1960 Bom 338 (341) (Pr 12) (DB).

——Ss. 41 to 43 — Jurisdiction of Small Cause Court — Application by sub-tenant under Section 11 (3) of W. B. Premises Rent Control Act, 1948.

In view of the summary character of the jurisdiction of the Small Cause Court in proceedings under Chapter VII of the Presidency Small Cause Courts Act, the Presidency Small Cause Court will have no jurisdiction to entertain an application by a sub-tenant under Section 11 (3) of the W. B. Premises Rent Control (Temporary Provisions) Act, 1948. Moreover, under Section 19 (g) of the Presidency Small Cause Courts Act, the Small Cause Court cannot determine any question of right to or interest in immovable property. The right of the sub-tenant is a right of statutory tenancy in the premises and the Presidency Small Cause Court has no jurisdiction to enter into that question. (1951) 87 CLJ 181.

——Ss. 41 and 43 — Summary eviction — Order — Need to conform to judicial standards — Jurisdiction under Section 43 — Nature of.

It is no doubt true that the proceedings under Section 41 of the Presidency Small Cause Courts Act is a summary one and no elaborate judgment of the Court need be expected in such matters. It is equally true that merely because a tenant sought to be evicted might apply under Sec. 9, of the Madras City Tenants' Protection Act the jurisdiction of the Small Cause Court to make an order under Section 43, of the Presidency Small Cause Courts Act is not in any way affected.

But however summary the procedure or however brief the order of judgment might be, it should be passed only upon consideration of the merit of the respective contentions and it should be legally adequate and conform to principles of justice. So long as there is an order that can be the subject of the exercise of the revisional powers of the High Court and it is made by a subordinate Court or Tribunal and further it is not an ex parte order but one on the merits, it must bear on the face of it evidence of the application of the judicial mind to the merits. The Court cannot merely rest its decision on its subjective satisfaction without reference to the grounds of that decision. 78 Mad LW 528: (1965) 2 Mad LJ 166.

3. Limitation for execution of order.

——Ss. 41, 43 and 48 — Suit in ejectment — Decree directing delivery of possession by specified date — Execution after expiry of date fixed.

Under Sec. 48 of the Presidency Small Cause Courts Act all the provisions of the Civil Procedure Code including the provisions of Order 21 will apply to matters provided for in that chapter. Hence a decree in ejectment made by a Presidency Small Cause Court under Section 43 of the Act could be executed like any other decree within the period of limitation. (1961) 1 MLJ 136: ILR (1961) Mad 605: 74 Mad LW 827: 1961 Mad WN 21: AIR 1961 Mad 408 (408) (Pr 3).

5. Right to remove fixtures.

——Ss. 41, 43 and 48 — Power to order bailiff to remove fixtures and give vacant possession.

Where a Court directs, by a decree or order, vacant possession of land, that decree could be made effective by directing its own officers to remove the superstructures in the property and deliver vacant possession of the properties to the decree-holder. It is unnecessary to have any specific power in that behalf. The power to remove the superstructures is an incidental necessary and ancillary power to the power to deliver possession of the property. If there is obstruction by the tenant the machinery provided by Rule 97 onwards of C. P. Code has to be followed and the obstruction must be removed.

Under S. 48 of the Presidency Small Cause Courts Act, the provisions of the C. P. Code are made applicable to all proceedings under Ch. VII. The machinery provided therefore under the C. P. Code for delivery of possession of immovable property in cases where a decree for possession was granted, is attracted by virtue of S. 48 to proceedings under S. 41 of the Provincial Small Cause Courts Act. 1954 Mad WN 522: (1954) 2 MLJ 282: 67 Mad LW 489: ILR (1955) Mad 774: AIR 1954 Mad 985 (986) (Pt A) (Pr 6).

——S. 41 — Right of tenant to remove fixtures on land ordered to be vacated.

Under law as provided in the Transfer of Property Act Clause (h) of Section 108 after the determination of the lease, the lessee is given the right, while he is in possession of the property, to remove all things which he has attached to the earth. This right however enures to him so long as he is in possession of the property leased but not afterwards. Notwithstanding the determination of the lease, so long as he is in possession of the property, he is entitled to remove it but, if he leaves the property he has no right to the property and to remove it and the fixtures become the property of the lessor. Under this principle of law, when once an order for possession is made after the termination of the tenancy under Section 41 of Presidency Small Cause Courts Act for delivery of possession of the property, it is open to the lessee in possession to remove the articles before he leaves possession of the property. If he does not the lessor is entitled to delivery of possession of the property along with the fixtures. 1954 Mad WN 522: (1954) 2 MLJ 282: 67 Mad LW 489: ILR (1955) Mad 774: AIR 1954 Mad 985 (986) (Pt B) (Pr 4).

6. Revision.

——S. 41 — Ex parte decree of Registrar — Registrar refusing to set it aside — Record showing that he considered the evidence and came to conclusion that summons was duly served — Peon who served summons examined — Petition for setting aside ex parte decree vague — High Court will not interfere with order under Section 115, Civil P. C. AIR 1955 NUC (Cal) 648.

——S. 41 — Scope of inquiry — Proceedings against tenant — Latter not filing statement and not appearing — Application by sub-tenant to be made party — Order rejecting — Propriety — Revision — C. P. Code, Section 115.

Plaintiff started a proceeding under Section 41 of the Presidency Small Cause Courts Act for recovery of possession against the tenant-defendant and the proceeding was registered as a suit. When the suit was taken up for hearing the petitioner filed an application to the Court alleging that the plaintiff and the defendant were colluding with each other for the purpose of evicting the petitioner who was a statutory sub-tenant under the provisions of Sec. 11 (3) of the W. B. Premises Rent Control Act, 1948. The Court rejected this application on the ground that it was premature and that the petitioner might apply for relief when the plaintiff wanted to take delivery of possession on the basis of the order for possession that might be passed by the Court. The tenant-defendant did not file any written statement to the suit and did not also appear in Court on the date of hearing.

Held, that in the special facts of the case it was necessary for the Court to add the petitioner as a party defendant in the suit in order to effectually and completely adjudicate upon all the questions involved in the suit, and that the Court exercised its jurisdiction with material irregularity in rejecting the petitioner's application. 55 CWN 324: AIR 1953 Cal 348 (349) (Pt B) (Pr 6).

7. Decree and building — Meaning of.

●——S. 41 — Decree for recovery of possession includes orders made by Small Cause Court under Section 41. See Houses and Rents — West Bengal Premises Rent Control (Temporary Provisions) Act (17 of 1950) as amended by Act (62 of 1950), Section 18 (1). AIR 1952 Cal 273 (FB).

——S. 41 — "Building" — Lease of vacant land forming part of land and superstructure already leased — Whether lease of a building — Held, that the vacant piece of land under second lease did not fall within the scope of the definition of the term 'building' as contained in the Madras Rent Control Act — The Rent Controller did not have in such cases any jurisdiction and the proper Court for the petitioner to seek his remedy would be the Small Cause Court when the lease pertained merely to the land without any superstructure. See Houses and Rents — Madras Buildings (Lease and Rent Control) Act (1949), Section 7. (1957) 70 Mad LW 295.

——S. 42 — Jurisdiction of Small Cause Court — Application by sub-tenant under Section 11 (3) of W. B. Premises Rent Control Act, 1948 — The right of the sub-tenant is a right of statutory tenancy in the premises and the Presidency Small Cause Court has no jurisdiction to enter into that question. See Presidency Small Cause Courts Act (1882), Section 41. (1951) 87 Cal LJ 181.

——S. 42 — Extension of time. See Presidency Small Cause Courts Act (1882), Section 43. ('51) 55 Cal WN 305.

●——S. 43 — Order for delivery of possession — If decree.

Although under the rules framed under the Act the application under Section 41 is initiated by a plaint, the proceeding is not a suit and the order for delivery of possession under Section 43 does not strictly speaking amount to a decree for recovery of possession: AIR 1927 Bom 556, Ref Nalinakhya Bysack v. Shyam Sunder Haldar, (1953) SCJ 201: 1953 SCA 191: 1953 SCR 533: AIR 1953 SC 148 (149) (Pt A) (Pr 3).

●——S. 43 — W. B. Premises Rent Control (Temporary Provisions) Act (1950), Sec. 18 (1) (as amended by W. B. Act 62 of 1950) does not apply to order for possession under Section 43.

A decree for recovery of possession within the meaning of Section 18 (1) of W. B. Rent Act 1950 means a decree in a suit for recovery of possession and does not cover an order for possession under Section 41 of Presidency Small Cause Courts Act, 1882. AIR 1951 Cal 32; 55 Cal WN 347; 55 Cal WN 421; AIR 1952 Cal 126 and AIR 1952 Cal 273 (FB), Overruled; AIR 1952 Cal 199, Reversed. See Houses and Rents — West Bengal Premises Rent Control (Temporary Provisions) Act (17 of 1950) (as Amended by W. B. Act 62 of 1950), S. 18 (1). AIR 1953 SC 148.

——Ss. 43, 46 and 47 — Explanation to Section 43 should be read into Section 46 — When can occupant of premises file suit under Section 47 and complaint of trespass.

The object of filing the suit under Section 47 is substantially to challenge the order passed under Section 41. In this respect Sections 43 and 46 must be reconciled and the only way these two sections can be reconciled is by reading the Explanation to Section 43 into Section 46. In other words, by reason of this reconciliation between the two sections the position in law would be that if an applicant cannot obtain an order for possession by reason of his title having determined and by reason of the Explanation to Section 43, then if he makes an application under Section 41 such an application constitutes trespass within the meaning of Section 46 and the occupant can file a suit and complain of that trespass and succeed in obtaining compensation. 60 Bom LR 1282: ILR (1958) Bom 1416: AIR 1960 Bom 18 (19) (Pt B) (Pr 6) (DB).

——S. 43, Explanation — Explanation to Section 43 contemplates title in premises and not personal right that is given under Section 14, Rent Act — (Bombay Rents, Hotel and Lodging House Rates Control Act (57 of 1947), Section 14).

The protection which the Rent Act gives to tenant or a sub-tenant under Section 14 is a personal right and not a right in property, and what the Explanation to Section 43, Presidency Small Cause Courts Act contemplates is title and not a personal right. Hence with the determination by the landlord of the tenancy in the premises any title in the third party created by the tenant or sub-tenant is also determined. It is only after determination of the contractual right the Rent Act steps in and gives protection to the tenant or sub-tenant. 60 Bom LR 1282: ILR (1958) Bom 1416: AIR 1960 Bom 18 (19, 20) (Pt C) (Prs 7, 8) (DB).

——S. 43, Explanation — Reason for Explanation.

The reason for the Explanation to Section 43 is to prevent the Small Cause Court, which is a Court of summary jurisdiction, from inquiring into and investigating into questions of fact. If an application under Chapter 7 can be maintained by a person not under the original title but under a different or subsequent title, then the Small Cause Court would have to go into questions of title and that exactly is what the Legislature wanted to prevent. 60 Bom LR 1282: ILR (1958) Bom 1416: AIR 1960 Bom 18 (20) (Pt D) (Pr 9) (DB).

——S. 43 — Discretion to give time to occupant — Discretion in revision — (Civil P. C. (1908), Section 115).

The question as to what time should be granted to the occupants for vacating would ordinarily be a question to be decided by the trial Judge in his discretion, and in matters which are left to the discretion of the trial Judge the High Court would be very reluctant to interfere in the exercise of its revisional jurisdiction. In exercising the discretion vested in the trial Court under Section 43, it is of utmost importance to see that an order based upon the provisions of Section 43 does not defeat the very object of excluding the local bodies from the operation of the Rent Act. The discretion in question must be judiciously and reasonably exercised and though reasonable time may and should be given to the tenant who is ordered to be evicted, giving an unduly long time to the tenant might amount to the frustration of the decree itself and would clearly be inconsistent with the spirit of the section. The time given should not be so long that the tenants would thereby be encouraged not to take any steps in the direction of finding alternative accommodation on their own. AIR 1956 Bom 229 (229, 230) (Prs 3 to 5).

——S. 43 — Scope — Under Section 43 orders for delivery of possession may be passed both in the absence of occupant and after he has appeared. 52 Bom LR 349: ILR (1950) Bom 453: AIR 1950 Bom 321 (323) (Pt A) (Pr 4) (DB).

——S. 43 — Order for dispossession under Section 43 — Jurisdiction to order stay under Section 47 — So long as the proceedings are pending, it is open to an occupant intending to file suit for compensation for trespass to ask for stay of proceedings before the Small Cause Court even if order for dispossession has been passed under S. 43. See Presidency Small Cause Courts Act (1882), S. 47. AIR 1950 Bom 321 (DB).

——Ss. 43, 41 — Order under Section 43 fixing date for delivery of possession — Power of Court to extend — Scope of proceedings.

Per Das Gupta and Bachawat, JJ.— The date for giving possession of the property named in the order under Section 43 of the Presidency Small Cause Courts Act, 1882, can be varied by a subsequent order.

Once the proceeding has started it becomes the duty of the Court till the proceedings terminate to pass not one single order but as many orders as may be necessary, to make the proceeding effective. This duty of the Court does not disappear merely because the date previously fixed has expired. The proceeding commenced under Section 41 of the Act remain pending till the relief has been worked out and when the scheme of the legislation in Chapter VII is considered as a whole, it is proper to hold that it is implicit in Section 43 that successive order fixing different dates of possession can be passed by the Court. The orders passed 'extending' the date should be considered to be in substance fresh orders fixing different dates of possession. AIR 1954 Cal 14, Rel. on. and 46 Cal WN 11 and 41 Cal WN 656 and 55 Cal WN 305, Dissented from.

Per Bachawat, J.— Under Section 148, Civil P. C., as amended by the High Court Notification dated 3rd January, 1949, issued under Sec. 8, Civil P. C., the Court of Small Causes has power to vary the date named in the order for possession under Section 43. Presidency Small Cause Courts Act. The power of varying the date fixed for the giving of possession under Section 43 of the Presidency Small Cause Courts Act, should be exercised sparingly and with great caution. 60 Cal WN 312: AIR 1956 Cal 425 (427, 428) (Prs 10, 14, 15, 25, 28) (DB).

(Presidency Small Cause Courts Act (1882), S. 47.)

1. Scope of inquiry under.
2. Stay of proceedings.
3. Trespass.
4. Occupant — Meaning of.
5. Jurisdiction.
6. Miscellaneous.

1. Scope of inquiry under.

——S. 47 — Scope of inquiry.

In a suit under Section 47 only certain issues can arise and only certain points can be agitated. Proceedings under Chapter VII are not in the nature of suits, and orders passed are not in the nature of decrees. The Legislature has provided a summary remedy to a landlord to obtain possession from his tenant, but the Legislature has also afforded a protection to the tenant and that protection is that the order passed by the Small Cause Court under Chapter VII is not a conclusive order. It is open to the tenant to challenge that order by coming to the High Court and establishing his right to be in possession at the date when the landlord instituted proceedings against him. ILR (1955) Bom 57: 56 Bom LR 1065: AIR 1955 Bom 64 (65) (Pt B) (Pr 2) (DB).

——S. 47 — Scope — Mandatory character.

The provisions of Section 47 are mandatory. If an application is made and if bonds are executed as provided in Section 47, the Small Cause Court has no discretion; it must stay the proceedings and the operation of the ejectment order. ILR (1955) Bom 57: 56 Bom LR 1005: AIR 1955 Bom 64 (65) (Pt C) (Pr 2) (DB).

——S. 47 — Scope — Order for possession by consent of occupant — Application by occupant for stay — Maintainability. See Presidency Small Cause Courts Act (15 of 1882), Section 41. AIR 1955 NUC (Cal) 664.

——S. 47 — Scope — Provisions of the section are mandatory. ILR (1963) Mad 1054: 76 Mad LW 381: AIR 1963 Mad 369 (371) (Pt B) (Pr 4) (DB).

2. Stay of proceedings.

——S. 47 — Stay of proceedings — Duty of Court.

Under Section 47 it is incumbent upon the Small Cause Court to stay the proceedings when an application is made. It is not open to the Small Cause Court to go into the merits of the application. ILR (1955) Bom 168: 56 Bom LR 1169: AIR 1955 Bom 207 (208) (Pt B) (Pr 3).

——Ss. 47, 43 and 46 — Order for dispossession under Section 43 — Jurisdiction to order stay under Section 47.

It is open to an occupant intending to file a suit for compensation for trespass to ask for a stay of the proceedings before the Small Cause Court even if an order for dispossession has been passed under Section 43, so long as that order has not been executed, i. e., while the proceedings are still pending : AIR 1950 Bom 120, Dissent. AIR 1923 Mad 323 and C. R. A. No. 827 of 1948, dated 5th April 1949, Appr. 52 Bom LR 349: ILR (1950) Bom 453: AIR 1950 Bom 321 (325) (Pt B) (Pr 7) (DB).

——S. 47 — Application under — Whether can lie after order under Section 43 is passed (Quaere). 51 Bom LR 842: ILR (1950) Bom 281: AIR 1950 Bom 120 (123) (Pt C) (Pr 7).

——S. 47 — Right to apply for stay — Time for exercise of.

The right to apply under Section 47 of the Act for stay of proceedings under Section 41 of the Act can enure till the proceedings under Section 41 come to an end. The proceedings under Section 41 cannot be said to have terminated till the relief contemplated by that section is properly worked out viz., when the possession is taken in pursuance of an order under Section 43 and not earlier. Consequently Section 47 must be construed so as to permit the filing of an application under that section even after an order under Section 43 has been made. The mere making of such order does not preclude an application under Section 47. AIR 1923 Mad 323; AIR 1950 Bom 321, Rel. on.

The word 'trespass' in Section 47 must be given its ordinary meaning subject to the reservation that the meaning must be limited by the necessary implications contained in the section, namely, that once possession is taken the right to make an application under that section is no longer available to the occupant. 57 Cal WN 738: ILR (1955) 1 Cal 371: AIR 1954 Cal 14 (15, 16) (Pt A) (Prs 7, 11, 13, 14, 16) (DB).

——S. 47 — Waiver of right to apply for stay. The mere passing of an order allowing time to vacate the premises on an application made by the occupant opposite party in a proceeding under Section 41 cannot operate as a waiver of the right to apply for stay under Section 47 of the Act. 57 CWN 738: ILR (1955) 1 Cal 371: AIR 1954 Cal 14 (16) (Pt B) (Pr 18) (DB).

——S. 47 — Person not occupant — Locus standi to apply for stay — A person who is not an occupant within the meaning of Section 47 has no locus standi to maintain an application for time for giving possession. 53 CWN 187 and 708, Ref to. See Presidency Small Cause Courts Act (1882), Section 43. (1951) 55 Cal WN 305.

——S. 47 (before and after amendment by Madras Act 16 of 1956) — Power to revoke order of stay.

The Court which granted a stay of execution under Section 47 will have an inherent power to revoke it whenever it finds that the application for it was intended as an abuse of process of Court. There will however be no need to apply that rule after the amendment effected to that section in the year 1956, as it obliges the tenant to file the suit within a month. 76 Mad LW 381: ILR (1963) Mad 1054: AIR 1963 Mad 369 (372) (Pt C) (Pr 10) (DB).

3. Trespass.

——S. 47 — Suit for declaration that defendant's application under Section 41 amounted to act of trespass and for damages — Plaintiff also claiming protection under Bombay Act 57 of 1947 — Suit does not fall within Section 28 of Bombay Act 57 of 1947 — Bombay City Civil Court has jurisdiction to entertain it. See Presidency Small Cause Courts Act (1882), Section 41. AIR 1960 Bom 338 (DB).

[Overruled in AIR 1965 Bom 177 (FB).]

——S. 47 — Explanation to Section 43 should be read into Section 46 — When can occupant of premises file suit under Section 47 and complain of trespass — When an application is made under Section 47 by an applicant whose title is determined it constitutes trespass within the meaning of Section 46 and the occupant can file a suit and complain of that trespass and succeed in obtaining compensation. See Presidency Small Cause Courts Act (1882), Section 43. AIR 1960 Bom 18 (DB).

——S. 47 — Trespass — Date of.

Under Section 47, the trespass has to be at the date when the application for ejectment is made and not when the ejectment order is passed. ILR (1955) Bom 57: 56 Bom LR 1005: AIR 1955 Bom 64 (65) (Pt A) (Pr 2) (DB).

——S. 47 — Scope — Suit filed under Section 47 — Effect of.

In a suit filed under Section 47 if the occupant obtains a decree, such decree shall supersede the order made under Section 47. Therefore, not only is the operation of the ejectment order stayed, but the ejectment order is completely wiped off, as it were, if in the substantive suit filed by the occupant under Section 47 he succeeds in getting an order that there was a trespass and the applicant had no right to be in possession of the premises. ILR (1955) Bom 57: 56 Bom LR 1005: AIR 1955 Bom 64 (65) (Pt D) (Pr 2) (DB).

——S. 47 — Scope of — Suit under.

In a suit under Section 47 no other title can be agitated except the title contemplated by that section itself. Suits under Section 47 are special suits of a limited character for a limited purpose, and the Courts' jurisdiction to try the suits under Section 47 is limited to try issues that arise under that Section.

This being a special suit the plaintiff cannot, like in an ordinary suit under the Civil P. C combine the two reliefs, namely, one an action for trespass under Section 47 and the other on title which accrued to him subsequently and give up the first and agitate only the second. ILR (1955) Bom 57: 56 Bom LR 1005: AIR 1955 Bom 64 (65, 66) (Pt E) (Prs 2, 3) (DB).

4. Occupant — Meaning of.

——S. 47 — Occupant — Meaning of — Term does not include sub-tenant in possession who was not made party to application under Section 41.

The expression 'occupant' used in Section 47, Presidency Small Cause Courts Act, means only a person who was a party to the proceedings filed under Section 41 and not a person who is or claims to be in possession, either at the time of the institution of those proceedings or thereafter, but who has not been sued. A sub-tenant, therefore, who is in possession but was not made party to the proceedings under Section 41 is not entitled to apply under Section 47 relying solely upon his occupation: AIR 1949 Cal 248, Rel. on. 51 Bom LR 842: ILR (1950) Bom 281: AIR 1950 Bom 120 (123) (Pt A) (Pr 6).

——S. 47 — "Occupants".

The opposite parties have no locus standi to maintain any application for time if they are not occupants within the meaning of Section 47 as explained in 53 CWN 708. (1951) 55 CWN 305.

5. Jurisdiction.

●——S. 47 — Suit for declaration that a sub-tenancy was created in favour of plaintiff by defendant tenant and for injunction restraining defendant from interfering with his possession as sub-tenant — Suit for declaration that plaintiff is tenant or sub-tenant of defendant and for injunction restraining defendant from proceeding under Section 41 of Small Cause Courts Act or from executing order passed on application under that section — City Civil Court, Bombay has no jurisdiction to entertain either of the two suits — Section 28 of Bombay Rents Act will prevail over Sections 47 and 49 of Small Cause Courts Act — AIR 1960 Bom 338, Overruled. See Houses and Rents — Bombay Rent, Hotel and Lodging House Rates Control Act (57 of 1947), Section 28. AIR 1965 Bom 177 (FB).

——S. 47 — Order for evicting plaintiff passed in favour of defendant under Section 41 — Suit by plaintiff to declare that he is tenant and for an injunction restraining defendant from executing the order — City Civil Court has no jurisdiction to entertain the suit as having been barred by Section 28 of Bombay Rents Act 1947. See Civil P. C. (1908), Section 9. AIR 1964 Bom 85 (DB).

6. Miscellaneous.

——S. 47 (as amended in 1953) — Retrospective operation.

The right that an occupant gets under Section 47 is a substantive right. The effect of the amendment introduced by the Amending Act 59 of 1953 is not at all procedural. The effect is to take away rights of parties who do not make an application within a certain time. Therefore, it is clear that Act 59 of 1953 can only apply to those applications for ejectment which were filed after the Act came into force. With regard to the applications which were filed earlier, the amendment would not apply. ILR (1955) Bom 168: 56 Bom LR 1169: AIR 1955 Bom 207 (208) (Pt A) (Pr 2).

——S. 47 — Reference to English statute — Terms not identical — Interpreting Indian statute by such reference is unsafe. See Interpretation of Statutes. AIR 1950 Bom 120.

——S. 47 — Proceedings under Section 41 by landlord — Subsequent suit by tenant for relief under Section 47 — Delivery of possession to landlord during pendency of suit — Such delivery can only be subject to the result of the suit — Therefore, if in the suit it were held that the tenant was not liable to be evicted, the order under S. 43 would stand vacated and any possession obtained thereunder shall have to be restored to the tenant on the principle of restitution — It makes no difference whether the tenant succeeded on the facts and law existing on the date of suit or by reason of right conferred on him pending an appeal. See Presidency Small Cause Courts Act (1882), Section 41. AIR 1963 Mad 369 (DB).

——S. 48 — Scope — Remedy of aggrieved party — Second appeal and not revision is the proper procedure against an appellate order of the Small Cause Court. 57 CWN 296: AIR 1953 Cal 624 (624) (Pt A) (Pr 1).

——S. 48 — Decree for ejectment against tenant — Remedy of sub-tenant claiming under Section 11 (3), West Bengal Act 38 of 1948 — Procedure — Civil P. C. (1908), Section 141 — Houses and Rents — West Bengal Premises Rent Control (Temporary Provisions) Act (38 of 1948), Section 11 (3).

It is entirely an erroneous contention to put forward that under Section 9 (b) a transfer is constituted only when the insolvent ceases to be the owner of the property. What Section 9 (b) requires is that some interest in the property must be transferred by the insolvent. That interest may not be large enough to constitute all the rights of ownership, that interest may be less than the totality of rights which constitute ownership, but so long as the insolvent deprives himself of certain rights or interests in his own property and transfers those rights and interests to someone else, the transaction constitutes a transfer which falls within Section 9. 57 Bom LR 979: ILR (1955) Bom 941: AIR 1956 Bom 38 (39) (Pt A) (Pr 3) (DB).

●——S. 7 — Scheme of composition — Bank secured creditor, allowed 12 per cent. simple interest under scheme — Carrying out of scheme guaranteed by certain persons who were to transfer their properties to Official Assignee — Deed of transfer of trust embodying agreement to allow compound instead of simple interest to bank — Amendment not approved by Court and unsecured creditors — Suit by bank claiming compound interest — Suit dismissed by High Court — Appeal to Privy Council — Appeal opposed by one of insolvents, sons of deceased guarantor and Official Assignee — Contesting respondents held had right to be heard — Agreement to pay compound interest held could not be enforced without consent of all creditors and approval of Insolvency Court — Civil Court held had no jurisdiction to try suit — Presidency Towns Insolvency Act (1909), Sections 28 and 30 (1).

Insolvents who were indebted inter alia to a bank whose debt was secured by mortgages made proposals for a composition in settlement of their debts. The proposals were approved by the majority of the creditors and by the Insolvency Court. The carrying out of the scheme of composition was guaranteed by certain persons, who were to transfer to the Official Assignee their shares in certain properties. Special provisions were made in the scheme for the payment of the debt due to the bank, one of the provisions being that the bank was to receive 12 per cent. simple interest on its debt. One of the guarantors having declined to execute the proposed deed of transfer and it being necessary to satisfy the bank, it was agreed between the bank, certain of the guarantors, the insolvents and the Official Assignee that the scheme should be so amended as to allow the bank 12 per cent. compound interest instead of 12 per cent. simple interest. The amendment was embodied in the deed of transfer, also called the deed of trust, but was not approved of by the unsecured creditors and the Insolvency Court. The bank having received its debt with simple interest instituted a suit in the Civil Court to enforce the agreement as to compound interest. The High Court having dismissed the suit in appeal the bank appealed to the Privy Council contending first, that the contesting respondents, who were one of the insolvents, sons of a deceased guarantor and the Official Assignee, had no right to be heard because they were saying that the agreement to pay compound interest amounted to a fraudulent preference to the bank and to allow them to oppose the appeal on this ground would amount to allowing them to plead their own fraud, they being parties to the agreement and secondly, that the agreement was outside the scheme of composition and, therefore, could be enforced in a Civil Court:

Held, (1) that the agreement might amount to a fraudulent preference within the meaning of the insolvency laws, but there was no intention to defeat the unsecured creditors and agreement to pay compound interest was entered into in all innocence to save the scheme. The bank was a party to the agreement and if there was illegality attaching to it the bank must share the responsibility. Moreover, the Official Assignee was allowed to appear in the appeal to the High Court and he was directed by the Insolvency Court to contest the appeal to His Majesty in Council. In these circumstances he and the opposing respondents were entitled to be heard;

(2) that as the agreement to pay compound interest instead of simple interest constituted an amendment to the scheme it could not be enforced without the consent of all classes of creditors and the approval of the Insolvency Court: (1839) 2 Beav 385; (1807) 13 Ves 581 and (1881) 18 Ch D 464, Ref.

(3) that the Civil Court had no jurisdiction to try the suit. The deed of trust which embodied the agreement to pay compound interest instead of simple interest was undoubtedly part and parcel of the scheme of composition, and this being the case the only Court which could deal with the matter was the Insolvency Court. In a partition suit provision has to be made for the father's just debts before the partition can be effected and the purchaser of the son's share will be subject to this liability to satisfy the father's debts first before he can get the son's share. Such an adjustment and provisions for the father's debt can be made even in a proceeding under Section 7 of the Presidency Towns Insolvency Act, irrespective of the pendency of the partition suit. Consequently where some of the creditors of the father have already attached the share of the son in proceedings in execution of the decrees obtained by them against the father or against the father and the sons, on a presentation of application under Section 7, provision will have to be made first to satisfy the debts which have been declared to be binding on the minor before a partition can be effected and only in what remains the creditors who have attached the son's share can lay their claims. The Official Assignee can sell the son's share too for this purpose. In such cases the principle that comes into play is that the purchaser of the share of the son in a joint Hindu family has only an equity to step into the shoes of the son and enforce partition but when such partition comes to be effected, provision has first to be made for the discharge of the just debts of the father, that is, debts not tainted with illegality and immorality. 77 Mad LW 195: (1964) 2 Mad LJ 568: AIR 1965 Mad 60 (62) (Prs 5, 6, 8).

●——S. 7, Proviso — 'Any matter arising under Section 36' — Meaning: AIR 1937 Mad 775, Overruled.

Per Satyanarayana Rao and Panchapagesa Sastri JJ. (Raghava Rao J. dissenting). The object of Section 36, Presidency Towns Insolvency Act, 1909, is to enable the Official Assignee to gather the necessary information as regards the whereabouts of the properties belonging to the insolvent and also to discover what all his properties are. There is no reason to confine the words 'any property belonging to the insolvent' in sub-section (1) of Section 36 only to properties 'admittedly or undisputably belonging to him'. A person examined under Section 36 may admit to have in possession any property belonging to the insolvent, in which case sub-section (5) of Section 36 will apply, or may dispute the insolvent's title to the same. The latter case, namely, the case where there is a dispute as regards the property in possession of the person examined under Section 36, is included within the expression "any matter arising under Section 36" in the proviso to Section 7 and hence the insolvency Court has jurisdiction to determine this matter only if the parties thereto agree to such a course. If the parties do not consent, the only course open to the Official Assignee is to enforce his claim by a regular suit in ordinary Courts. The decision in AIR 1937 Mad 775 which holds that Section 36 (5) relates only to the property admittedly belonging to the insolvent and not to the property of which the ownership is disputed and that, therefore, the proviso to Section 7 does not apply where there is a dispute, is not correctly decided in view of the Full Bench decision in AIR 1929 Mad 705: Case law fully discussed; AIR 1929 Mad 705 (FB), Foll.; AIR 1937 Mad 775, Overruled.

Per Raghava Rao J.— The 'matter arising under Section 36' which is contemplated by the proviso to Section 7 is a a matter arising for decision under Section 36 and thus means the matter arising for an order to be made of the kind contemplated by sub-sections (4) and (5) of Section 36, which is none the less a decision because made on an admission of the kind contemplated by these sub-sections in a 'secret' and not a 'litigious' proceeding. The matter arising for decision under Section 36 is a question either of possession of property belonging to the insolvent or of the existence of a debt due to the insolvent, so that when in the former case the title of the insolvent to the property is not admitted, there is no order to be made under sub-section (5) of the kind which is within its purview or its intendment The factum of disputed title to property admittedly in possession of the person examined under S. 36, puts the case outside the pale of the section and excludes it altogether from the range of any decision or order thereunder. The proviso to Section 7 interpreted in this manner limits the operation of Section 7 to the determination of questions other than those falling within the ambit of Section 36, unless the parties otherwise agree. In this view of the sections, the two decisions can well stand together. Mrs. N. Lakshmi v. Per Panchapagesa Sastri J.— On a true interpretation of the proviso, where there has been a prior examination of a witness under Section 36, even a subsequent and independent application taken out under Section 7 of the Act is barred by the proviso in so far as it calls for a decision of any matter arising under Section 36: AIR 1929 Mad 705 (FB), Foll. SECTION 8

——Ss. 8, 92 — Scope of.

It is true that Section 92 refers only to a subsisting petition and the order of substitution of other creditors as petitioners contemplated by that section can only be made in a petition which is pending before the Court. But where the Insolvency Judge rescinded the order of dismissal of the petition and the same being revived he allowed other creditors under Section 92 to be substituted as petitioners, the Judge in substance exercised the jurisdiction under Section 8 (1) and the order of substitution under Section 92 was competent. 55 Bom LR 562: ILR (1953) Bom 1168: AIR 1953 Bom 430 (431) (Pt A) (Pr 2) (DB).

——S. 8 — Jurisdiction of Court.

The jurisdiction conferred by Section 8 is a very wide and far-reaching jurisdiction. It is also a very salutary jurisdiction. It must never be forgotten that when a petitioning creditor files a petition for adjudication of a person insolvent he is not in the same position as a plaintiff in a suit. A plaintiff in a suit is dominus lite and he has every right to proceed with the suit or to withdraw it or to allow it to be dismissed for default, but a petitioning creditor is not a dominus lite in that sense. Once he presents a petition, the order that he seeks is not only for his benefit but for the benefit of the general body of creditors, and the Insolvency Court at all times has jurisdiction over that petition and can control it and regulate it under Section 8. If the Court is satisfied that the order made by it formerly is not a proper order and that it should not have been made, it has got jurisdiction under Section 8 (1) to rescind that order and to restore the petition which was dismissed. 55 Bom LR 562: ILR (1953) Bom 1168: AIR 1953 Bom 430 (431) (Pt B) (Pr 2) (DB).

——Ss. 8, 12 and 92 — Power of Court to review, rescind or vary orders.

The Insolvency Judge has the jurisdiction under Section 8 (1) to set aside the order of dismissal passed previously and to substitute other creditors in place of petitioning creditors under Section 92 even though other creditors could not have availed themselves of the act of insolvency on which the original petitioning creditors relied as the foundation of their petition under Section 12. ——S. 8 — Nature and extent of jurisdiction.

The jurisdiction under Section 8 (1) is so wide that the Insolvency Court can exercise that jurisdiction sue motu even without the application of any party. The order being for the general body of creditors, whatever laches the respondents may be guilty of, the order made by the Insolvency Judge will not be interfered with. 55 Bom LR 562: ILR (1953) Bom 1168: AIR 1953 Bom 430 (432) (Pt D) (Pr 7) (DB).

●——Ss. 9 (1), Proviso and 90 (5) (as amended by Bombay Act 15 of 1939 and Bombay Ordinance 3 of 1948) — Bombay High Court Rules, Rule 52-B (3) — Insolvency notice requiring debtor to set up counter claim within seven days — Notice is not invalid or illegal — Debtor is not prevented from setting up counter claim within 30 days if such right is acquired after seven days.

The rule contained in Bombay High Court Rules, Rule 52-B (3) (b) about filing the affidavit within 7 days is evidently a mere procedural rule which is framed to enable the parties to take all steps necessary for speedy adjudication of the matter. The provision in question is based on the supposition that normally a debtor would be armed with a counter claim within seven days of the notice; but it does not debar him, in those cases where he secures such a claim after the expiry of seven days, from putting it forward within the period within which he is required under Section 9 (i) Proviso to salisfy the Court in regard to the counter-claim.

The rights such as a right to set up a counter claim within 30 days in answer to a bankruptcy notice which a debtor has in law under Section 9 (i) Proviso could not be curtailed by the terms of any notice. Rule 52-B (3) being evidently a procedural rule cannot override the rights of the debtor and should be so construed as to be consistent with the recognition of those rights When that rule is read with Section 90 (5). Insolvency Act, it is clear that it is not intended to take away any rights conferred by the Act. (1903) 2 KB 340 and (1914) 3 KB 726. Rel. on.

Further, the effect of Section 3, Bombay Ordinance, 3 of 1948 which has a retrospective operation is to validate among others Rule 52-B (3) requiring the debtor to file an affidavit in regard to a counter-claim within seven days of the service of the notice.

Hence, a bankruptcy notice requiring a debtor to file an affidavit in regard to a counter-claim within seven days of the service of the notice is not illegal or invalid on the ground that it is repugnant to the main provisions of the notice according to which the Court is to be satisfied in regard to a counter-claim within 30 days Kaikhushroo Pirojsha Ghiara v. ——S. 9 (e) — Property in possession of Receiver — Attachment without leave — Not valid — Such attachment not an act of insolvency.

The conditions under which the creditor may file an insolvency petition against the debtor are that there is a lawful act of insolvency within the meaning of the statute. An attachment without leave when the properties are in the possession of the Receiver is not a valid attachment. It is not an attachment on which the statutory jurisdiction can be attracted as the foundation of the act of insolvency. Obtaining leave subsequently with regard to the attachment does not render the attachment as an act of insolvency within the meaning of the Act. Where there was a valid order of attachment in execution of a money decree for twenty-one days prior to the filing of the insolvency petition and the validity of that attachment was in no way shaken or affected by the dismissal of the Execution Petition for default, the order of attachment would constitute an act of insolvency within the meaning of Section 9 (e) of the Presidency-Towns Insolvency Act. The attachment ceased as the decree-holder did not choose to pursue the execution, and when it ceased the cesser did not relate back to the date of the execution petition.

The attachment must be valid in law. If the order of attachment is cancelled in due course of judicial proceedings on the ground that the attachment ought not to have been made, the act of attachment must be deemed to have had no judicial existence, and can be treated as non est in law. No rights can flow from them and accrued rights, if any, on foot of them must also cease. The act of insolvency grounded on an attachment in execution of money decree loses its foundation the moment such attachment is wiped out as a result of judicial adjudication.

The Court has got a discretion in the matter of adjudication. But the discretion should be judicially exercised and should, of course, be not arbitrary or capricious.

The order of attachment before judgment made under Order 38, Rule 11, of the Civil Procedure Code, would enure and continue in the course of execution proceedings. Where the execution petition is dismissed due to the act of the decree holder placing the Court in such a position as to prevent it from proceeding with the execution, the attachment ceases and it is the duty of the Execution Court to record the cessation of the attachment. The discretion of the Court, under its inherent powers, to adjust the rights of parties on the basis of events after the starting of the action, is well recognised and accepted as a rule of justice, equity and good conscience. In some cases, it is almost the duty of the Court to advert to the subsequent events brought to its notice lest it should fail to do substantial justice between the parties. The substratum of insolvency petition is the act of insolvency. If what was visibly an act of insolvency on the date of the petition cannot be attributed that character when the petition comes on for orders because of subsequent events, it is legitimate and proper that the Court should take stock of the actual situation as on the date of the disposal, instead of relying upon the past state of affairs which has ceased to exist. Any adjudication that may be made, leaving out of account the change of circumstances affecting the act of insolvency would be futile, as it would be annulled under Section 21 of the Presidency Towns Insolvency Act. The fact that the debtor who professes to possess assets worth over a lakh of rupees alleges that the debts amount to only Rs. 25,000 and that none of the creditors except the respondent whose debt amounts to Rs. 400 insists to recover his debt at once and that the debtor is willing to pay off this debt within 24 hours, is no reason why he should not be adjudged insolvent when the debt of Rs. 400 has remained unpaid like other debts for four years and the debtor has not given a schedule of creditors and the amount of debts due to them. 70 Mad LW 367: AIR 1957 Mad 403 (405) (Pt D) (Pr 5) (DB).

——Ss. 13 (4) (b), 12 — "Other sufficient cause" — Words not to be interpreted ejusdem generis — Application by creditor not bona fide but made out of spite liable to be dismissed.

The words "other sufficient cause" in Section 13 (4) (b) should be interpreted in the widest possible manner and not ejusdem generis in relation to the earlier clauses in the section. Under Section 12, a debtor would be liable to be adjudicated insolvent by an unsecured creditor having a claim for more than Rs. 500, if the former had committed an act of insolvency within three months of the petition. But the right of such a creditor to adjudicate the debtor a bankrupt is not a weapon available to him to be used to serve any ulterior purpose or to be used vindictively. Section 13 gives power to the Court in those cases to dismiss it. AIR 1943 Mad 355, Relied on.

It cannot be said that adjudication of a debtor as insolvent is one of the remedies open to a creditor and it will be for him to choose whether he is to take the thorny path of execution of the decree or adopt a short cut of adjudicating the debtor an insolvent. An adjudication of a debtor as a bankrupt is not a method of collecting a debt, though as a result of it, the creditor may get paid. Essentially an adjudication brings about a change in the status of a debtor and enables the Official Assignee or receiver in whom the property of the debtor gets vested to administer or sell it to pay off his creditors. It is only a particular class of creditors (vide Section 12) that can file a petition for adjudication. And no absolute right is given to them to obtain an adjudication as the Court will dismiss the petition if the conditions laid down in Section 13 (4) are satisfied.

Held, that the fact that the debtor had been a recalcitrant debtor and was unable to pay his debts could not justify the creditor, purely out of spite and with no other object in view, to adjudge him bankrupt. The application for adjudication could not be regarded as a bona fide one and had, therefore, to be dismissed. Held, further that the suits for partition by the minor sons of the debtor could not at all have any effect upon the creditor realising his dues which were not avyavaharika from the debtor. 75 Mad LW 723: 1962 Mad WN 713: (1963) 1 Mad LJ 37: AIR 1963 Mad 181 (181, 182, 183) (Prs 1, 7 to 9) (DB).

Held, that the case came within Section 9 (e). On the admission of the insolvent himself, an act of insolvency was committed, and there was no necessity for any formal proof of the act of insolvency by anybody on behalf of the petitioning creditor. (1953) 2 MLJ 523: 1953 Mad WN 709: 66 Mad LW 874: AIR 1954 Mad 272 (272) (Pr 1) (DB).

●——Ss. 17 and 51 — Effect of adjudication — Adjudication made by two Courts of same insolvent under Presidency Towns and Provincial Insolvency Acts — Doctrine of relating back — Its applicability — Vesting of insolvent's property — Precedence in — Property vested cannot be divested.

On an adjudication order passed under the provisions of the Presidency Towns Insolvency Act, 1909, the property of the insolvent vests in the Official Assignee by virtue of the operation of Section 17 of the Act. Section 17 provides for the vesting of the property on the making of the order of adjudication. Where, therefore, an order of adjudication in respect of the same insolvent is made by a District Court at another place on a subsequent date under Section 28 (2) of the Provincial Insolvency Act, 1920, Section 28 (2) cannot in law operate in respect of the insolvents' property because the said property had by virtue of the statutory provision contained in Section 17 of the Presidency Towns Insolvency Act, 1909, already vested in the Official Assignee. The doctrine of relating back on which Section 28 (7) of the Provincial Insolvency Act, 1920, and Section 51 of the Presidency Towns Insolvency Act, 1909 are based, can have no application in such a case because the vesting in the Official Assignee is the result of a statutory provision; and so, in the absence of any provision in the Provincial Insolvency Act, 1920, for the divesting of the property which has already vested in the Official Assignee, it cannot be said that the doctrine of relating back has that effect.

The reasonable way to reconcile Section 28 (2) read with Section 28 (7) of the Provincial Act with Sections 17 and 51 of the Presidency Act is to hold that the doctrine of relating back prescribed by Section 28 (7) has no application to cases where the insolvent's property has already vested in the Official Assignee. A, a creditor, filed a petition on 8th February, 1963, to adjudicate the insolvent and the act of insolvency alleged was the debtor's notice, dated 7th February, 1963, of suspension of payment of his debts. The petition was adjourned from time to time to enable a settlement being effected by the debtor so as to avert the insolvency. ——Ss. 17 and 46 (3), Expln. — Scope — Suit for accounts of dissolved partnership and recovery of money — One of defendants partners undischarged insolvent — Absence of leave of insolvency Court — Suit not maintainable.

A suit by one of the partners of a dissolved firm for rendition of accounts and recovery of money as may be found due to him against the other partners one of whom is an undischarged insolvent, is not maintainable as against the undischarged insolvent in the absence of leave of the insolvency Court by virtue of Section 17 read with Section 46 (3) of the Presidency Towns Insolvency Act. Since all the partners are necessary parties to such suit, the suit would be equally incompetent against the other partners. The debts and liabilities of the insolvent partner arising out of the partnership which is dissolved prior to his adjudication, even assuming that such liabilities were not ascertained sums of money, are provable in insolvency within the meaning of Section 46 (3) and the plaintiff would occupy the position of a creditor for purposes of Section 17, Presidency Towns Insolvency Act.

Where a partner in a firm has been adjudged an insolvent, he ceases to be a partner by virtue of Section 34 of the Partnership Act, and, such firm is also dissolved under Section 42 of that Act. On the adjudication of a partner as insolvent, his share in the partnership business along with his separate property vests in the insolvency Court. Once this vesting takes place, the provisions of Section 17 of the Presidency Towns Insolvency Act come into play, and no creditor with respect to a debt provable in insolvency can proceed against the insolvent except by recourse to the insolvency Court, nor can he file any independent suit for the recovery of his debts except with the leave of the insolvency Court. 1962 Raj LW 135: ILR (1960) 10 Raj 1502: AIR 1961 Raj 81 (84, 85) (Pt B) (Prs 7, 8).

See High Court Rules and Orders — Madras High Court Original Side Rules. Order 21, Rule 1. AIR 1959 Mad 484.

——S. 33 (4) — 'Property' — Money if included.

What Section 33 (4), requires is that the insolvent should 'deliver up possession of any part of his property'. The word 'property' is certainly large enough to include money. In fact there are many people who consider money to be the most desirable form of property. The expression 'deliver up possession' of property does not exclude money. Normally where there is an order for payment of money a Court leaves it to the person interested to take out execution and it will not ordinarily permit him to invoke the jurisdiction of the Court relating to contempt. But, the procedure relating to execution would not ordinarily be available where the person proceeded against has been adjudicated insolvent and his estate has vested in the Official Assignee. To say that an order for the payment of money made against an insolvent by Court can be enforced — whatever the circumstance may be — only by proceedings in execution would be tantamount to saying that no such order can in practice be executed. Therefore even orders for payment of money can be enforced by contempt proceedings. 71 Mad LW 768: AIR 1950 Mad 484 (487) (Pt B) (Prs 14, 15).

——S. 33 — Insolvent ordered to deposit money in his possession in Court — Disobedience — Contempt proceedings — Facts to be proved.

Where an order was made on the insolvent to deposit the money in his hands in the Court and the insolvent disobeys that order, before the insolvent can be punished by committal under Section 33, it must be shown that at the time the order is made the insolvent is in possession of money and that his refusal to bring in the money is wilful. Where it was found as a result of an inquiry, that the insolvent had failed to account for a certain sum, this was equivalent to a finding that the insolvent was retaining that amount. In effect and substance, therefore, there is a finding that he had the money. When it is shown that a person was in possession of money on a certain date and he does not give an explanation which can be believed about the disposal of that money, the reasonable inference is that he continues to be in possession of the money. 71 Mad LW 768: AIR 1950 Mad 484 (488) (Pt C) (Pr 16).

Where during the public examination of the insolvent certain facts relating to his dealings with some persons is disclosed, an order should be passed under Section 36 (1) for the examination of those persons and calling upon them to produce the documents and papers mentioned in the notice of motion put in for an order to summon them before Court. AIR 1953 Bom 19 (20) (Pt A) (Pr 3).

——S. 36 — Examination under — Object and nature of — Examination is not in the nature of a witness in a proceeding between parties who are litigating their dispute before a Court — It is by the Court and not by parties before the Court — Examination for all purposes is by the Court even though the Court may allow parties appearing before it to examine and put some questions to such person. AIR 1953 Bom 19 (21) (Pt B) (Pr 15).

——S. 36 (1) — Order under — Nature of — Condition necessary for issuing order — An order for examination is passed for the general body of creditors and not for any individual creditor — Such an order is a discretionary order and is passed only when the person applying for it establishes a prima facie probability that some benefit will result from proposed examination. AIR 1953 Bom 19 (21) (Pt C) (Pr 16).

——S. 41 — Annulment — Meaning — Person whose insolvency has been annulled for failure to apply for discharge — If can be appointed hereditary trustee — Madras Hindu Religious Endowments Act (2 of 1927), Sections 54 (1) (b) and 84 (2).

An annulment of an adjudication under Section 41 of the Presidency Towns Insolvency Act is not tantamount to removal of a disability and therefore continues to be a disqualification contemplated by Section 54 (1) (b) of the Madras Hindu Religious Endowments Act. The Board cannot in view of 'annulment' under Section 41, appoint as a hereditary trustee a person who has been adjudicated an insolvent and whose adjudication has been annulled because he has not performed his elementary obligation under the Act of even applying for his discharge within the time prescribed. (1953) 2 MLJ 518: 66 Mad LW 794: AIR 1954 Mad 88 (88) (Pr 3).

dividends on debtor's shares in company under Liquidation, held on facts of case, not to amount to equitable assignment. See Transfer of Property Act (1882), Section 6. AIR 1964 Cad 470 (DB).

——S. 46 — Promissory note debt incurred by insolvent after presentation of petition and before adjudication — Is a post-insolvency debt, not provable in insolvency — There is nothing in the Insolvency Acts which prohibits an insolvent from borrowing or entering into contracts giving rise to financial liability. See Provincial Insolvency Act (1920), Section 28. AIR 1954 Mad 508 (DB).

——S. 47 — Set off of debt jointly due to A and B — Cannot be allowed to be set off against separate debt due from A in a suit by X against A to recover his separate debt. See Civil P. C. (1908), Order 8, Rule 6. AIR 1954 Cal 303.

——S. 47 — Right of set-off — Companies Act (1913), S. 229.

The right of set off given by the bankruptcy law is wider than that given by the general law. The Bankruptcy Acts generally enlarge the scope of the subject-matter of the plea of set off. (1892) 2 QB 573, Rel. on.

Thus, in bankruptcy and in winding-up of insolvent companies the subject-matter of set-off is wider and unliquidated damages may be set off against a debt. There is, therefore, no doubt that in bankruptcy and in winding up of insolvent companies the surety's liability under a guarantee may be set off against a debt due to the surety by the company. 6 Rang 46; 9 QBD 113; (1942) 2 Ch D 339, Rel. on. ILR (1952) 2 Cal 16: AIR 1951 Cal 519 (521, 522) (Pt B) (Prs 8, 19).

——S. 47 — Right of set-off — Fixation of date for ascertainment of — Companies Act (1913), S. 229.

The Presidency Towns Insolvency Act does not state on what date the right of set-off is to be ascertained. Section 46 of that Act, however, shows that all debts and liabilities to which the debtor is subject when he is adjudged an insolvent may be proved. The dividing line, therefore, in the case of a proof of debt is the date of adjudication. (1900) 1 QB 546, Rel. on.

The equivalent of adjudication in the case of the company is the order for winding-up. The right of proof and set-off in the case of an insolvent company in the course of winding up in a Presidency Town must therefore be defined and ascertained as at the date of the order of winding up. (1924) 2 Ch D 339, Rel. on. ILR (1952) 2 Cal 16: AIR 1951 Cal 519 (521) (Pt C) (Pr 12).

——S. 49 (1) — Government's right to priority — Right of private party to insist on exercise of right by Government.

Section 49 (1) of the Presidency Towns Insolvency Act does not confer any right on a private party to insist upon the Government exercising their right of priority in respect of debts payable to them from an insolvent's estate. 1958 Mad WN 720: (1958) 2 MLJ 560.

——S. 49 — Scope of — Section 229 of the Companies Act 1913 will not justify a resort to Section 49 of the P. T. Insolvency Act because Section 230 of the Companies Act makes express provision in respect of all categories or heads of claims dealt with in Section 49.

Under Section 49 (c) of the P. T. Insolvency Act the landlord is entitled to priority only in respect of one month's rent; but by virtue of Clauses (4) and (5) of Section 230 of the Companies Act a landlord will be entitled to priority — though a qualified one — in respect of a longer period. See Companies Act (1913), Sections 229 and 230. AIR 1957 Mad 162.

●——S. 51 — Effect of adjudication — Adjudication made by two Courts of same insolvent under Presidency Towns and Provincial Insolvency Acts — Doctrine of relating back — Its applicability — Vesting of insolvent's property — Precedence in — Property vested cannot be divested — Doctrine of relation back has no application to cases where the insolvent's property has already vested in the Official Assignee. See Presidency Towns Insolvency Act (1909), Sec. 17. AIR 1963 SC 754.

——Ss. 51, 55, 56 and 57 — Section 57 is not only subject to Sections 55 and 56 but also to Section 51.

Section 51, does deal with the avoidance of transfers because by embodying the doctrine of relation back in that section it makes the title of the Official Assignee prevail against the title of any stranger and permits the Official Assignee by reason of that doctrine to avoid any transaction which was entered into by the insolvent and which constituted the act of insolvency. Hence Section 57 is not only subject to the provisions of Sections 55 and 56 but is also subject to Section 51.

No transaction can be considered a bona fide transaction which itself constitutes an act of insolvency. If the transfer constitutes an act of insolvency, it is liable to be avoided by the Official Assignee, Section 57 in terms excludes such a transaction from its protection. It would seem that even transactions which are against the policy of the Insolvency Act would not come within the protection of Section 57, because in no view of the case could such transactions be considered to be bona fide transactions. 57 Bom LR 979: ILR (1955) Bom 941: AIR 1956 Bom 38 (40) (Pt C) (Pr 5) (DB).

——Ss. 51 and 65 — Distinction between.

Section 65 gives the power to the Insolvency Court to rescind contracts where contracts are considered by the Official Assignee to be onerous, but the contracts which the Court can cancel under Section 65 are contracts which were valid when they were made by the insolvent. It is only on the cancellation by the Court that the contract ceases to have force. The scheme of Section 51 is entirely different. Section 51, is enacted for avoidance of contracts or transfers when they were entered into or affected. In other words, whereas under Section 51, what the Official Assignee has to satisfy the Court is that by reason of his superior title the transfer made by the insolvent was void, under Section 65, the Official Assignee is not relying upon his superior title but on the contrary he accepts the position that the insolvent had the right to enter into the contract but because of the nature of the contract he does not wish to be bound any longer by it. 57 Bom LR 979: ILR (1955) Bom 941: AIR 1956 Bom 38 (40) (Pt D) (Pr 7) (DB).

——Ss. 52 (2) (a), 17 — Insolvent acquiring decree before discharge — Intervention by Official Assignee in suit — Decree would vest in him.

Under Section 52 (2) (a) of the Presidency Towns Insolvency Act, it is provided that the property of the insolvent divisible among his creditors shall comprise of all such property as may belong to or be vested in the insolvent at the commencement of the insolvency or may be acquired by, or devolve on him before his discharge. Under Section 17 of the said Act the whole of the property of the insolvent vests in the Official Assignee on the making of an order of adjudication. But the property acquired by the insolvent after adjudication does not vest in the Official Assignee until he intervenes, that is, he takes active steps to assert his title thereto. If the Official Assignee intervenes, the property indefeasibly vests in him. Where the Official Assignee has been impleaded in a suit by the insolvent for recovery of damages against his bank as the second defendant and he has asked for a decree in his favour, this is sufficient intervention on his part to vest in him such rights in the decree in the suit as the plantiff might get as an after-acquired property. ILR (1964) 1 Mad 1012: (1965) 2 Com LJ 37: AIR 1965 Mad 266 (282) (Pt L) (Pr 69).

Section 99 is only a procedural section. It does not confer any new rights or impose any new liability. SECTION 101

——S. 101 — Period of limitation — Whether to be reckoned from the date of the order or from the date of the communication of the order.

There is nothing in the provisions of the Presidency Towns Insolvency Act, which required the Official Assignee to pronounce an order, as is being done in the case of judgment of Courts. But the normal practice is to communicate such orders to the party, and that was the course which was actually adopted in the instant case. In such case, justice requires that the period of 20 days mentioned in Section 101 of the Act should commence only from the date of the receipt of the copy of order by the party. Otherwise, it may happen that even before he comes to know of the order passed against him, the period of 20 days would have expired. SECTION 127

——S. 127 — Unclaimed amount with Official Assignee — Insolvent not finally discharged — Claim by his heir for payment — Whether can be allowed.

The right of an insolvent or his heirs to be entitled to any surplus in the hands of the Official Assignee arises only when there is a surplus after payment in full with interest the claims of the creditors either under the Indian Insolvency Act of 1848, or under Section 78 of Act (3 of 1909). Where therefore certain amount is standing to the credit of an insolvent's estate who had died without obtaining a final discharge as provided by the Act of 1848 and the proceedings are still pending without any payment to the creditors, neither the insolvent nor his heirs are entitled to the amount and as such, an application by the heir of the insolvent for payment of the amount under Section 87 of the Act of 1848, cannot be entertained.

In such circumstances, under the Act of 1848, the assignee should seek the directions of Court under Section 44 (or under Order 11, Rule 13 of the Insolvency Rules framed under the Act 3 of 1909) and act according to the directions of the Court as to the disposal of the money due to such creditors. AIR 1952 Mad 89 (89) (Prs 4, 5).

RULE 52-B

——R. 52-B (5) (b) (Bombay) — Right to claim specific performance of contract of indemnity does not amount to counterclaim.

A mere right to claim specific performance of the contract of indemnity cannot be regarded as a counterclaim at all. This right may mature into a counterclaim if the indemnity-holder actually pays the amount to his creditor or if and after he obtains a decree for the payment of the amount in a Court of competent jurisdiction. Where, therefore, the amount has not been paid and the decree for the payment of the amount in question is yet to be passed, the right which can be properly regarded as a counterclaim, does not vest in the person claiming to be indemnified. In such a case, his claim that the insolvency notice which has been served on him should be set aside on the ground that he has a counterclaim which exceeds the decretal amount ordered to be paid by him is not justified under Rule 52-B (5) (b) of the Rules framed by the Bombay High Court under the Presidency Towns Insolvency Act, 1909. ILR (1956) Bom 60: 57 Bom LR 1122: AIR 1956 Bom 106 (109) (Pt B) (Pr 7) (DB).

PRESS AND REGISTRATION OF BOOKS ACT (25 of 1867)

PREAMBLE

——Preamble — Object.

The title and the preamble of the Act show that the Act was passed for regulating printing presses and newspapers, for the preservation of copies of every book and newspaper printed in India and for the registration of such books and newspapers. It is clear that the object in passing this enactment was not for establishing control over printing presses and newspapers, but the primary concern of the Legislature was to pass an enactment which would help regulate printing presses and newspapers and the preservation of copies of books and newspapers printed in the country. (1965) 5 Gul LR 825: AIR 1964 Guj 278 (280) (Pt B) (Pr 8).

——Ss. 1, 3 and 21 (as amended by Act LV of 1955) — 'Paper' — Meaning of — 'Document' — (General Clauses Act (1897), S. 3 (18)).

Any decipherable information which is set down in a lasting form would be a 'document' and if it is printed within India, it is hit by Section 3 of the Act. In view of the definition of 'paper' inserted in Section 1 by Act (LV of 1955), it is no longer open to say that the word 'paper' in Section 3 is synonymous with 'newspaper' or must contain matter which is of literary or historical or cultural value. It is true that every printed invitation to a dinner or to a party of any sort and even every printed visiting card would now be a 'paper', which if printed in this country has to conform to Section 3 of the Act. The resulting general inconvenience is a matter calling for remedial action under Section 21, which empowers the State Government to exclude any class of books and papers from the operation of the Act. 1960 Cr LJ 452: (1960) 1 Andh WR 400: 1960 Mad LJ (Cri) 303: ILR (1959) Andh Pra 1391: AIR 1960 Andh Pra 176 (177) (Pt A) (Pr 4).

——S. 1 — Pamphlet — Meaning of.

In the Concise Oxford dictionary 'pamphlet' is defined as a small unbound treatise specially on subject of current interest. The leaflet in question was a defamatory leaflet of 4 pages which was not stitched. It contained a large number of allegations against two individuals.

Held, that merely because the subject of composition was defamatory it would not be taken out of the definition of 'treatise'. Literature need not always be philosophical or moral. It can equally be immoral. The leaflet in question was a 'pamphlet' and was therefore a 'book' within the meaning of the Press and Registration of Books Act, 1867. SECTION 3

——Ss. 3, 2—Applicability — Ss. 3, 12—Printer of book not printing his name and place of printing on the book, but printing somebody else's name and some other place — Printer commits offence under Section 12. 1960 Cr LJ 1037: AIR 1960 All 450 (452) (Pt A) (Pr 5).

——Ss. 3, 12 — Outer cover showing name of different person as printer — Inner cover showing the name of printer who actually printed the book including the outer cover — No offence.

If the whole of a volume is printed by one man at one place the whole is one book, and if the names of the printer and the place of printing are printed legibly at any place of it, Section 3 is fully complied with. The names are required to be printed at only one place of a book and not at two or more places. The definition of 'book' includes a part of a volume but that applies only when different parts of a volume are printed by different men or at different places. Every volume or every part of a volume printed by one man at one place is a book. Where the outer cover and the inner cover are both printed by the applicant at his press, it cannot be said that they form two books and that the former should have contained an imprint separate from the imprint on the latter.

The fact that the outer cover contains names of the printer and the press different from the names printed in the inner cover, might convey to the public the idea that the outer cover was printed at the place and by the person mentioned thereon. The printer might be guilty of cheating the pubilc by so conveying the idea but he cannot be guilty under S. 3.

A book bearing any name can be printed by any person at any place. If the applicant had not printed his name and the place of printing on the inner cover he would have infringed Section 3 on the ground of not printing at all the name of the printer and the place of printing and not on the ground that he printed on the outer cover the name of a person who was not the printer and the place which was not the place of printing. 1960 Cr LJ 1037: AIR 1960 All 450 (452) (Pt B) (Pr 6).

——Ss. 3, 12 — Name of the human being who printed the book should be printed.

Section 3 requires the names of the human beings who print and publish the book and not the names of shops which can be changed at will. 'Published by Kutubkhan' without mentioning the name of the human being is not enough. 1960 Cr LJ 1037: AIR 1960 All 450 (452) (Pt C) (Pr 8).

——Ss. 3 and 12 — Non-compliance with S. 3 — Publisher's liability.

Section 3 only refers to the printing of a book and not its publication. Hence, the words in Section 12 'or publish any book otherwise than in conformity with the rule contained in Section 3' make no meaning. The words 'or publish' in Section 12 must therefore, be ignored. Hence the publication of a book which is not printed in conformity with the rule contained in Section 3 is not an offence under Section 3 read with Section 12. ——S. 3 (as amended by Act 55 of 1955) — Duty of publisher.

The duty of a publisher is not merely to give his name and place of publication for being printed. It is also his duty to see that the book or paper complies with Section 3 and to refrain from publishing it if the requirements are not satisfied.

Where therefore a printed leaflet, which contained an appeal to the policeman on behalf of an institution, merely disclosed the names of the persons that issued the appeal and their 'camp' from which they issued the appeal, but the names of the printer and publisher and the place of printing and of publication were not printed thereon.

There is no provision in the Act for the Magistrate to direct the cancellation of any declaration. 57 CWN 819: AIR 1953 Cal 772 (772) (Pr 4) (DB).

——Ss. 4 and 14 — Declaration under S. 4 — No power to Magistrate either to suspend or cancel it.

Once a declaration as provided under S. 4 is made and lodged with the District Magistrate, there is no power under the Act for the Magistrate either to suspend or cancel it or to declare it to be inoperative or to decide the question of ownership or title in regard to the press or the question of the right of possession thereof. The duty to receive a declaration under Section 4 is purely a ministerial one and not a judicial one, enabling the Magistrate to hold an enquiry and decide whether to permit a person to make such a declaration or not. Such a power does not appear to have been given to a Magistrate in respect of declarations to be made and subscribed under S. 4.

Where a Magistrate finds, that two individuals have made and subscribed declarations in respect of the same press, claiming to be in exclusive possession thereof and the District Magistrate finds that one of them at least must have made a false declaration or statement, he can, acting under the provisions of Section 14, file a complaint against such a declarant and if such a declarant is convicted, he would be liable to the penalty prescribed in Section 14 of the Act. But there is no provision in the Act which empowers a District Magistrate to hold an enquiry and decide the question of title or ownership or the right of possession and then pass an order suspending or cancelling a declaration made by a party or declaring the declaration to be inoperative, thereby disabling such a party from carrying on the business as a keeper of a press. Provisions for authentication under Section 6 apply to a declaration made under Section 5 and not to a declaration made under Section 4.

The only obligation of a keeper of a press is to make and subscribe a declaration as provided by Section 4 and such a declaration does not need any authentication provided under S. 6. (1964) 5 Guj LR 825: AIR 1964 Guj 278 (281) (Pt C) (Pr 9).

——S. 5 — Removal of press cannot be bona fide if having regard to the provisions of the Press and Registration of Books Act the accused could not lawfully keep the press in their possession at the time of their removal — Plea of bona fide removal whether available to accused. See Penal Code (1860), S. 378. 1959 Cri LJ 1141: AIR 1959 Andh Pra 530.

[Reversed on facts in AIR 1962 SC 586.]

——Ss. 5 (2), 6, Proviso and 8-B — Scope — Choice of title of newspaper — Magistrate has discretion to authenticate or cancel declaration — Order refusing to cancel declaration not quasi-judicial — No interference by High Court under Art. 226 of Constitution of India.

Section 5 (2) of the Act does not put any restriction in the matter of selection of title or name of the newspaper if there is no newspaper of that name either in the same language in India or in the same State. The proviso to Section 6 puts a restriction on the choice of title of a newspaper if there is already a newspaper owned by a different person and of the type described in the proviso. A Magistrate cannot, therefore, refuse to authenticate a declaration unless he is satisfied on enquiry from the Press Registrar that the proviso to Section 6 is attracted. As is clear from the wording of the proviso to S. 6 the decision of the question whether there is any other newspaper published in the same language or in the same State having the same name by some other person depends entirely on the satisfaction of the Magistrate in regard to those matters. So also, the cancellation under Section 8-B of declaration once made, depends on the subjective opinion of the Magistrate that the declaration should be cancelled and on his satisfaction in regard to any of the matters mentioned in Section 8-B. This is clear from the wording of S. 8-B.

Thus the Legislature has made the formation of opinion by the Magistrate as to revocation of a declaration dependent on the conditions mentioned in Cls. (i) to (iv) of Section 8-B. But the existence or absence of those conditions is left to the 'satisfaction' of the Magistrate. This is clear from the words 'he is satisfied that' used in Section 8-B before the enumeration of Cls. (i) to (iv). The existence of the matters mentioned in Cls. (i) to (iv) being dependent on the subjective satisfaction of the Magistrate the argument that the cancellation of a declaration or refusal to cancel it by the Magistrate after forming the opinion that the declaration should or should not be cancelled is a matter determined by the Magistrate in a quasi-judicial manner and consequently it would be open to the High Court under Art. 226 to interfere into the grounds of the 'opinion' or the 'satisfaction' formed by the Magistrate or to consider the reasonableness or otherwise of that opinion, cannot be accepted. If the Magistrate has formed an 'opinion' and arrived at the requisite 'satisfaction' honestly, then the High Court cannot substitute its own opinion or satisfaction for that of the Magistrate, or enquire into the validity of the grounds on which that 'opinion' or 'satisfaction' was formed. 1965 MPLJ 227: 1965 Jab LJ 479: AIR 1965 Madh Pra 128 (130) (Pt A) (Pr 6) (DB).

——Ss. 5 (2) and 6, Proviso (as amended by Act 55 of 1955) — Scope and effect of — Application for making declaration as Publisher of Journal — Scope of inquiry — Jurisdiction of Magistrate — Rival claimant applying later — Power of Magistrate to assess comparative merits and to decide about right to use name or title or publication.

Under S. 5 (2) of the Press and Registration of Books Act, 1867, as amended by Act 55 of 1955, it is open to any person to declare his intention to start a newspaper. There is no restriction in the choice of a title or name of his newspaper, so long as there has been no newspaper of that name either in the same language in India or in the same State. If there were none such, there is no discretion left in the Chief Presidency Magistrate to direct the publisher to adopt any other name. Section 5 does not invest the Chief Presidency Magistrate with jurisdiction to decide the matter as to who would be entitled to make declaration. There is a limited jurisdiction given to the Magistrate under the Proviso to S. 6 of the Act to enquire as to whether there is any other newspaper in the same language or in the same State having the same name by some other person; but the Proviso to S. 6 does not invest the Magistrate with jurisdiction to decide between two rival claimants for using the same name or title for their newspapers. The duty of the Magistrate is merely administrative, i.e., to record the declaration or to refuse to authenticate it in the event of there being a newspaper of the kind referred to in the Proviso to S. 6. If, on the date when a person applies to make a declaration with respect to his journal under a title or name there was no published newspaper having the same or a similar title, he would be entitled to make the declaration under S. 5 (2) and there would be no jurisdiction in the Magistrate to assess the comparative merits between him and his rival who applied later and decide as to which of them would be entitled to the name or title.

Section 5-(2) is not concerned with adjudication of rights. The question whether the applicant has acquired a right to use a particular name for his publication either by reputation or under the Trade Marks Act cannot be considered in proceedings under S. 5 (2); the remedy in such a case lies in the Civil Court. 1959 Mad WN 451: 72 Mad LW 416: (1959) 2 Mad LJ 314: 1959 Mad LJ (Cr) 743: ILR (1959) Mad 978: 1959 Cri LJ 1441: AIR 1959 Mad 519 (521) (Pt B) (Pr 11).

——Ss. 6 and 4 — Obligation of keeper of press — Provision for authentication under S. 6 apply to a declaration made under S. 5 and not to a declaration under S. 4. The only obligation of a keeper of a press is to make and subscribe a declaration as provided by S. 4 and such a declaration does not need any authenticaton provided under S. 6. ——Ss. 7, 3, 4, 18 — Names of author and publisher printed on book — There is no presumption that they are publishers.

So far as newspapers are concerned, under S. 7 a copy of a declaration made under S. 6 shall be held (unless the contrary be proved) to be sufficient evidence as against the person whose name shall be subscribed to such declaration, that the said person is the printer or publisher of every portion of the newspaper. There is no similar provision in the Act with regard to books. The names printed in the books cannot be taken as prima facie evidence unless it is rebutted by the persons concerned. It is open to the complainant to produce a copy of the entry made in the Register under S. 18 of the Act. There is no presumption that it is written by the man who is described as the author, unless it is one of the limited class of books covered by S. 87 of the Evidence Act read with S. 57 (3) of the Act. So far as the printers and publishers are concerned, the complainants should call for and prove the certified copy of the declaration made under S. 4 of the Act and of the entries made under S. 18 of the Act. ILR (1959) Cut 685: 1960 Cri LJ 1116: AIR 1960 Orissa 126 (127) (Pt A) (Prs 6, 7).

——S. 7 — Person declaring to be printer and publisher — He would be liable for printing objectionable matter although he had entrusted the selection of news items to his editor.

Where a person files a declaration that he is the printer and publisher of a paper, the presumption is that he was aware of what was printed and published in the issue of the paper. The declaration is prima facie evidence of the publication by the person all the news items in the paper. He will not be absolved for the publication of objectionable matter, by the mere fact that in daily routine he had asked the Editor to select the news item. 67 Pun LR 877: AIR 1966 Punj 93 (95) (Pt B) (Pr 6).

——S. 7 — Declaration about ownership of newspaper — Evidentiary value.

Where in a statement about the ownership and other particulars of a newspaper published in its issue, R was shown as the owner of the newspaper, the statement is not binding on R under S. 7. According to S. 7 the printing of the name of the editor is sufficient evidence only against the editor to the extent that he was the editor of every portion of that issue of which a copy is produced. So far as R is concerned, it has no such binding effect. ILR (1959) 9 Raj 524: AIR 1959 Raj 280 (286) (Pt G) (Pr 29) (DB).

——Ss. 2 (6) and 18 — News-sheet, meaning of — Publication without permission.

Where the contents of a pamphlet are in the form of presentation of novel items of information which are intended to be regarded as such by the ordinary readers, the pamphlet would be a news-sheet within the meaning of S. 2 (6) even though some parts of it are relating to matters of history or common knowledge and are already published in other newspapers. A publication of such a pamphlet without the previous sanction required by S. 15 would constitute an offence under S. 18 (1) of the Act. 52 Bom LR 229: 1950-51 Cri LJ 1230: 1949 Bom Cri Cas 154: ILR (1950) Bom 181: AIR 1950 Bom 246 (247) (Pr 4) (DB).

●——S. 3 (3) — Government not forfeiting security — Order under S. 3 (3), if justified.

Before Government can act under S. 3 (3), there must be an application by the keeper and actual refund by Government. Till such an eventuality happens, the deposit may continue to remain as security with Government, and Government can forfeit the security. If the Government does not forfeit the security, an order under S. 3 (3) is not justified. Manohar Damodar Patil v. ——S. 3 (1) — Validity - Constitution of India, Art. 19 (1) (a), (g) and (2).

A provision like S. 3 (1) of the Indian Press (Emergency Powers) Act cannot be allowed to remain on the Statute Book after the coming into force of the Constitution. It is inconsisent with Art. 19 (1) (a) and (g) of the Constitution. It is not saved by Art. 19 (2), or 19 (6). 1950 SCJ 418; 1950 SCJ 425, Rel. on.

Section 3 (1) itself cannot obviously be an enactment relating to any matter which undermines the security of and tends to overthrow the State within the meaning of Art. 19 (2) of the Constitution.

Section 3 (1) cannot be upheld as a preventive provision because Art. 19 (2) would not justify preventive legislation. There must be matter to which the law could relate. The contingency of matter coming into existence cannot be covered by Art. 19 (2). (1951) 2 Mad LJ 101: 64 Mad LW 666: 1951 Mad WN 593: 1952 Mad WN (Civ) 169 : AIR 1951 Mad 950 (951, 952) (Prs 4, 5, 7) (DB).

●——Ss. 3 (3) and 4 (1) (a) — Validity — Constitution of India, Art. 19 (1) (a) and (2).

Per Govinda Menon and Basheer Ahmed Sayeed JJ., Panchapagesa Sastri J. Contra — Sections 3 (3) and 4 (1) (a), Press (Emergency Powers) Act are not repugnant or inconsistent with the Constitution, but are saved by the reservations contained in Art. 19 (2) of the Constitution, assuming at the same time that, by reason of the exercise of the powers vested in the State Government under S. 3 (3), the right of "freedom of speech and expression" guaranteed by Art. 19 (1) (a) is sought to be curtailed or abridged.

Even the incitement or encouragement to a single case of murder, or a single cognizable offence involving violence, might have a tendency to overthrow the States; as for example, if the incitement or encouragement is to commit a cognizable offence or to murder a very high functionary of the State whose disappearance itself might tend to or undermine the security of the State, it cannot be held that such incitement cannot come within Cl. (2) of Art. 19. It is very difficult to postulate with any definiteness that the classes of offences mentioned in S. 4 (1) (a) will not undermine the security of the State or may not tend to overthrow it.

Per Panchapagesa Sastri J. — Section 4 (1) (a) of the Act is in conflict with Art. 19 (1) (a) of the Constitution and is not saved by Art. 19 (2). It is therefore, void under Art. 13.

Even if the newspaper, book, or document, contains words which incite, or encourage or tend to incite or encourage the commission of an offence of murder, or of any cognizable offence involving violence, and even if such incitement and encouragement might undermine the security of the State or tend to overthrow the same, still S. 4 (1) (a) would be ultra vires because as the section now stands incitements which do not undermine the security of the State or tend to overthrow the same come within its ambit and since it is impossible to separate the two different categories of the incitements the entire section should be held to be invalid and ultra vires. Srinivasa Bhat v. State of Madras, 64 Mad LW 82: (1951) 1 Mad LJ 115: AIR 1951 Mad 70 (73, 78, 83, 91) (Pt C) (Prs 6, 17, 27, 46) (DB).

● ——Ss. 3 (3), 4 and 23 —Notice under — Contents of — Non-attachment and non-specification of offending matter — Effect on validity of notice.

Though it is desirable that notice under Section 3 (3) of the Press (Emergency Powers) Act, 1931, should have attached to it a copy of the offending matter (leaflet or pamphlet) or specify the 'words, signs or visible representations' contained in the offending document which in the opinion of the State Government constituted an incitement to or encouraged or tended to incite or encourage the commission of any offence of murder, etc., as contemplated by S. 4 (1) (a) yet the omission to so attach the leaflet or pamphlet to the notice or to specify the 'words, signs or visible representations in the notice, does not affect the validity of the notice itself. It is only an irregularity. Shaila Bala Devi v. Chief Secretary to the Government of Bihar, ILR 30 Pat 31: 52 Cri LJ 309: AIR 1951 Pat 12 (15) (Pt B) (Pr 7) (SB).

● ——S. 4 (1) — Construction of document — Writing has to be considered as a whole — (Document — Construction of).

In order to determine whether a particular document falls within the ambit of any of the clauses of S. 4 (1), the writing has to be considered as a whole and in a fair and free and liberal spirit, not dwelling too much upon isolated passages or upon a strong word here and there, and an endeavour should be made to gather the general effect which the whole composition would have on the mind of public. AIR 1941 Pat 132 (SB), Distinguished.

Per Mukherjea, J.:— Account should also be taken of the place, circumstances and occasion of the publication, as a clear appreciation of the background in which the words are used is of very great assistance in enabling the Court to view them in their proper perspective. ● ——S. 4 (1), — Article how should be read.

In considering whether the matter complained of offended against S. 4 the Court should in every case consider the writing as a whole and in a fair, free and liberal spirit, not dwelling too much upon isolated passages or upon a strong word here and there, which may be qualified by the context but endeavouring to gather the general effect which the whole composition would have on the minds of the public.

Per Banerjee, J.:— It is impossible to lay down any hard and fast rule as to how an article should be read, but there is no doubt that it must be read by the Court carefully, liberally and not with a view to find fault with it. The Court must read the article as a whole, giving due weight to every part. The Court must make due allowance for all kinds of ornamental phrases or fine words or figure of speech which sometimes are permitted and which nobody seriously takes into consideration. And after making all due allowances, the Court must find out the true sense of the article. The first thing the Court has to do is not to take the words in vacuo, so to speak, and attribute to them what is called their natural or ordinary meaning. The method of construing the words is to read them as a whole and ask oneself the question: "In this context, relating to this subject-matter, what is the true meaning of the words?" If reading the article in that way, the Court thinks that it was intended to be a criticism of the policy or the administration of the Government, with a view to obtain its change or reform, the article is safe. But if, on the other hand, the Court comes to the conclusion that the article was really meant to be an attack on the Government beyond the permitted limits of criticism, the article comes within the mischief of the Act, and then no argument can be heard on the basis that the Act does not exist or what the Act should have been. A comparative study of S. 5, Travancore Newspapers Act and S. 117, Travancore Penal Code, shows that the case contemplated is the same under the two provisions except that while Section 117 punishes words which excite disaffection or bring into hatred or contempt the Government, the Newspapers Act is wider in scope as it hits not only cases contemplated by the Penal Code but also other cases which are "likely" or may have a "tendency" directly or indirectly to excite disaffection, etc. A. ● ——S. 4 (1) (a) — Restrictions imposed by S. 4 (1) (a) are within ambit of Constitution of India, Art. 19 (2).

Clause (a) of S. 4 (1) deals with words or signs or visible representations which incite to or encourage, or tend to incite to or encourage the commission of any offence of murder or any cognizable offence involving violence. Speeches or expressions on the part of an individual which incite to or encourage the commission of violent crimes, such as murder, cannot but be matters which would undermine the security of the State and come within the ambit of a law sanctioned by Art. 19 (2) of the Constitution. Hence, Section 4 (1) (a) is not repugnant to the Constitution. AIR 1950 SC 124, Expl. AIR 1950 SC 129; AIR 1951 Pat 12 (SB) Reversed. State of Bihar v. ● ——S. 4 (1) (a) — "Sangram" — Applicability of S. 4 (1) (a) to printer of.

A leaflet, entitled "Sangram" or struggle, was written in high flown Bengali prose with a large mixture of poetic expressions borrowed at random from the writings of some well-known poets of Bengal. The object of the writing as far as could be gathered from the leaflet was to give a poetic or idealistic picture of what is meant and connotated by 'struggle' or revolution. The aim and end of 'struggle', as stated in the leaflet, was to wipe out "oppression, injustice or wrong" which is "pervading all over the world from the past to the future", and it was only after all wrongs, injustice and oppression have perished that a new world would be built up.

Held, that in the absence of any evidence whatsoever for connecting the leaflet with any agitation or movement at the time it was written in the locality and in the face of the State Government to prove the attendant circumstances and the actual background of the publication it could not be held that leaflet fell within the mischief of S. 4 (1) (a) and that no security order could be passed against the keeper of the press under that section. ● ——S. 4 (1) (a) and (d) — Applicability.

A pamphlet entitled 'Sangram' written in Bengali contained a clear invocation to the readers to join a total and deadly struggle to bring about a revolution by violence resulting in complete annihilation of those whom the writer considered as 'oppressors' or who were directors of wrong and injustice or who took part in parochial national politics or who brought into disgrace the mother tongue. There were no words in the pamphlet which could be said to refer to the State Government. The persons against whom the attack was made were not clearly defined and could not be said to be 'a definite or ascertained class".

Held, on a consideration of the entire pamphlet that it fell within the mischief of S. 4 (1) (a) and not S. 4 (1) (d). In re Bharati Press, 52 Cri LJ 309: ILR 30 Pat 31: AIR 1951 Pat 12 (15, 17, 26) (Pt C) (Prs 7, 8, 24) (SB).

● ——S. 4 (1) (a) and (b) — Validity of Constitution of India, Arts. 13 and 19.

(Per Sarjoo Prasad and Ramaswami JJ.; Shearer J., dissenting). Clauses (a) and (b) of S. 4 of the Press Act are worded in general terms and apply both to aggravated forms of offences like political assassinations as also to ordinary murders or cognizable offences involving violence. They are not directed mainly and solely towards crimes of violence and political assassinations which undermine the security of, or tend to overthrow the State. They are inconsistent with the fundamental right given under Art. 19 (1) (a) of the Constitution and as such void by virtue of Art. 13 (1) and are not saved as permissible legislation under Art. 19 (2) of the Constitution as the language of these clauses is not severable. AIR 1950 SC 124 and AIR 1950 SC 129, Rel. on.

The provisions of S. 4 (1) (a) and (b) cannot be justified under Art. 19 (2) of the Constitution on the ground that they relate to matters which offend 'against decency and morality' as these expressions have been given narrower connotation in the Penal Code and may be deemed to have been used in the same sense in Art. 19 (2) of the Constitution as well.

(Note:— In so far as this case holds that Cl. (a) of S. 4 (1), Press (Emergency Powers) Act 1931 is inconsistent with Art. 19 (1) (a) of the Constitution and also is not justified under Art. 19 (2), it has been reversed in AIR 1952 SC 329-Ed).

Consequently an order demanding security under S. 3 (3) of the Press Act for violation of S. 4 (1) (a) of that Act is void and must be quashed.

Per Shearer J.:— The provisions of S. 4 (1) (a) and (b) which enable security to be demanded from the keeper of a printing press, are not inconsistent with the fundamental right of freedom of speech and expression conferred by Art. 19 (1) (a) of the Constitution. The taking of security is not something alien and repugnant to the concept of the freedom of the press. The word 'expression' in Art. 19 (1) (a) does not give an implied right to the writers and authors to obtain the services of printers to enable them to reach the widest possible public. Even if it be assumed that these clauses impose a restriction on the fundamental right possessed by the printer they are part of the law relating to seditious libel and therefore, are saved by Art. 19 (2) of the Constitution, In re, Bharati Press, 52 Cri LJ 309: ILR 30 Pat 31: AIR 1951 Pat 12 (19, 20, 21, 23, 24, 28, 29) (Pt D) (Prs 11, 12, 17 to 19, 30, 32, 35) (SB).

3. Sub-section (1), Cl. (d).

● ——S. 4 (1) (d) — Government established by law — Government of majority party — Section, if has application to present Government.

Since Independence, conditions have changed and the form of Government at the Centre and in all the Provinces is now the democratic form of Government. The party commanding the majority in the Legislature is the party in power and forms the ministry A Government is a Government of the majority party, but that does not make it any the less a Government by law established in British India. Whilst that party maintains a majority it remains in power and whilst it is in power it is the lawful Government of the Centre or of the Provinces. Though the Government is a Government by members of the majority party, the Government as such has its existence quite apart from the party. A criticism of the Government in power in any Province is a criticism of the Government by law established in that Province, though incidentally it may be a criticism of the policy of the majority party. The fact that the form of Government at the Centre and in the Provinces has changed does not make the Press Act inapplicable. That being so it cannot be contended that S. 4 of the Press Act can have no application to Government as constituted in the present day. In the Matter of "Saptaha", 54 Cal WN 334: ILR (1951) 1 Cal 1: AIR 1950 Cal 444 (447) (Pt A) (Prs 12, 13) (SB).

● ——S. 4 (1) (d) and Explanation 2 — Criticism of measures with view to obtain their alteration — Such criticism, if can come within mischief of section — Section criticised in light of changed conditions.

Though the object of the critic may be merely to obtain the alteration of the measures criticised by lawful means, nevertheless, the matter may come within the mischief of the section if the criticism excites or attempts to excite hatred, contempt or disaffection towards the Government. It was a matter of considerable difficulty to apply this section to criticism of measures of Government before India obtained Independence. But since Independence and the adoption of a democratic form of Government it is practically impossible to place a construction on S. 4 of the Press Act which will not stifle a good deal of legitimate criticism of Government. The right to criticise is inherent in a democracy. The opposition are entitled, and indeed it is their duty in proper cases, to expose the misdeeds or acts or omission of the Government in power and this they are entitled to do with a view to winning over the electorate so that the Government in power will be thrown out and the opposition placed in power after securing a majority in an election. However, if the words in S. 4 of the Press Act are strictly applied then newspapers supporting the opposition to the Government in power are muzzeld and can indulge in nothing but very mild criticism. Further, opposition newspapers might find it difficult to publish facts concerning the Government which wre true because the publication of such facts might well tend to bring the Government into hatred or contempt or to excite disaffection against such Government. In the Matter of "Saptaha", 54 Cal WN 334: ILR (1951) 1 Cal 1: AIR 1950 Cal 444 (448) (Pt C) (Prs 20, 21) (SB).

● ——S. 4 (1) (d) — Truth of what is stated in article and purpose of writing, if material.

It is quite immaterial whether what is stated in an article is true or not provided that the tendency of the article is to excite hatred and contempt of Government or disaffection towards Government. Further, the purpose of writing the article is also immaterial. In the Matter of "Saptaha", 54 Cal WN 334: ILR (1951) 1 Cal 1: AIR 1950 Cal 444 (449) (Pt D) (Prs 25, 26) (SB).

● ——S. 4 (1) (d) — Writer charging Provincial Governments with wicked, callous and inhuman conduct — Article held came within section.

A writer charged the Provincial Governments with conduct which could only be described as wicked, callous and inhuman. According to the writer they deliberately allowed detained political prisoners, who were ill, to remain without treatment and thus hastened their death and deliberately withheld medical treatment from such political prisoners if they were injured by any aggressive action on the part of the prison or police authorities. They were also charged with causing hardship and even starvation to the relatives of such prisoners:

Held, that though the article was intended as a criticism of the Provincial Government it did exceed the bounds of fair and legitimate criticism and did tend to excite hatred and contempt and disaffection towards Government. The article, therefore, fell within the provisions of S. 4 (1) (d). In the Matter of "Saptaha", 54 Cal WN 334: ILR (1951) 1 Cal 1: AIR 1950 Cal 444 (450, 451) (Pt E) (Prs 32, 33, 34) (SB).

● ——S. 4 (1) (d) — Police sentiment and surrounding circumstances, if can be considered.

Per Banerjee J.:— In applying the Act to any article appearing in a newspaper, the Court will take into consideration the public sentiment and the surrounding circumstances to find out whether the words used in the article tend, directly or indirectly, to bring into hatred or contempt the Government established by law in the land or to excite disaffection towards it. In the matter of "Saptaha", 54 Cal WN 334: ILR (1951) 1 Cal 1: AIR 1950 Cal 444 (455) (Pt H) (Pr 63) (SB).

● ——S. 4 (1) (d) — 'Disaffection" — Term explained.

Per Banerjee J.:— The word "disaffection" signifies political alienation or discontent, that is to say, a feeling of disloyalty to the existing Government, which tends to a disposition not to obey, but to resist and subvert the Government. In the Matter of "Saptaha", 54 Cal WN 334: ILR (1951) 1 Cal 1: AIR 1950 Cal 444 (457) (Pt I) (Pr 82) (SB).

● ——S. 4 (1) (b), (d) and (h) — Provisions must be liberally interpreted in favour of subject — Incitement to violence or disorder is not essential for offence of sedition — Reasonable criticism of Government not leading to hatred, contempt or disaffection, is permissible — Penal Code (1860), S. 124-A.

The similarity of the phraseology employed in Section 124-A, Penal Code, Rule 34 (6) (e), Defence of India Rules, and Cl. (d) of S. 4 (1), Press (Emergency Powers) Act, shows that the offence of sedition described in the Penal Code has for its ingredients the same elements which constitute a prejudicial act within the meaning of Rule 34 (6), Defence of India Rules, and these ingredients are also common to the mischief envisaged by Cl. (d) of Section 4 (1), Press Act. In other words, if the utterance of a person is seditious it may also amount to a prejudicial act and may be taken as tending to bring into hatred or contempt or excite disaffection towards the Government. In England it has been held that in order to constitute sedition the words, etc., must evoke such a degree of hatred or contempt or excite so much disaffection that public disorder or violence may result. The Indian law of sedition, however, is not so liberal and it has been held that incitement to violence or disorder is not an essential ingredient of the offence of sedition. The provisions of the Press Act must be interpreted liberally and in favour of the subject. The section taken and read as a whole is not to be regarded as intended to minister to the mere vanity or susceptibilities of the Government or its officers but permit reasonable criticisms, comments and ventilation of grievances although the same may generate or excite some amount of resentment or disapprobation against the Government provided that such resentment or disapprobation does not generate or excite the more intense or deeper passion of hatred, contempt or disaffection. To put the same thing in another way, the hatred, contempt and disaffection made culpable by the section must, in its intensity and depth, be more than a mere feeling of resentment or disapprobation which is generated by legitimate comments, criticisms or ventilation of genuine grievances. The explanations to S. 4 clearly contemplate and indicate that one may strongly criticise without being hateful, may severely comment without being contemptuous or may openly disapprove without being disaffectionate.

● ——S. 4 (1) (d) — "To bring into hatred or contempt the Government established by law".

The words "to bring into hatred or contempt the Government established by "law" connote something more than mere criticism of the various branches of administration with a view to improve them and not with a view to overthrow the Government itself. The hatred or contempt preached must be of such a nature as to excite a feeling tending towards overthrow of the existing system of Government. Where in booklet no hatred or contempt has been preached against the Government itself and the booklet read as a whole leaves only one impression namely, the lapses of the followers of Mahatma Gandhi since they actually came into power and it depicts how they have neglected the great ideal of selfless service and how they have indulged in self-seeking and self-profiteering the book does not bring itself within the mischief of S. 4 (1) (d). ● ——S. 4 (1) (d)—"To bring into hatred or contempt the administration of justice."

The phrase "to bring into hatred or contempt the administration of justice" connotes something as one preached during the time of the non-co-operation movement when the followers of the movement openly used to preach disregard of the Court of law. This and similar actions might be called acts which bring into hatred or contempt the administration of justice. But the suggestion that the appointment of Judges should be taken out of the hands of the executive authority and be placed in the hands of judicial authority is not such a statement as to bring it within the purview of S. 4 (1) (d). So also where a booklet deals more with the interference by members of the Congress party in judicial matters rather than the failing of the Judges and refers to some Judge, having been influenced, does not amount to bringing into hatred or contempt the administration of justice in the Dominion of India: AIR 1918 Cal 988 (SB) and AIR 1932 Cal 547; AIR 1918 Mad 1210 (SB) and AIR 1942 Lah 105 (FB), Distd. ● ——S. 4 (1) (d) — (Criticism of individual).

(Per Sarjoo Prasad J.):— The fact that a booklet purports to be a bitter satire and at places it even degenerates into scurrilous and personal attacks on individuals by itself does not amount to bringing into hatred or contempt Government established by law in the State or the administration of justice therein. A mere criticism of man and measures or of the persons running the administration, however, bitter that criticism may be and even if the criticism is misguided, does not necessarily amount to bringing into contempt the Government of the State or the administration of justice. ——S. 4 (1) (d), (f) — Validity — Constitution of India, Art. 19 (1) (a) (2).

Clause (1) (d) of S. 4 is inconsistent with the fundamental right of freedom of speech and expression guaranteed by Art. 19 (1) (a) of the Constitution and does not come within the purview of the saving legislation contemplated by Cl. (2) of Art. 19. Every news sheet which brings into hatred and contempt Government does not necessarily undermine the security of the State or tend to overthrow it and as the clause is capable of including within its ambit many news sheets which may bring into hatred and contempt the Government but at the same time not undermine the security of the State or tend to overthrow it, the clause cannot be held to come within the limits of the permissible legislation under Cl. (2) of Art. 19. The same argument applies with greater force so far as the validity of sub-clause (f) of S. 4 (1) is concerned. Every Act of interference with the administration of law and the maintenance of law and order does not necessarily undermine the security of the State or tend to overthrow it. Clauses (d) and (f) of S. 4 (1) have ceased to be operative in view of the present Constitution: AIR 1950 SC 124; AIR 1950 SC 129, Foll.; AIR 1951 Mad 70 and AIR 1951 Pat 12, Rel. on. 1952 Cri LJ 506: AIR 1952 Sau 25 (28) (Pt A) (Pr 6) (DB).

To constitute sedition or, more properly, to bring a newspaper publication within the mischief of the section it is enough if it is proved that the publication tends to or is likely to create feelings of disaffection, hatred or contempt towards Government and not necessarily to incite people to rebellion. But on the point as to what would constitute disaffection towards a Government or hatred or contempt of a Government there is considerable scope for speculation especially where forms of Government are changing and the freedom of the press and the platform are in a state of flux. The Court's only function is to apply the law as it is and not to embark on any discussion as to how it can be improved upon or modified in anticipation of any change — political, constitutional or legal. The question whether Ministers form the Government depends in each case upon the provisions of the relevant statute under which the Ministries are constituted and not upon any innate defect in the legal constitution of Ministries in general.

A Government in connection with the offence of sedition denotes the person or persons authorised by law to administer executive Government in the State. In the constitution of Government under the Travancore Interim Constitution Act the Ministers form such an integral part of it that one cannot be divorced from the other. Therefore, the Council of Ministers represent the Government under the Interim Constitution Act and an attack on the Ministry is an attack on Government for purposes of sedition under the Newspapers Act and S. 117, Travancore Penal Code. ●——S. 4 (1) (f) — Newspaper article advocating revolution.

Where an article in a newspaper states that the working class and the toiling masses can get hold of power through the path of revolution, the revolution preached is not necessarily a violent revolution. It is open to a writer to suggest that the ordinary revolutionary method is either too slow or not adequate to achieve a particular purpose and that purpose can only be achieved by a revolution. But by advocating revolution, it does not necessarily follow that he is advocating a type of revolution which would come within the mischief of S. 4 (1) (f). 52 Bom LR 275: 51 Cri LJ 829: 1950 Bom Cri Cas 164: AIR 1950 Bom 210 (212) (Pt B) (Pr 7) (SB).

5. Sub-section (1), Cl. (h)

●——S. 4 (1) (h) — Non-Bengalis, whether a 'class'.

In order that persons should form a class there must be a number of common attributes which bind them together to form a kind of unit.

Non-Bengalis can only be said to have one common attribute and that of a negative character, namely, that they are not Bengalis. They are an indeterminate body having no common characteristics of race, religion or language and cannot be described as a 'class' within the meaning of S. 4 (1) (h), Press (Emergency Powers) Act. In the matter of Paschim Banga Patrika. ILR (1951) 1 Cal 235 (SB).

●——S. 4 (1) (h) and Expln. (4) — Article containing attack on Brahmanism — If offensive.

In deciding whether a newspaper did or did not contain any words of the nature described in S. 4 (1) (h), the Court should consider the writing as a whole in a fair, free and liberal spirit, without attaching undue weight to isolated passages, sentences or phrases. The Court should gather the general effect which the whole composition is likely to produce upon persons who may be normally expected to read the newspaper in question. Flamboyant and exaggerated language and violence of expression ought to be certainly taken into account, but they can never be conclusive in determining whether the writing as a whole falls within the ambit of the enactment.

The Court is not concerned with the tenability of the opinions expressed by the writer of the of fending article. In all controversial matters, there is bound to be two opposing opinions and it is not the province of the Court to examine the soundness or otherwise of the reasons which the writer may give in support of a particular view. The only question is to find out if there is anything in the article which tends directly or indirectly to promote feelings of enmity and hatred between different classes.

When a writer sets out to ventilate the grievances of a class or community there is ex necessitiae a likelihood of criticising adversely the action of the class or community which is alleged to have an unfair advantage, In all such cases it would be wrong to say that writing which ventilates the grievances of a particular class or community would fall within the mischief of the enactment.

Enmity and hatred are strong words. In a world of conflicting claims, it would be manifestly unfair to characterise every expression of dissatisfaction and every ventilation of grievances as tending to the promotion of enmity and hatred. To point out facts and circumstances to serve as an incentive to unity among the members of one class is not to create hatred or enmity between classes.

As the security provisions of the Press Act are in a sence penal, the benefit of the doubt, if there is any, should always be given to the person against whom action is taken.

One of the articles in question contained an attack on a group composed of Brahmins within the Congress Party, for their alleged unreasonable opposition to the election of a non-Brahmin candidate as the leader of the Congress Legislative Party.

The other article, which was a dissertation on communalism, contained an attack on the system of Brahminism, which according to the writer, had led to the superior position in society of the Brahmins. Nowhere in the article did the writer say that the Brahmins of the present day had actually done anything. His complaint was that the system had in the last several thousand years spread and struck root. The writer stated that he had no hatred against the Brahmins as individuals but pleaded that it was the system which should be destroyed. There was no incitement anywhere of he non-Brahmins to act in any inimical way or to inspire them with hatred against the Brahmins. According to the writer, the only way of destroying the system was for the majority community to cast off their inferiority complex and to cultivate unity, discipline and self-respect:

Held, that first article contained no attack on the entire community of the Brahmins, and could not be described as tending directly or indirectly to promote enmity and hatred between Brahmins and non-Brahmins in general. The second article contained no imputation upon the Brahmins. There was no language to excite or contempt of persons. Explanation 4 covered the case in question. The articles, therefore, did not contain words of the nature described in S. 4 (1) (h). ●——S. 4 (1) (h) — If ultra vires — Constitution of India, Arts. 13, 19.

(Per Khosla and Harnam Singh JJ; Kapur J. Dissenting): Section 4 (1) (h) of the Press Act is a law restricting freedom of speech and expression guaranteed by Article 19 (1) (a) of the Constitution. Since Section 4 (1) (h) makes no reference to undermining the security of the State or tending to overthrow it and covers publications which do not undermine the security of the State or tend to overthrow it, it cannot be said that it is directed solely for that purpose. The possibility of its being applied for purposes not sanctioned by the Constitution not being ruled out, it falls outside the scope of authorised restrictions under Article 19 (2) and therefore is ultra vires and void under Article 13 (1). AIR 1950 SC 124, Rel .on.

Per Kapur J. — The test for determining the validity of an Act is not the possibility of the abuse of the power given by law but the present application of it.

Section 4 (1) (h) does not cover cases of mere academic discussion. Inciting hatred or enmity between the different classes of citizens of India is not mere propagation of abstract doctrine but is a deffnite act which must undermine the State and as such Section 4 (1) (h) falls within the authorised restrictions under Article 19 (2) and is not hit by the Constitution. The requirements of Section 5, Travancore Newspapers Act, would be satisfied by indicating or describing such words whicb in the opinion of Government contravene one or all the several provisions of this section. It is not incumbent on Government when they issue a notice to indicate with precision the respective articles which fall within the mischief of the respective provisions of the section and a statement that all the publications contravene all the several clauses of the section is not insufficient compliance with the statutory requirements of the section. The law recognises a certain amount of liberty in the citizen to criticise Government with reference to its measures but it was at no time considered to be unlimited. One rule which guarantees liberty is to construe the articles in a liberal spirit and not to over-emphasize any word here or there. 8. Power of High Court to issue writ.

●——S. 4 (1) (a) and (d) — If invalid as affecting fundamental rights under Art. 19 (1) of the Constitution — Power and jurisdiction of High Court to issue writs to persons living outside its original jurisdiction — Constitution of India (1950), Arts. 19 (1) and (2) and 226.

Section 4 (1) (d) of the Press (Emergency Powers) Act has to be held ultra vires the fundamental rights conferred under Article 19 (1) of the Constitution. S. 4 (1) (d) cannot be claimed to be consistent with the Constitution, nor could it be said that S. 4 (1) (d) is saved by the reservations relating to permissive legislation contemplated by Article 19 (2) of the Constitution.

Freedom of speech and expression in Art. 19 (1) of the Constitution would include the liberty to propagate not only one's own views but also the right to print matters which are not one's own but have either been borrowed from someone else or are printed under the direction of that person. SECTION 7

——S. 7 (1) — If ultra vires — Constitution of India, Art. 19 (2).

The Press Act deals with dangerous utterances and provision is made for demanding security from publishers who are likely to indulge in such utterances. It is a legislation touching very closely sedition and matters of that kind and Section 7 (1), Press (Emergency Powers) Act requiring security falls within Cl. (2) of Art. 19 of the Constitution and therefore is not ultra vires. 55 Cal WN 139: 52 Cri LJ 458 (1): AIR 1951 Cal 36 (36) (Pr 4) (DB).

Section 7 (1) does not lay down any condition within the ambit of which the District Magistrate may exercise the power to require security to be furnished. This power is consequently an unlimited restriction on the fundamental rights. Section 8 (1) requires the Provincial Government to serve notice of the intention to forfeit the deposit not on the publisher of the paper at the time when the notice is served, but on the person who was the publisher at the time the offending article was written. If this were not so, it would be possible for a publisher to avoid forfeiture of a deposit by ceasing to publish immediately after writing a most scathing, unjust and seditious article. SECTION 15

——Ss. 15, 18 — Scope — If offends Art. 19 of the Constitution — (Constitution of India, Articles 19 (1) (a) and 19 (2) (Before and after amendment)).

Sections 15 and 18 of Act 23 of 1931 provide for the obtaining of a permit by every person who wants to publish any news-sheet and for punishment for making, selling, distributing and keeping for sale, distribution, etc., any unauthorised news-sheet. This is prior restraint or censorship on the publication of news-sheets and amounts to an infringement of the freedom of speech and expression guaranteed under Art. 19 (1) (a). The provisions would, therefore, be valid after the 26th January, 1950, only if they are covered by the saving clause in Art. 19 (2).

The law that is saved by Article 19 (2) is one that relates exclusively, or at least principally, to any of the matters specified therein. The object of the impugned Act is stated to be 'to provide for the better control of the press'. Thus the express object of the Act has nothing to do with the security of the State. Besides, it is only one of the several objects to be achieved by the Act.

Even if it be said that the object behind the impugned provisions was to control matters which may undermine the security of or tend to overthrow, the State, they cannot be said to relate to such matters. The impugned Ss. 15 and 18 are not confined to documents containing only the objectionable matters, but govern all news-sheets regardless of their contents. Merely because they apply to all news-sheets including those containing matters which undermine the security of or tend to overthrow the State, they cannot be said to relate to matters undermining the security, etc., and are not saved by Art. 19 (2). The sections have thus become void on 26-1-1950.

Further the impugned provisions are not even covered by the Amendment in Article 19 (2). It cannot be said that the restrictions imposed by the sections are reasonable, because Section 15 confers absolute discretion to the District Magistrate to grant or refuse permit to anyone and there is absolutely nothing to guide him in his discretion. Another reason is that the section does not require the District Magistrate to give any reason for his order and no judicial review is provided against it. Therefore, the amendment in Article 19 (2) does not help and does not save the Act from becoming void under Article 13. Case-law referred. 1954 All WR (HC) 334: 1954 Cr LJ 1212: AIR 1954 All 562 (568) (Pt B) (Pr 12) (DB).

——S. 15 — Constitution of India, Art. 13 — Invalidity of part of law — Effect — Article 13 (1) does contemplate the judging of the constitutionality of an enactment in parts. If there is inconsistency, the law is void only to the extent of such inconsistency; the other law remains intact. The constitutionality of Ss. 15 and 18 of the Press (Emergency Law) Act, 1931 did not depend upon the constitutionality of the other provisions as the section formed a separate Part of the Act. See Constitution of India, Article 13. AIR 1954 All 562 (DB).

——Ss. 15, 18 — Possession of unauthorised news-sheets on 11-6-50 — Conviction under Section 18 on 23-2-1951 — Validity — (Constitution of India, Arts. 19, 20).

Sections 15 and 18 of the Act became void on 26-1-50 as infringing provisions of Articles 19 (1) (a) and 14 and not being saved by the provisions in Article 19 (2), either before or after the amendment, the accused committed no offence by having in his possession the news-sheets on 11-6-1950. Even if the impugned provisions were valid by virtue of the amendment to Art. 19, the applicant could not be convicted for doing the act before the Article was amended. As there is nothing in the amendment to suggest that Article 20 was not to apply or that a person could be convicted for violating an Act that had actually become void but is now deemed not to have become void. It is a well-known principle that no greater retrospective effect should be given to an Act than is warranted by its language. 1954 All WR (HC) 334: 1954 Cr LJ 1212: AIR 1954 All 562 (567, 570) (Pt F) (Prs 9, 10, 15) (DB).

——Ss. 15, 18 — Validity — (Constitution of India, Art. (14).

It is not necessary that the legislature should have intention to deny the equal protection of the law. Even if this denial results from or arises on the express terms of the statute itself, it is void and if a selection is left to absolute and unfettered discretion of the executive Government with nothing to guide or control its action, it is arbitrary selection. AIR 1952 SC 75; 1952 SCJ 55, Rel. on.

Sections 15 and 18 of the Act contravened Articel 14 of the Constitution as they divided the public into two classes, one of persons who could publish news-sheets without being liable to be punished and the other or others who could not publish news-sheets without such liability. Section 15 itself brought into existence those two classes by directing District Magistrates to permit some persons to publish news-sheets. There was nothing to guide the District Magistrates in putting persons in one class or the other. The consequence was that some persons became liable to be punished for doing an act for which others were not liable. There was thus a denial of the equal protection of laws brought into existence by these provisions and hence they are void under Article 14. ——Ss. 18 and 15 — Validity — Sections 15 and 18 of the Act contravened Article 14 of the Constitution as they divided the public into two classes. The consequence was that some persons became liable to be punished for doing an act for which others were not liable. There was thus a denial of the equal protection of laws brought into existance by these provisions and hence they are void under Article 14 — Constitution of India, Article 14. See Press (Emergency Powers) Act (23 of 1931), S. 15. AIR 1954 All 562 (DB).

——S. 18 — Contents of pamphlet in the form of novel items of information to be regarded as such by the ordinary readers — Pamphlet is a news-sheet within S. 2 (6) — Publication of such pamphlet without the previous sanction required by Section 15 would constitute an offence under Section 18 (1) of the Act. See Press (Emergency Powers) Act (1931), S. 2 (6). 1950-51 Cri LJ 1230: AIR 1953 Bom 246 (DB).

——Ss. 18 and 4 (1) (d) — Prosecution for publication and distribution of unauthorised pamphlet — Prosecution has to prove that pamphlet is news sheet containing matter covered by S. 4 (1) (d) — Scope of S. 4 (1) (d) — Intention to cause hatred and contempt not necessary — Actual effect of words enough.

In a prosecution under S. 18 for publication and distribution of an unauthorised pamphlet, the prosecution need only prove that a document other than a newspaper has been intentionally made and published and that it contains either published news or comments on published news or any matter described in sub-section (1) of S. 4, without obtaining the necessary permission of the Magistrate under Section 15. The main point which falls to be determined is whether the matters contained in the pamphlet will fall within the purview of Section 4 (1) (d) and whether the pamphlet will constitute an unauthorised 'news-sheet'. And while determining this fact it is to be noted that sub-section (1) (d) of S. 4 does not mention anything about the intention or motive in publishing such words, etc., but simply says that the document in question should contain words, signs or visible representations which tend directly or indirectly to bring into hatred or contempt the Government established by law. Thus, it is the effect of the contents of the document, the objective aspect, that is covered by S. 4 (1) (d), and not the intention or motive or the subjective aspect or the mens rea in uttering or publishing those words.

(Decisions as to what constitutes "sedition" held not applicable on this point).

In this case, the accused was prosecuted in respect of a certain pamphlet in which he attacked the Congress Governments in the country. He contended that his object was not to bring the Government into hatred and contempt but to bring about a reform of the Congress organization by making Congressmen think deeply over the principles and policies of Mahatma Gandhi. It was held that the motive or intention of the accused was immaterial.

Politicians exceeding the limits laid down by the law take the risk of being convicted for offences under the law, as they have been all through the ages. Nor can they ask Courts dealing with a particular pamphlet under S. 18 to read all their prior pamphlets to see the purity of their motives and their burning desire to reform the Government of the land. 62 Mad LW 588: (1949) 2 Mad LJ 300: 51 Cri LJ 241: 1949 Mad WN 834: AIR 1950 Mad 27 (28, 29) (Prs 4, 7).

Explanation I appended to S. 3 makes it clear that criticism of any policy or administrative notice of the Government, if done with a view to obtain an alteration of the policy or a redress by lawful means, does not amount to an 'objec tionable matter' within the meaning of S. 3. Where the main purpose of the writer of an article in a newspaper was to disapprove the conduct of the Government and of the police authorities in acting in an alleged high-handed manner and there was nothing in the words to suggest an incitement or encouragement to violence or promotion of feelings of enmity, the article cannot be held to be an "objectionable matter' within the meaning of S. 3. 1958 Cri LJ 7: AIR 1958 All 29 (20) (Pt A) (Pr 1).

●——S. 3 — Explanations — Principle of — Advocacy of revolution for removal of administrative ills — Article has to be read as whole.

The underlying principle of the Explanations is that the document has to be freely and fairly construed and mere criticism of a particular system or policy or administrative measure, even if couched in harsh, exaggerated or indiscreet language, should not be held to be objectionable unless it definitely incites or is likely to lead to violence. To see if the document is offensive, as such, one has to read the document as a whole. The Courts, in a case of this kind, have to put themselves, as far as possible, in the place of a jury and to take a broad view without refining overmuch any particular words or phrases used in the document. The Court should in every such case consider the book or newspaper article as a whole and in a fair, free and liberal spirit, not dwelling too much upon isolated passages or upon a strong word here and there which may be qualified by the context, but endeavouring to gather the general effect which the whole composition is likely to produce on the mind of the reader.

There is nothing in law to prevent a particular party in placing its philosophy and programme before the public, so long as it does not directly or indirectly incite violence or subversion of the Government established by law. A party may even criticise the machinery of the State, may suggest that the old State machine is bound by thousands of threads to the bourgeois and permeated through and through with routine and inertia and, therefore, that machine has to be destroyed and replaced by a new one. This need not necessarily lead to the inference that the author advocates violent revolution.

The word 'revolution' itself need not be a bugbear in the present age and conjure up all those hideous images of blood and carnage in the mind with which it was wont to be associated earlier. With the advance of political knowledge and consciousness, revolution may mean nothing than a rapid and radical change of ideas and ideals necessistating reorientation of the society, polity and the State machinery on the lines of those changes. All this may come about without resort to violence.

Held, on consideration of the book as a whole that it did not fall within definition of 'objectionable matter' under S. 3 (1), that the booklet was mere thesis on the virtues of socialism. It sought to analyse the various evils of society, attributed all those evils to capitalistic exploitation and suggested that the only panacea was socialism. It, therefore, placed for the introduction of socialism with the utmost speed and expedition and thus advocated an all-round revolution in the country. There was nothing either directly or indirectly to indicate that this revolution must be brought about by violent means. Many of the criticisms which were levelled against the prevailing conditions of society and politics at the time when the booklet first came into being had been out-dated and that it was impossible to find fault with the discussions in the book on the ground that they did or were likely to incite or encourage violence and that much of the criticism of administration was saved by the explanation to the section. ——S. 3 — Scope — Matter to be considered.

In ascertaining the scope of S. 3, two considerations arise. The first is the freedom of the press and the other is the limits within which the freedom of the press may be allowed to be enjoyed. ——S. 3 (v) — Scope — Principles.

In considering the question whether a given article comes under S. 3 (v) in the first place, one has to read the writing quietly and attentively. The writing is to be read as a whole and not merely isolated passages here and there. It is not right to pick up a strong expression here and a strong expression there. The general tenor and the drift of the writing is to be considered. The Court, is not concerned with the correctness or otherwise of the views expressed by the writer. ——S. 3 (v) and Expln. I — Applicability.

To say that the Muslims as community are inheritors to the tradeition (Alamgiri traditions) of imprisoning fathers, assassinating brothers and having immoral intentions towards sister-in-law and of betrayals, rapes and lust; to say that it would have been an anti-human motherhood, in that the wife would have nursed and reared the Alamgiri traditions of rapes and betrayals of women with her blood and flesh; and to say that for a Hindu women to marry a Muslim was a betrayal of womanhood, a betrayal of nation, a betrayal of one's self and a betrayal of humanity are all statements per se inflamatory of communal hatred. To accuse the Muslims as a community that they detain women in purdah, regard them merely as a thing of enjoyment and to characterise the marriage of a Hindu with a Muslim as being a marriage which raises a question of communal strife and represents as conflict between truth and falsehood, good and bad, God and Devil, sin and merit, are statements calculated to arouse the passions of the Muslims generally and exasperate the Muslim community. Statements such as those saying that the ways of the Muslim harem are infernal, that Pakistan is Papastan (the literal meaning being 'the abode of sin'), that the wife had got the dreadful experience of Islam and would have become the mother of unborn generations of 'inconclasts' (idol-breakers), that the Muslims are a fanatic nation of Papastanm, that the flame of Islam was intolerent and that the burning water of Islam had been sprinkled upon the Hindu body of the wife cannot lead to any other result, but communal tension, hatred and bitterness.

Held, that the article fell clearly within the mischief of S. 3, Cl. (v); the article would not be protected by Expln. I to S. 3. 1956 Cri LJ 704: ILR (1956) Bom 305: 58 Bom LR 75: AIR 1956 Bom 357 (362, 364) (Pt C) (Prs 15, 23) (DB).

——S. 3 (vi) — Obscene — Test.

The test of obscenity is this, whether the tendency of the matter charged as obscene is to deprave and corrupt those, whose minds are open to such immoral influences, and into whose hands a publication charged as obscene may fall. (1868) 3 QB 360, Foll. In considering whether a publication is obscene, the class of persons who are likely to read such a publication must also be taken into consideration. In applying the test, one has also to consider the effect which the book would produce on an ordinary average person, and not on a person with depraved mentality. A publication cannot be said to be obscene merely because it deals frankly with sex matters, provided of course, that the language used is not such as to excite sensual feelings or give rise to thoughts of lust. ILR (1955) Bom 932: 1956 Cri LJ 206: 57 Bom LR 952: AIR 1956 Bom 32 (32, 33) (Prs 2, 3) (DB).

——S. 3 (5) — Validity — Competency of Parliament to enact S. 3 (5) — (Constitution of India, Art. 246, Sch. VII, List III, Entry 39).

Where the question is of the trespass of one Legislature upon the powers of another, the proper approach is to consider the pith and substance of the legislation. The pith and substance of the Press (Objectionable Matter) Act is not public order, but is "newspapers, books and printing presses." The subject of "newspapers, books and printing presses" falls in the Concurrent List under Entry 39. All these entries in the different Lists must be liberally construed and the Legislature must be deemed to have the power and the competence not only to legislate with regard to these topics but with regard to all matters which are subsidiary or ancillary to these topics. In declaring a particular matter appearing in a newspaper or a book as objectionable matter the Legislature was not dealing with "public order" but was dealing with 'newspapers and books" and incidentally with questions of "public order". If a Legislature is legislating on a topic with regard to which it has competence, a mere incidental trespass upon the field of another Legislature will not constitute a trespass which will make the law passed by the former Legislature unconstitutional and even assuming that there is some trespass by Parliament upon the field of the State Legislature, that trespass is a very minor trespass, a very incidental trespass and does not constitute a real encroachment upon the field reserved for the State Legislature. The Parliament was, therefore, competent to legislate with regard to S. 3 (5). 56 Bom LR 709: 1954 Cr LJ 1549: ILR (1954) Bom 1245: AIR 1954 Bom 508 (510, 511) (Pt B) (Prs 9, 10) (DB).

——S. 3 (6) — Objectionable matter — Interpretation of.

The three 'or's used in Cl. (6) of S. 3 make it quite clear that four distinct kinds of objectionable matters are included in this clause. It may very well he that some scurrilous words may be used wth the intention of blackmailing the persons abused. In that case, the words will be "objectionable matters" within the Act as 'scurrilous' and also as 'intended for blackmail', but that is no reason for thinking that the Legislature intended that any scurrilous words which are intended for blackmail are objectionable matters and not scurrilous words not intended for blackmail. The ordinary grammatical meaning of the words is that, words which are grossly indecent are within the definition; words which are obscene are within the definition; and the words which are intended for blackmail are within the definition of "objectionable matters". 1954 Cri LJ 1427: 58 CWN 497: ILR (1955) 2 Cal 489: AIR 1954 Cal 488 (489) (Pt A) (Pr 6) (DB).

——S. 3 (v) and Expln. 1 — Scope and applicability — Promoting feeling of enmity between different sections of people of India — Sufficiency — Intention — Penal Code, S. 153-A.

In order to determine whether the impugned article comes within the mischief of S. 3 (v), it is not enough to show that it is likely to promote feelings of enmity between different classes of people but the attending circumstances have to be established by the State Government so that the intention of creating enmity or hatred between different sections can be inferred. AIR 1952 SC 329, Discussed. AIR 1954 Ajmer 19, Not foll.

An article headed "the boat of oppression is bound to sink" was published in an Urdu daily newspaper of which the accused was the editor, printer and publisher.

Held, that though the article in question expresses a disapprobation and criticism of what the author considers to be the communalist policy or administrative action of the Government in strong words yet this is done with a view to obtain its alteration or redress by lawful means; hence, even though the words may have a tendency to produce the feelings of enmity or hatred between the different sections, they cannot be deemed to be objectionable matter within the meaning of S. 3 (v). The investive against oppression, the denunciation of evil acts and the praise of Right and truth with condemnation of communalism, and the statement that the Prime Minister disfavours communalism and the Muslim should strengthen his hands to end it, means clearly that redress by lawful means alone is sought. There is no incitement to violence in the whole article. Thus in this way the article comes under the very words of explanation No. 1 of the Act, and is thus not objectionable. ILR (1956) Hyd 228: 1956 Cri LJ 1199: AIR 1956 Hyd 151 (152, 153) (Prs 5 to 7, 10) (DB).

——S. 3 (vi) — Scope — (Interpretation of Statutes).

No doubt certain immediate circumstances might furnish the reason for a particular piece of legislation. But on that ground, it is wrong to construe the actual language used in the enactment in a restricted manner so as to confine it to those special circumstances. It is not permissible to construe a statute so as to confine its operation to incidents and circumstances which the Legislature is supposed to have contemplated that the statute would apply to.

It cannot, therefore, be said that Cl. (vi) of S. 3 does not cover matter which may ordinarily be held to fall within the categories mentioned therein, namely, indecent, obscene etc., but that the clause refers only to one particular type of objectionable matter which concerns, and is directed against, persons in public life, especially holding responsible positions in the Government, because the statement of objects and reasons for the Bill says that this provision was intended to enable the Government to deal with abuse of persons in authority. (1955) 2 Mad LJ 106: 68 Mad LW 426: 1955 Mad WN 469: ILR (1956) Mad 161: AIR 1955 Mad 498 (500) (Pt D) (Pr 7) (DB).

(1868) 3 QB 360, Foll. If a book has got the effect of inciting libidinous or lustful thoughts, the test would be satisfied, though the author or publisher of the book might not have intended this effect. (1955) 2 Mad LJ 106: 68 Mad LW 426: 1955 Mad WN 469: ILR (1956) Mad 161: AIR 1955 Mad 498 (501) (Pt F) (Pr 10) (DB).

It cannot be contended in defence to the action taken under the Act that other publications of a very similar nature are in circulation without any action being taken by the State Government under the Act and that they furnish evidence as to the nature of the book in question namely, that it does not come within the category of S. 3 (vi). 1954 All ER 741, Foll. (1955) 2 Mad LJ 106: 68 Mad LW 426: 1955 Mad WN 469: ILR (1956) Mad 161: AIR 1955 Mad 498 (502) (Pt G) (Pr 15) (DB).

——S. 4 — Sufficient grounds.

Where it was found by the Sessions Judge that the article complained of was objectionable matter and that the respondent had persisted in his course despite warning, the Sessions Judge in taking action against him must have been of opinion that there were sufficient grounds for demanding security and it was not necessary that before demanding security he should have specifically recorded the fact that in his opinion sufficient grounds existed for taking action. 1954 Cr LJ 549: 1954 AMLJ 74: AIR 1954 Ajmer 19 (21) (Pt H) (Pr 13).

——S. 4 — 'is used' — Interpretation of — Date of application or date of order in appeal.

The expression 'is used' must relate to a time proximate to the time at which the application has been preferred. An appeal filed against the order is nothing but a rehearing of the application under S. 4, and there is no reason for holding that the High Court hearing an appeal must satisfy itself that at the time when it passes an order demanding security the printing press is used for printing or publishing objectionable matter. 1956 Cri LJ 864: 58 Bom LR 295: AIR 1956 Bom 447 (448) (Pt B) (Pr 4) (DB).

——S. 7 — Constitution of India, Art. 20 (2) — Applicability and scope— Previous detention and release for writing an article — Complaint under Ss. 3 (v), 4 and 7 read with S. 16 of the Press (Objectionable Matter) Act that the editor should furnish security — Objection that it was punishment for the same offence — Here there was neither prosecution nor punishment for writing the article when he was detained — Therefore, Art. 20 of the Constitution was not contravened. See Constitution of India, Art. 20 (2). AIR 1954 Ajmer 19.

——S. 7 — Evidence — In an enquiry under the Act all that the Court has to see is not what actual effect the article had, but what effect it was 'likely' to have in the circumstances. See Press (Objectionable Matter) Act (1951), S. 4. AIR 1954 Ajmer 19.

——S. 7 — Sufficient grounds — Consideration of.

No idication is given in the Act itself as to what should be considered to be sufficient grounds for ordering deposit of security. That is left entirely for judicial determination. In this position the consideration of the interest of the country at large can be the only thing that can weigh with the Judge to satisfy him that there are reasonable grounds for ordering deposit of security. On the one hand the Judge has to remember that the interest of a democracy such as our demands that the Press should be free to publish news and views as regards happenings at home and abroad; on the other hand he has to remember that the publication of some news and some views may cause great injury to the interests of the country; and it is only when an apprehended injury to the country by the publication is so great as to outweigh in his judgment the benefit to the country's interest by unrestricted freedom to publish news and views, that the Judge can be satisfied that there are sufficient grounds for an order to deposit security.

While the Courts of law are not ordinarily concerned with the rights or wrongs of the foreign policy that has been pursued by India, they should, for finding a correct answer to the above question, bear in mind the realities of the situation in which India finds itself in the international field.

Held, on the facts of the case, that India's own interest demanded that publication of the news such as in this case, should be prevented and there were, therefore, sufficient grounds for demanding deposit from the publisher.

(Considering however the circulation of the paper and the nature of the objectionable matters the amount of security to be deposited was reduced from Rs. 5,000 to Rs. 2,000). 1954 Cr LJ 1427: 58 Cal WN 497: ILR (1955) 2 Cal 489: AIR 1954 Cal 488 (490) (Pt B) (Prs 9, 11, 14, 16) (DB).

——S. 7 — Security — Interference — Sufficiency or otherwise of the grounds for taking action against the publisher of a newspaper under S. 4 and S. 7 is primarily one of discretion for the Sessions Judge and Jury — Sessions Judge placing all the circumstances before the Jury — Jury deciding that security should be demanded — Sessions Judge fixing the amount of security on the recommendations of the Jury — High Court will not interfere with the exercise of the discretion. See Press (Objectionable Matter) Act (1951), S. 23. 1954 Cri LJ 410: AIR 1954 Sau 28 (DB).

——S. 10 — Amount of security.

Section 10 does not lay down any particular amount as the amount of security and this would be natural because the amount of security must depend upon the facts of each case.

The circulation of the newspaper was about 3,000 copies per week.

Held, that the circulation was fair indication of its popularity. It could not be suggested that a circulation of 3,000 copies was in any sense, a wide circulation, and on the whole, the amount of Rs. 1,500 was excessive and the amount of security should be Rs. 750. 1956 Cri LJ 704: ILR (1956) Bom 305: 58 Bom LR 75: AIR 1956 Bom 357 (360) (Pt E) (Pr 12) (DB).

SECTION 11

——Ss. 11 and 24 — Order under S. 11 by Assam Government on certificate by Legal Remembrancer — Validity — Validity of S. 11 — (Constitution of India, Arts. 19 (1) (a) (g) and 19 (2)).

The fact that the law does not provide that before passing the order under S. 11, Government should give any notice to the persons affected thereby to show cause against the action proposed to be taken would not necessarily render Section 11 void as imposing an unreasonable restriction on the fundamental rights of freedom of speech and expression or the pursuit of any lawful avocation, provided the safeguards mentioned in the Act are adequate and reasonable.

The very essence of the power under S. 11 is that it should be exercised promptly and expeditiously. There must be, however, ample and reasonable check upon this power of the executive and so long as there is some ultimate judicial corrective on the exercise of the power, it cannot be held to be unreasonable. It must, therefore, be seen whether there are such safeguards, if any, and whether those safeguards are real and substantial or merely illusory.

The two safeguards provided by the Act itself are that the Governor cannot act under S. 11 unless the Principal Law Officer or the Advocate-General of the State, as the case may be, or the Attorney-General of India cerifies that the offending booklet or pamphlet contains 'objectionable matter' and the other, that under Section 24 of the Act the person aggrieved by the order of Government can move the High Court against that order within sixty days of the date of such order. If these safeguards are real, then it must be held that the restrictions imposed on the fundamental rights of speech and expression by virtue of S. 11 are reasonable restrictions and the provision would be saved under Art. 19 (2) of the Constitution.

So far as Assam is concerned, Advocate General of Assam is the Principal Law Officer of the State. The Legal Remembrancer is not. Moreover, it is only in the States where there is no Advocate-General, e.g., Part C States, that the certificate of the Principal Law Officer is required. But where there is an Advocate-General the certificate must be from him. The words 'as the case may be' which qualify the disjunctive terms, the 'Advocate-General' or the 'Principal Law Officer of the State' clearly show that they have reference only to those States where there is no Advocate-General.

Where, therefore, the Government of Assam issues an order under S. 11, upon a certificate by the Legal Remembrancer of the State, the order of forfeiture is illegal and ultra vires S. 11. The certificate of the Advocate-General is the very foundation of the jurisdiction conferred on the Governor or, for the matter of that, on the Government of the State, to make the order of forfeiture under S. 11 of the Act, and there being no such foundation for the order, it cannot stand.

Obiter:— Ordinarily, under the General-Clauses Act, a notification in the Official Gazette would be, in law, deemed to be sufficient notice, specially where the notification is of a general character intended for the members of the public, and not for any particular set of individuals. In the absence of any provision in the law for any service of notice of the order on the person aggrieved it is possible to conceive of cases where the period of limitation may run out without any knowledge of the order passed against him, and, as such, he may be deprived of his remedy to move the High Court against the order in question. It is essential in such cases to provide for service of the order containing the Government declaration upon the persons affected thereby, in particular, upon the author of the document and the printer and the publisher thereof.

(High Court, however, refrained from expressing any final opinion in the matter and from declaring on this ground, that Sec. 11 of the Act is ultra vires Article 19 (1) (a) and (g) of the Constitution). Gopal Das v. State of Assam. 1954 Cr LJ 1570: ILR (1954) Assam 399: AIR 1954 Assam 193 (195, 196) (Pt A) (Prs 3, 4, 6) (SB).

——S. 11 — Validity — (Constitution of India, Arts. 19 (1) (a) and 19 (2)).

While giving the power to the executive under Section 11 to pass an order of forfeiture, the Legislature has provided for the opinion of a law officer as a corrective and also the decision of the High Court as a judicial corrective. Therefore, the exercise of the power under Section 11 is not arbitrary and the restriction upon freedom of speech and expression is not an unreasonable restriction. 56 Bom LR 709: ILR (1954) Bom 1245: 1954 Cr LJ 1549: AIR 1954 Bom 508 (509) (Pt A) (Pr 5) (DB).

——S. 11 — No action taken in respect of publications of similar nature and that they furnish evidence as to the nature of the book in questions, namely that it does not come within the category of Section 3 (vi) is no defence to the action taken under the Act. See Press (Objectionable Matter) Act (1951), S. 3 (ii). AIR 1955 Mad 498 (DB).

——S. 11 — Notification not specifying nature of objectionable matter — Objection to notification.

Though the notification may be said to be defective in that it does not specify the nature of the objectionable matter contained in the book, the notification cannot be objected to on that ground if the petitioner was not taken by surprise, as where he is obviously aware on what ground the Government has declared that it contains objectionable matter. (1955) 2 MLJ 106: 68 Mad LW 426: 1955 Mad WN 469: ILR (1956) Mad 161: AIR 1955 Mad 498 (500) (Pt A) (Pr 6) (DB).

——Ss. 11 and 24 — Notice before notification — Necessity of.

The objection that no notice was given to the petitioner before the notification was published is without force, in view of the ample safeguard provided by Section 4 of the Act to canvass the correctness and propriety of the action of the Government by applying to the High Court which is given the power to examine the case on the merits. (1955) 2 Mad LJ 106: 68 Mad LW 426: 1955 Mad WN 469: ILR (1956) Mad 161: AIR 1955 Mad 498 (500) (Pt B) (Pr 6) (DB).

——S. 11 — Petitioner if entitled to copy of certificate given by Advocate-General.

A petitioner is not entitled to a copy of certificate given by the Advocate-General, as that is only required as a condition precedent to the taking of action by the Government. Of course, in a particular case, if it is alleged that no certificate of the Advocate-General had been obtained by the Government, then it is for the Government to prove that such a certificate was given. (1955) 2 Mad LJ 106: 68 Mad LW 426: 1955 Mad WN 469: ILR (1956) Mad 161: AIR 1955 Mad 498 (500) (Pt C) (Pr 6) (DB).

——S. 18 (2) — Procedure — On a complaint under Section 3, 4 and 7 of the Press (Objectionable Matter) Act it is an enquiry and not a trial and that the person proceeded against is a respondent and not an accused should not be lost sight of. The procedure laid down in Chapter 20, Cr. P. C. made applicable by S. 18 (2) to an enquiry under Press O. M. Act will not apply in its full vigour but only its general principles will apply. ——S. 18 (2) — Procedure — Applicability of S. 247, Cr. P. Code to enquiries.

Since the wording of Section 117 (2), Cr. P. Code and the wording of this section are similar there is no reason why 28 Cr. LJ 479 should not be applied to cases falling under this Act and it be held that Section 247 of the Cr. P. Code does not apply to enquiries under this Act. Consequently the case is not one where a certificate under Article 134 (1) (c) could be granted on the ground that Section 247, Cr. P. Code was wrongly applied to the enquiry. 1954 Cr LJ 1022: AIR 1954 Ajmer 41 (42) (Pt B) (Pr 5).

——Ss. 23, 2 (c) and 4 — Right to appeal — Dismissal of application under S. 4 — Competent authority to appeal.

By a notification of the Government of Bombay, dated 1st February, 1953, the Commissioner of Police for Greater Bombay is empowered to exercise the powers of a competent authority under Sections 4, 5, 6 (2), 7, 8 and 17 of the Act. Therefore, where it was the Commissioner of Police who filed the application under Section 4 of the Act and on the dismissal of that application the appeal also had been preferred by the Commissioner of Police:

Held, that the Commissioner of Police being a competent authority the right to prefer an appeal must be regarded as having been conferred upon him by the Legislature and no additional power was required to be conferred upon him by another notification before he could exercise that right. 1956 Cr LJ 864: 58 Bom LR 295: AIR 1956 Bom 447 (448) (Pt A) (Pr 3) (DB).

The question whether there are sufficient grounds for taking action against the publisher of a newspaper under Sections 4 and 7 is primarily one of discretion for the Sessions Judge and the jury. Where in the charge to the jury the Sessions Judge had fairly placed all the circumstances before them for their consideration, but the jury nevertheless expressed the opinion that security should be demanded from the accused and the Sessions Judge accepted their opinion, and fixed the amount of the security on the recommendation of the jury, the High Court will not interfere with the exercise of their discretion. 6 Sau LR 457: 1954 Cr LJ 410: AIR 1954 Sau 28 (31) (Pt D) (Pr 11) (DB).

The Assam Act 5 of 1947 was brought in time with the Press Act and by an amendment, Clause (f) of Section 8-B thereof was deleted. That being so, charge under Section 11 of the Assam Act 5 of 1947 cannot be sustained against the petitioners and the proper procedure for the authorities would be to take appropriate action under the Press (Objectionable Matter) Act which also applies to the Autonomous Districts of Assam. In respect of offences which are outside the Penal Code neither sub-section (1) nor sub-section (4) of Section 137 of the Railways Act would apply. The effect of Section 2, of the Prevention of Corruption Act is that the status of accused persons has to be determined by the application of Section 21, of the Penal Code as if the said section had been included in the Act. Of the four offences to which Section 5-A is applicable Section 161 and Section 165 of I. P. C. are cognisable by virtue of Schedule II, Cr. P. C. Originally they had been shown as non-cognizable in the schedule to the Cr. P. C. but made cognizable by Section 3 of the Prevention of Corruption Act. Section 165-A, I. P. C., was made cognizable by virtue of the provision of Section 3 of the Act. Still, Section 5-A expressly applies to those three offences which are cognizable offences unconditionally and under all circumstances. It is obvious that they cannot be treated as non-cognizable offences when investigated by an officer below the rank of Deputy Supdt. of Police simply on the ground that such investigation cannot be done without the order of a Presidency Magistrate or a Magistrate of the First Class. In the same way, offence under Section 5 of the Act cannot be treated as non-cognizable even when investigated by a low rank officer. Thus, the provision in Section 5-A is of the nature of a special provision which applies to offences specified therein which are cognizable offences including those under S. 5 under all circumstances.

Under Section 155 (2), Criminal P. C. a non-cognizable case cannot be investigated without the order of a Magistrate specified in that section. It cannot be said that the converse principle also must hold good as a law in force namely, that if a case cannot be investigated without the order of a specified Magistrate then it is a non-cognizable case. Section 155 (2), Cr. P. C. applies to every non-cognizable case and does not apply to every non-cognizable offence.

Section 5 (2) of the Prevention of Corruption Act is a cognizable offence under Schedule II of the Cr. P. C. and it is on the same footing as Section 161 and Section 165, I. P. C., as they stand after amendment by Cr. P. C. Amendment Act 26 of 1955. Cognizable offences under Section 161 or Section 165, I. P. C. and a cognizable offence under Section 165-A, I. P. C., which is made specifically cognizable by Section 3 of the Act, stand as cognizable, unaffected by the provision in S. 5-A of the Act.

In the same way, offence under Section 5 (2) stands cognizable under Sch. II of the Criminal Procedure Code unaffected by the provision in Section 5-A of the Act. AIR 1957 Madh Bha 43, Expl.; AIR 1959 SC 707 and AIR 1955 SC 196, Rel. on. Offence under Section 5 (2) of the Prevention of Corruption Act is a cognizable offence whether it is investigated by Officer of rank not below Deputy Superintendent of Police or by Police Officer of lower rank with valid order of a Magistrate under Section 5-A and there is no need for an order of a competent Magistrate under Section 155 (2), Cr. ——S. 3, Proviso — Non-compliance — Effect.

The effect of the proviso to Section 3, Prevention of Corruption Act, is that Section 156, Cr. P. Code, is made inapplicable to investigation of an offence under Section 161 of the Penal Code.

The failure to comply with the mandatory provisions of the proviso to Section 3 of the Prevention of Corruption Act is not a mere irregularity but an illegality, the effect of which is that the entire proceedings based on the charge-sheet reported by the officer who was not competent to investigate must fail and must be quashed. 52 Cr LJ 197 (All) Diss. from. 1953 Cr LJ 556: AIR 1953 Cal 226 (226) (Prs 2, 4) (DB).

[Overruled in AIR 1956 Cal 56 in so far as it decided that the entire proceedings in Court would be vitiated in such circumstances.]

——S. 3, Proviso (as it stood before amendment) — Sanction for investigation — Sanction accorded by Magistrate First Class under S. 155 (2), Criminal P. C. — Validity — (Criminal P. C. (1898), Ss. 4 (1) (f) and 155 (2)).

In effect the Proviso to Section 3 makes an offence under Section 161 or 165, Penal Code cognizable to a limited extent and still retains it in the region of non-cognizable offences in so far as police officers below the rank of a Deputy Superintendent of Police are concerned. In that view, a Magistrate, First Class can, under Section 155 (2) of the Criminal P. C., grant sanction to such police officer to investigate into an offence under S. 161, Penal Code.

All that the Proviso to Section 3, Prevention of Corruption Act, requires is an order of a Magistrate of the First Class. However, it does not seem necessary that a Magistrate of the First Class making such an order must expressly say that he is acting under the proviso. In this view, a sanction accorded by a Magistrate First Class under S. 155 (2), Criminal P. C. is also referable to and can be sustained under the Proviso to S. 3 of the Prevention of Corruption Act, since he had the power to do the identical thing under the Proviso.

Where there was material before the Magistrate on which he could base his order it would be legitimate to infer that the sanction to investigate given by him was so given after due consideration of all the relevant matters. AIR 1955 SC 196, Ref. 1957 Nag LJ 329.

——S. 3 — Permission to investigate — Form of.

Section 3 does not require the permission to be in any particular form, nor even to be in writing. Further, Illustration (e) appended to Section 114, Evidence Act, provides that the Court may presume that judicial and official acts have been regularly performed. In the illustration the words 'regularly performed' mean done with due regard to form and procedure.

Thus where no objection was raised in the trial Court that the permission to investigate given under Section 3 was defective or that the Magistrate did not consider the facts of the case before granting the permission and hence the Magistrate was not examined as witness in the trial, the objection taken in appeal could not be sustained. 1955 Cr LJ 609: 56 Punj LR 260: ILR (1954) Punj 75: AIR 1955 Punj 65 (73) (Pt A) (Pr 32) (DB).

——Ss. 3, Proviso, 5-A — Non-compliance — Effect.

The failure to comply with the Proviso to Section 3 is not a mere irregularity coming within the saving provision contained in sub-s. (2) of Section 156, Cr. P. Code, but it amounts to an illegality vitiating the entire proceedings. The position will be still stronger in the case of a violation of the mandatory provision contained in Section 5-A, Prevention of Corruption Act, as amended in the year 1952. In view of the express exclusion of the general provision contained in Cr. P. Code, there is no scope for contending that an infringement of the mandate contained in Section 5-A would be saved by sub-section (2) of Section 156, Cr. P. Code. Any such infringement would undoubtedly be an illegality. 1953 Cr LJ 556 (Cal) and AIR 1953 Cal 226; AIR 1954 Punj 42, Rel. on. 1954 Cr LJ 1604: 1954 Ker LT 455: ILR (1954) TC 856: AIR 1954 Trav-Co 492 (494) (Pt A) (Pr 4) (DB).

SYNOPSIS

(Prevention of Corruption Act (2 of 1947), S. 4)

1. Acceptance of gratification.
2. Burden of proof.
3. Presumption under.
4. Rebuttal of presumption by accused.
5. Constitutional validity of the section.

1. Acceptance of gratification.

——S. 4 (1) — 'Gratification' — Mere payment of money.

The mere payment of money is gratification within the meaning of Section 4 (1); it does not mean a reward or recompense or gratuity. Under Section 4 (1), therefore, the prosecution has not to establish anything more than mere payment of money. AIR 1958 SC 61 and AIR 1951 All 546, Foll.; AIR 1959 Bom 30, Dissented from. 1960 Cr LJ 1050: AIR 1960 All 470 (472) (Pt B) (Pr 10) (DB).

——S. 4 — 'Gratification' — Meaning of, stated.

Voluntary acceptance of an amount of money or a valuable thing by a public servant will not amount to acceptance of gratification. 1959 Cr LJ 1421: AIR 1959 Bom 543 (DB).

——S. 4 — "For any other person" — Unconscious bearer.

Even if one accepts a gratification or a valuable thing for any other person he comes within the plain meaning of the words of the section but an unconscious and unknowing transmitter or bearer would not come within the section There must go along with the idea of acceptance a conscious mind that the gratification or the valuable thing is for another person before such acceptance can come within the operation of the section. 52 Cri LJ 1116: 88 Cal LJ 14: ILR (1952) 2 Cal 243: AIR 1951 Cal 524 (527) (Pt B) (Pr 20) (DB).

——S. 4 (1) — Acceptance of gratification — Presumption — Nature and scope of — Rebuttal of presumption — Burden of proof must be discharged by proof in accord with S. 3, Evidence Act.

The word 'gratification' in Section 4 (1), must be given its literal dictionary meaning. In the case of a public servant when it is shown that he has received a certain sum of money, which was not a legal remuneration, condition prescribed by Section 4 (1) is satisfied and the presumption must be raised by the Court as mentioned in that section. Once this presumption is raised, the burden of rebutting that presumption is on the accused and this burden cannot be said to have been discharged merely by an explanation offered by the accused, which explanation might be reasonable and probable For discharging the burden, the accused, besides offering an explanation, which, may be reasonable and probable, must show that the explanation is a true one and for that purpose it must be borne in mind that the presumption has to be rebutted by proof and not by a bare explanation, which is merely plausible. In this context the Court must bear in mind the definition of the word 'proved' occurring in S. 3 of the Evidence Act. (1963) 4 Guj LR 886: ILR (1963) Guj 837: 1964 (2) Cr LJ 291: AIR 1964 Guj 206 (208) (Pr 8) (DB).

——Ss. 4, 5 (1) — Prosecution under Ss. 4, 5 (1) (d) and (2) of Prevention of Corruption Act —Accused receiving money from complainant not by way of legal remuneration — Presumption under Section 4 that the said money was received by the accused as a reward a motive within the meaning of Section 161, I. P. C. arises against the accused — Presumption can be rebutted by the accused giving a reasonably probable explanation. 1962 Raj LW 421: ILR (1962) 12 Raj 504.

2. Burden of proof.

——S. 4 (1) — Burden to disprove facts to be presumed — (Evidence Act (1872), Ss. 101 to 104).

Section 4 (1) raises a presumption of law, and it is for an accused person, positively to disprove the facts which the Court has to consider as proved by virtue of that presumption. 1958 Mad LJ (Cr) 299; 1958 SCJ 335; AIR 1958 SC 61, Foll. 1960 Cr LJ 1050: AIR 1960 All 470 (472) (Pt A) (Pr 9) (DB).

——S. 4 (1) — Presumption under — Burden of proof to disprove presumption.

The burden is on the accused to disprove the presumption arising under Section 4 (1) of the Act and in such a case it is not necessary for the prosecution to affirmatively prove anything more to show that the amount was received by him as a bribe or illegal gratification. 1959 Cri LJ 457: AIR 1959 Ker 88 (93) (Pt A) (Prs 12, 13) (DB).

——S. 4 — Burden of proof — Dischage of.

Under Section 4 the burden, no doubt, is upon the accused to prove that he came by the amount innocently. But that burden is, unlike the burden resting upon the prosecution, not so heavy. That burden is like one in a civil proceeding discharged by indicating the balance of probabilities. 1956 Cr LJ 227: Madh BLJ 1955 HCR 1703: Madh BLR 1955 Cr 335: AIR 1956 Madh B 51 (53) (Pt E) (Pr 27).

——S. 4 — Burden of proof.

The presumption under S. 4, arises as soon as the prosecution has proved that the accused has accepted or agreed to accept an amount not covered by the proviso as gratification. If unrebutted and until the contrary is proved, the gratification will be deemed to have been paid or given or received corruptly as inducement or reward as is mentioned in the Act. But in such cases the burden of proof on the accused is less stringent than that laid on the prosecution in proving guilt and corresponds to that which rests upon a plaintiff or defendant who is required to prove an issue in a civil proceeding, i.e., preponderance of probabilities. 1958 Mad WN 561: 1960 Mad LJ (Crl) 552: 1959 Crl LJ 484: AIR 1959 Mad 166 (172) (Pt D) (Pr 26).

3. Presumption under.

● ——S. 4 (1) — Presumption under — When can be raised — Money paid need not be by way of bribe.

Paragraph 3 of Section 161 of the Code provides that the word 'gratification' is not restricted to pecuniary gratification or to gratifications estimable in money. What the prosecution has to prove before asking the Court to raise a presumption against an accused person is that the accused person has received a 'gratification other than legal remuneration'; if it is shown that the accused received the stated amount and that the said amount was not legal remuneration then the condition prescribed by the section is satisfied.

Further, the relevant clause in S. 4 (1), which deals with the acceptance of any 'valuable thing' under Section 165, I. P. Code, plainly requires the presumption to be raised, whenever it is shown that the valuable thing has been received by the accused, without anything more. It would be unreasonable to hold that the word 'gratification' in the same clause imports the necessity to prove not only the payment of money but the incriminating character of the said payment. 1958 Raj LW 68; AIR 1957 Raj 138; 1957 Cr LJ 541 and 60 Bom LR 811; AIR 1959 Bom 30; 1959 Cr LJ 34, Overruled. C. ● ——S. 4 (1) — Scope — Presumption under — When to be raised.

When there is no indication whatever that any public servant was to be approached or influenced by the accused there can be no question of making a presumption that the payment was as a motive or reward for rendering service with any public servant. ● ——S. 4 — Nature of presumption under — (Evidence Act (1872), S. 4 — 'Shall presume') — (Interpretation of Statutes — Acts in pari materia).

The presumption under S. 4, Prevention of Corruption Act, is a presumption of law and it is obligatory on the Court to raise this presumption in every case brought under S. 4. It introduces an exception to the general rule as to the burden of proof in criminal cases and shifts the onus on the accused. The legislature has chosen to use the words 'shall presume' and not 'may presume', the former a presumption of law and latter of fact. Both these phrases have been defined in the Indian Evidence Act, no doubt for the purpose of that Act but S. 4 of the Prevention of Corruption Act is in pari materia with the Evidence Act because it deals with a branch of law of evidence, e.g., presumptions, and therefore, should have the same meaning. State of Madras v. A. Vaidyanath Iyer, 1958 SCJ 335: 1958 Mad WN (SC) 34: 1958 Crl LJ 232: (1958) Mad LJ (Crl) 299: 1958 All Crl R 267: 1958 SCR 580: (1958) 1 An WR (SC) 136: (1958) 2 Lab LJ 653: (1958) 1 Mad LJ (SC) 136: 1958 All WR (HC) 371: AIR 1958 SC 61 (64) (Pr 14).

——S. 4 — Scope of — Presumption — Nature and extent of.

Section 4 only lays down that, if it is proved by the prosecution that the accused did receive gratification, then there will be a presumption that the gratification was received by the accused as a motive or reward as mentioned in S. 161, I. P. Code. Before relying upon the presumption laid down in S. 4 of Act 2 of 1947), the prosecution must prove that the accused accepted or obtained any gratification other than legal remuneration. 1956 All LJ 662: 1956 All WR (HC) 680: 1957 Crl LJ 42 (44) (Pt A) (Pr 16).

——S. 4 — Accused owning large assets — No proof of guilt except in case under Prevention of Corruption Act. AIR 1955 NUC (All) 386 (DB).

——S. 4 — Applicability — Charge under Section 5 (1) — Presumption, if can be invoked.

The presumption under S. 4 is also available in cases where the accused is charged under some other section than S. 161, I. P. Code. Section 5 (1) provides for the same type of offence—the gravamen of the charge being the same—as in S. 161, I. P. Code and, therefore, where the accused is charged under S. 5 (1) of the Act, the Court is fully justified in relying upon the presumption available under S. 4. 1953 All Crl R

——S. 4 — 'Gratification' — Meaning — Presumption under S. 4 when arises.

The word 'gratification' in S. 4 has been used in the section in its primary dictionary meaning as 'satisfaction' and not in the sense of reward or recompense".

The presumption referred to in S. 4 arises as soon as the prosecution has proved that the accused person has accepted or obtained, or has agreed to accept or attempted to obtain, for himself or for any other person any gratification in the above sense or any valuable thing, from any person provided however illogical it may be that in the former case it has further proved that such gratification was not accepted or obtained or agreed to be accepted or attempted to be obtained, by way of legal remuneration: 1949 All LJ 441: 1949 All Cr C 111: 1949 All WR (HC) 454: ILR (1950) 5 All 382: 52 Cri LJ 197: AIR 1951 Al 546 (547, 548) (Pt B) (Prs 4, 15) (DB).

——S. 4 (1) — Trial under S. 161, I. P. Code — Statutory presumption of motive of payment ignored — Appeal from acquittal — Acquittal cannot stand — (Penal Code (1860), S. 161). See Criminal P. C. (1898), S. 423. 1959 Cri LJ 1421: AIR 1959 Bom 543 (DB).

——S. 4 (1) — Presumption under S. 4 when arises indicated — Presumption however is not one which is required to be rebutted by evidence establishing the defence of accused beyond reasonable doubt. See Penal Code (1860), S. 161. 1959 Cr LJ 1421: AIR 1959 Bom 543 (DB).

——S. 4 — Conditions necessary for raising presumption — Nature of presumption.

It is only when the prosecution has proved that the accused has accepted any gratification other than legal remuneration, the Court shall presume that the accused person accepted that gratification as motive or reward. It is necessary for the prosecution to prove that not merely a payment of money or in kind was made over to the accused but it must be further proved by the prosecution itself that such payment amounted to gratification other than legal remuneration. A mere payment without more would not amount to a gratification other than legal remuneration and if it does not amount to gratification other than legal remuneration there is no scope for raising the presumption under S. 4 of the Prevention of Corruption Act.

Section 4 refers to two offences— one under S. 161 and the other under S. 165, Penal Code The words 'any gratification' in the section must be read with reference to the offence under Section 161 and the words 'any valuable thing' occurring in the section must be read in reference to the offence under S. 165. AIR 1951 All 546, Dissented from; AIR 1951 Cal 524, Rel. on.

If the presumption arises under S. 4 then it is the bounden duty of the accused, on whom the burden of proof is thereafter cast, to show that what was accepted by him as gratification was not as accepted by him as gratification was not as a motive or a reward. But for the purpose of considering whether the amount paid by the complainant to the accused was a gratification or not the case that it tried so be made out by the accused will have some bearing. ILR (1959) Bom 243: 59 Bom LR 811: 1959 Cri LJ 34: AIR 1959 Bom 30 (32, 33) (Pt A) (Prs 5, 6) (DB).

[Overruled in AIR 1960 SC 548.]

——S. 4 — Presumption and onus — Presumption that accused accepted gratification for corrupt motive arises when prosecution proves beyond reasonable doubt that accused accepted gratification — Burden of displacing presumption is ordinarily on accused, i.e., of raising reasonable doubt — Evidence Act (1872), Ss. 101-103. AIR 1955 NUC (Cal) 745 (DB).

——S. 4 — Burden of proof — Standard of proof required — Evidence Act, Ss. 3, 101 to 103 — Penal Code (1860), Ss. 161, 165.

Ordinarily, the prosecution would be ilable to prove the motive or reward under S. 161, Penal Code, or absence or inadequacy of consideration under S. 165, Penal Code, because such motive or reward or such absence or inadequacy of consideration is part of the very offence under Section 161 or S. 165, Penal Code respectively. But now by reason of Section 4, Prevention of Corruption Act, 1947, that presumption will be made against the accused the moment the prosecution proves that the accused accepted or agreed to accept or obtained or attempted to obtain any gratification or valuable thing. This does not mean that the burden of proof on the prosecution to establish the acceptance or the agreement to accept or the obtaining or the agreement to obtain the gratification or the valuable thing is at all displaced by this section. That burden still remains on the prosecution. This proof must be in accordance with the standard of proof laid down by S. 3, Evidence Act. Any other standard of proof by percentage or plausibility cannot be accepted. 52 Cri LJ 1116: 88 Cal LJ 14: ILR (1952) 2 Cal 243: AIR 1951 Cal 524 (527) (Pt A) (Prs 18, 19) (DB).

——S. 4 — Presumption.

Under S. 4 of the Prevention of Corruption Act the Court must presume that the accused under the circumstances, accepted the money as a motive or reward as contemplated under S. 161, I. P. Code. ——S. 4 (2) — Presumption under — Nature — 'Proof to the contrary' — What is.

The presumption under S. 4 (2) of the Prevention of Corruption Act (2 of 1947) is rebuttable and the 'proof to the contrary' for the purpose of rebutting the presumption may be afforded by the statement of the accused himself, if it is probable under the circumstances of the case as also by the other circumstances established in the case. The only presumption which can be drawn by virtue of S. 4 (1) is that the thing was obtained without consideration or for a consideration which the accused knew to be inadequate. A presumption that it was obtained from any person whom he knew to be interested in or related to the person so concerned, is not covered by this provision. It is for the prosecution to prove by positive evidence that the accused obtained the thing from a person who is known to be related to the concerned person. (1957) 1 Lab LJ 650: 22 Cut LT 397: ILR (1956) Cut 517: 1956 Cri LJ 1341: AIR 1956 Orissa 201 (203) (Pr 11) (DB).

——S. 4 — Scope — Presumption of innocence of accused is not displaced by S. 4 — Penal Code (1860), S. 161.

Per Panigrahi, J.:— Section 4 lays down that if the prosecution proves that the accused person has accepted, or agreed to accept, any gratification, it shall be presumed, unless the contrary is proved, that he accepted or agreed to accept with a corrupt motive. This raises a rebuttable presumption and the contrary may be proved to displace the presumption contained in the section. The section purports to lay down that the Court shall draw a particular inference from a particular proved fact. It is only an inference and not evidence, and may be overcome by evidence. It would be an outrage on commonsense and reason to infer that the presumption of innocence of the accused has itself been displaced and that the offence of bribery must be held to be established the moment the money passed into the possession of the accused without further proof that the money was "accepted" or "agreed to be accepted" for corrupt purposes. When the law raises a presumption against the accused and calls upon him to prove the contrary, the quantum and degree of proof required to displace that presumption are just those required in a civil case; and the contrary can be said to be proved if the accused succeeds in establishing that the act attributed to him is capable of an interpretation other than that suggested by the prosecution. In such an event the Court is bound to hold that the prosecution has failed to displace the presumption of innocence beyond reasonable doubt.

In this view, the mere proof of the passing of money from A to B, charged with bribery, is not enough to displace the presumption of B's innocence.

Section 4 requires that the prosecution should prove that the accused accepted or agreed to accept the amount as a gratification. "Accept" mean "to take or receive with a consenting mind". It is, therefore, upon the prosecution to prove not only the passing of money into the hands of the accused but also that he took it with a 'consenting mind'. This would necessitate proof of either an agreement to accpet prior to the actual acceptance, or of his consent to accept the same as gratification at the time the money was offered.

Proof of the contrary need not be by evidence oral or documentary: The proof may be afforded, by the statement of the accused himself or by the circumstances of the case.

Per Narasimham, J.:— As soon as the prosecution had proved that the public officer accepted the sum offered which was admittedly not part of the legal remuneration, the presumption under S. 4 of the Prevention of Corruption Act, 1947 (Act 2 of 1947) would apply and in the absence of any evidence on the side of the accused it must be held that the sum was accepted as bribe. 1952 Cri LJ 1393: ILR (1952) Cut 364: AIR 1952 Orissa 267 (272, 273, 278) (Pt D) (Prs 8 to 10, 29) (DB).

——S. 4 — Scope — Presumption — When arises.

Where it is admitted by the accused that he received the money which was not the legal remuneration, the presumption under S. 4 that he received the money as a motive or reward such as is mentioned in S. 161, Penal Code arises against him. The section introduces an exception to the general rule as to the burden of proof in criminal cases and shifts the onus on to the accused. It is a presumption of law and therefore it is obligatory on the Court to raise this presumption in every case brought under Section 4 because unlike the case of presumption of fact, presumptions of law constitute a branch of jurisprudence. ——S. 4 — Presumption under — Benefit of — When arises — (Penal Code (1860), S. 161) — Evidence Act (1872), Ss. 101-103).

In order to bring home the charge of bribery against a public servant, it is essential to prove that there is (1) acceptance of or attempt to obtain a gratification and (2) as a motive or reward for doing or forbearing to do any official act or for showing or forbearing to show any favour or disfavour in the exercise of his official functions. So far as the first part is concerned, namely acceptance of or attempt to obtain gratification, that has still to be proved by the prosecution under S. 4 (1). Once that has been proved, the presumption arises as to the motive with which money was received and it would then be for the accused to prove that he did not receive the gratification as a motive or reward for exercising any official favour or disfavour. 1955 Raj LW 51, Rel. on; AIR 1951 Cal 524, Distinguished; (1943) 1 KB 607, Rel. on. ILR (1957) 7 Raj 338: 1958 Raj LW 68: 1957 Cr LJ 541: AIR 1957 Raj 138 (140, 141) (Prs 13, 15, 17) (DB).

——S. 4 (1) — Presumption under, when arises — What prosecution has to prove in first instance.

Under S. 4 (1) Prevention of Corruption Act 1947, the general presumption of innocence of the accused is displaced once it is proved that he has accepted the money which is not legal remuneration and instead the presumption will arise that he took it as a bribe. In order that this should happen, the prosecution has to prove first that the money has passed into the possession of the accused person and, second, that this money was illegal remuneration. Therefore, the find of the money from the possession of the accused is by itself not enough and the other ingredient that it was by way of illegal gratification has also to be proved by the prosecution. But if that is done, then the accused must account for his possession of the money and if he fails to do so it must be held that the sum was taken by him as a bribe. ('56) 9 Sau LR 211.

——S. 4 (2), (3) (as amended in 1952) — Applicability.

Held, that in the nature of the prosecution evidence in this case the Court was fully justified in drawing the presumption as provided for in S. 4 (2). The sum of Rs. 35 tendered by the accused to P. 4. Rebuttal of presumption by accused.

■ ——S. 4 (1) — Accused shown to have accepted money which was not legal remuneration — Presumption can be raised — Rebuttal must be by explanation which must be true and not merely plausible — Presumption under S. 4 (1) and Evidence Act, S. 114, distinction between — Whether presumption is rebutted is question of fact — Supreme Court will not interfere — Constitution of India, Art. 136 — (Section 4 renumbered as sub-section (1) of that section by the Amendment Act (59 of 1952)).

In order to raise the presumption under Section 4 (1), Prevention of Corruption Act what prosecution has to prove is that the accused person has received 'gratification other than legal remuneration' and when it is shown that he has received a certain sum of money which was not a legal remuneration, then the condition prescribed by this section is satisfied and the presumption thereunder must be raised. AIR 1960 SC 548, Rel. on.

Whereas under S. 114 of the Evidence Act, it is open to the Court to draw or not draw a presumption as to the existence of one fact from the proof of another fact and it is not obligatory upon the Court to draw such presumption, under sub-s. (1) of S. 4 Prevention of Corruption Act, however, if a certain fact is proved; that is; where any gratification (other than legal gratification) or any valuable thing is proved to have been received by an accused person the Court is required to draw a presumption that the person received that thing as a motive of reward such as is mentioned in S. 161, I. P. Code. Therefore, the Court has no choice in the matter, once it is established that the accused person has received a sum of money which was not due to him as a legal remuneration. Of course, it is open to that person to show that though that money was not due to him as legal remuneration it was legally due to him in some other manner or that he had received it under a transaction or an arrangement which was lawful. The burden resting on the accused person in such a case would not be as light as it is where a presumption is raised under S. 114 of the Evidence Act and cannot be held to be discharged merely by reason of the fact that the explanation offered by the accused is reasonable and probable. It must further be shown that the explanation is a true one. The words 'unless the contrary is proved' which occur in this provision make it clear that the presumption has to be rebutted by proof and not by a bare explanation which is merely plausible. A fact is said to be proved when its existence is directly established or when upon the material before it the Court finds its existence to be so probable that a reasonable man would act on the supposition that it exists. Unless, therefore, explanation is supported by proof, the presumption created by the provision cannot be said to be rebutted. AIR 1943 PC 211, Distinguished; AIR 1958 SC 61, Rel. on.

The question whether a presumption of law or fact stands rebutted by the evidence or other material on record is one of fact and not of law and the Supreme Court is slow to interfere with the view of facts taken by the High Court. No doubt, it will be open to the Supreme Court to examine the evidence for itself where the High Court has proceeded upon in erroneous view as to the nature of the presumption or, again, where the assessment of facts made by the High Court is mainfestly erroneous. Once the prosecution establishes the receipt of the tainted money by an accused person, then an onus is cast on the accused to rebut the presumption against him and offer an explanation. The accused appellant, an Assistant Draughtsman in the Southern Railway, was charged with offences under S. 161, Penal Code and S. 5 (1) (d) read with S. 5 (2) of the Prevention of Corruption Act, on the allegation that he took a bribe of Rs. 100 from a Railway contractor. The Special Judge, rejecting the explanation of the accused that he did not receive it as bribe, but that the contractor gave it to him as marriage presentation, in spite of his protest, held that it amounted to taking illegal gratification under

S. 5 (1) (d) and accordingly convicted him under S. 5 (2) of the Act. The Judge did not record any finding under S. 161, Penal Code. The accused thereupon preferred the appeal to the High Court.

Held, the Special Judge is in error in applying the presumption under S. 4 (1) of the Prevention of Corruption Act for a conviction under S. 5 (2), because these presumptions apply to different specific offences, and cannot be used for an offence to which it is not related. Since the accused had been charged under S. 5 (1) (d) of the Act, the presumption under S. 5 (3) of the Act alone is applicable, if the facts and circumstances warrant its application. It cannot be laid down as an absolute rule in rebutting the presumption placing the onus upon the accused either under S. 4 (1) or S. 5 (3) of the Act, that he must adduce evidence aliunde, and that his explanation taken with other circumstances which might appear in the prosecution evidence will not afford a rebuttal of that presumption. While the explanation of the accused may be taken into consideration and treated as evidence in the case in order to rebut such a presumption, it is not sufficient that the version given by him is merely reasonable or probable. In order to rebut the presumption, the statement of the accused taken with other circumstances must be accepted as true, or should amount to 'proof' within the meaning of S. 3 of the Evidence Act.

In the instant case, the possibility of the currency notes being given as alleged by the accused cannot be ruled out. If such a gift is given and taken, it cannot be said that it has been taken by any corrupt motive, nor does the presumption under S. 5 (3) apply. The offence under Section 5 (1) (d) is not established, and the accused is entitled to an acquittal on that count.

Suppose in a case where an accused has been charged with several offences, the Court has found him guilty of an offence and passed a sentence specifically saying that it is not necessary to give a finding on other offences, though this may amount to non-compliance with the mandatory provisions, nonetheless, it cannot be said that the omission to give a finding is tantamout to recording a finding of 'not guilty'. In view of the fact that there is no positive finding by the trial Court, the safer course would be to direct a retrial on the first charge under S. 161, Penal Code. This is necessary, though the Court has held under S. 5 (2) that the explanation of the accused that he had gone there for extending marriage invitation was probable. For the purpose of S. 161, Penal Code read with S. 4 of Act this finding will not be sufficient, as it has got to be found that the statement of the accused is true, or is such as to amount to proof of his case. (1965) 1 Andh WR 9: 1965 MLJ (Cr) 5: 1965 (1) Cri LJ 281: AIR 1965 Andh Pra 105 (112) (Pt A) (Prs 29, 30) (DB).

——S. 4 — Presumption under — How rebutted.

The presumption against the accused under S. 4, Prevention of Corruption Act, regarding the motive or reward or absence or inadequacy of consideration is a rebuttable presumption. That presumption may be rebutted by the accused not only by any oral testimony of witnesses called on behalf of the accused but also by a statement of the accused under S. 342, Criminal P. C., and by any document produced on behalf of the defence or by the surrounding circumstances. 88 CLJ 14: ILR (1952) 2 Cal 243: 52 Cr LJ 1116: AIR 1951 Cal 524 (527) (Pt C) (Pr 21) (DB).

——S. 4 (1) — Presumption — Rebuttal.

The presumption under S. 4 (1) arises not only when the accused has accepted or obtained for himself or for any other person any gratification but also when he has accepted or obtained for himself or for any other person any valuable thing from any person. Currency notes are valuable things. This being a presumption of law, when the facts necessary for raising the presumption are either proved or admitted, the Court has to proceed on the basis that the gratification obtained by the accused was accepted by him as a motive or reward such as is mentioned in S. 161 of the Penal Code until the contrary is proved by the accused. When the prosecution has proved that the accused public servant has received money from any person which is not legally due to him or that fact is admitted by the accused himself, the burden is on him to disprove the presumption arising under S. 4 (1) of the Prevention of Corruption Act and in such a case it is not necessary for the prosecution to affirmatively prove anything more to show that the amount was received by him as a bribe or illegal gratification.

The degree of proof required to rebut the presumption must, of course, depend upon the facts and circumstances of each case. But in view of the imperative provision in S. 4 (1) the presumption cannot be held to have been rebutted without sufficient material before the Court which would ordinarily carry conviction to a judicial mind. As the contrary has to be proved it will not be sufficient for the accused merely to create a doubt.

A mere explanation by the accused, which is not inconsistent with the proved or admitted fact that he had received money from a person with whom he had dealings officially which was not legally due to him, would not therefore, be sufficient, without corroboration by other evidence either direct or circumstantial, to rebut the presumption under S. 4 (1). 1958 Ker LT 676: 1959 Ker LJ 425: 1958 Mad LJ (Cr) 758: 1959 Cr LJ 457: AIR 1959 Ker 88 (93) (Pt A) (Prs 12, 13) (DB).

——S. 4 — Presumption — Rebuttal — (Penal Code (1860), S. 165) — (Evidence Act (1872), Ss. 101 to 104).

It cannot be said that it must first be proved that the acceptance of the valuable thing was as a gratification other than legal remuneration before the presumption under S. 4 can be drawn so as to throw the burden on the accused. It is not enough for the accused to offer an explanation which has not been disproved or to create some doubt in the mind of the Court. The burden cast on the accused is however less stringent than that laid on the prosecutor in proving guilt, and corresponds to that which rests upon a plaintiff or defendant who is required to prove an issue in civil proceedings. ILR (1958) Ker 498: 1958 Ker LJ 8: (1958) 2 Lab LJ 728: 1958 Cri LJ 640: 1957 Ker LT 1277: AIR 1958 Ker 136 (137, 138) (Prs 3, 4, 5, 9) (DB).

It is clear from S. 4, Prevention of Corruption Act that the moment it is proved that the accused has received a sum of money from the complainant it shall be presumed unless contrary is proved that he accepted it as a motive or reward such as one mentioned in S. 161, I. P. Code. This presumption being there the burden lies heavily upon the accused to prove to the contrary.

Although a burden is cast upon the accused by reason of S. 4, this burden is not so heavy as upon the prosecution in other cases where no such presumption arises but is akin to burden placed upon a litigant in civil cases and can be discharged by proving preponderance of possibilities.

The considerations that a charge under S. 161, I. P. Code, is one which is easily and may often be lightly made but is in the very nature of things difficult to establish, cannot be suffered to relieve the prosecution of any part of the burden which rests upon it to establish charge beyond reasonable doubt. If after everything that can legitimately be considered has been given its due weight, room still exists for taking the view that, however strong the suspicion raised against the accused, every reasonable possibility of innocence has not been excluded, he is entitled to an acquittal. ——S. 4 (1) — Presumption under — Rebuttal of.

The Legislature has, by the words, 'shall presume' used in S. 4 (1) of the Prevention of Corruption Act, made it obligatory on the Court to raise a presumption in every case brought under the Prevention of Corruption Act that the accused received or accepted the money as an illegal gratification unless he rebutted the same. For rebutting the presumption under S. 4 (1) it is not enough for the accused to offer an explanation which has not been disproved or to create some doubt in the mind of the Court, but it is necessary for the accused to prove that he did receive the money otherwise than as illegal gratification or bribe i.e., innocently.

The burden of proof required to be discharged by the accused in such cases is less than that required at the hands of the prosecution in proving the case beyond reasonable doubt. This burden may be discharged by the evidence satisfying the Court of the probability of that which the accused is called upon to establish. 1959 Mad LJ (Cr) 606: 1959 Mad WN 441: (1959) 2 Mad LJ 141: 1960 Cr LJ 92: AIR 1960 Mad 27 (31) (Pt A) (Pr 17).

● ——S. 4 (1) — Validity — Article 14 of Constitution — If violated.

Article 14 does not forbid reasonable classification for the purposes of legislation; no doubt it forbids class legislation; but if it appears that the impugned legislation is based on a reasonable classification founded on intelligible differentia and that the said differentia have a rational relation to the object sought to be achieved by it, its validity cannot be successfully challenged under Art. 14.

The basis adopted by the Legislature in classifying one class of public servants who are brought within the mischief of S. 4 (1) is a perfectly rational basis. It is based on an intelligible differentia. The object which the Legislature wanted to achieve is the eradication of corruption from amongst public servants, and between the said object and the intelligible differentia on which the classification is based there is a rational and direct relation. Hence, S. 4 (1) is not ultra vires under Art. 14 of the Constitution. C. I. Emden v. ——S. 5 — Constitutional validity — (Constitution of India, Art. 20).

The accused was found to be in possession of an amount in September, 1952. The accused who was not able to explain satisfactorily the innocent acquisition thereof pleaded that even if that had been acquired by him by corrupt means that might be before the Constitution came into force. At that time such an acquisition was not punishable in any manner. As a result of sub-section (3) which was enacted later after the Constitution came into force even such act which was not punishable at the time it was committed was punished under sub-section (2). Hence the sub-section were hit by the provisions of Article 20 (1) of the Constitution.

Held, that the accused's contention was untenable. The conduct which was described in Cls. (a) to (d) of sub-section (1) had always been considered to be criminal and punishable. Hence, it could not be said that sub-section (2) made some act which was not punishable at the time at which it was committed punishable. Sub-section (3) only laid down a rule of evidence and did not create any substantive offence. The offence was defined in sub-section (1) and it was punishable under sub-section (2). As sub-section (3) only provided a rule of evidence there could be no question of such a rule being hit by Art. 20 (1). Hence there was no force in the plea that sub-section (2) was ultra vires because they contravened Art. 20 (1). 1958 All LJ 424: 1958 All WR (HC) 526: 1958 All Cr R 335: (1958) 2 Lab LJ 669.

It is an error in law to have charged accused who are not public servants with having committed the offences under Section 5 (1) (c) and Section 5 (1) (d) punishable under S. 5 (2) of the Prevention of Corruption Act read with Section 34 of the Penal Code. The punishing section being Section 5 (2) alone, the addition of Section 34, Penal Code, does not make those accused liable under Section 5 (1) (c) and Section 5 (1) (d) of the Prevention of Corruption Act. But when these offences are said to have been committed in pursuance of the criminal conspiracy then it would be proper if a charge under Section 5 (1) (c) and (d) read with Section 109 of the Penal Code is framed against those accused. And if such accused happen to be charged with having committed these offences in pursuance of the conspiracy, read with Section 34 of the Penal Code, it would not be illegal to alter the charge against them to one of abetment of the offence of criminal misconduct, if the appellate Court is satisfied that no prejudice is likely to be caused to any of the accused by doing so. Clauses (a) to (d) of sub-section (1) of Section 5 of the Prevention of Corruption Act, specify the different offences which would amount to criminal misconduct by a public servant in the discharge of his official duty and punishable under sub-section (2) of Section 5. Every one of the offences specified in Cls. (a) to (d) is an offence made punishable under the Penal Code also. The essential ingredients of the offence under Section 5 (1) (a) of the Prevention of Corruption Act are the same as the ingredients of the offence under Section 161 of the Indian Penal Code subject to one difference, viz., that the offence under Section 5 (1) (a) is an aggravated from of the offence under Section 161. Repetition of the offence under S. 161 of the Indian Penal Code, would amount to the offence of criminal misconduct under Section 5 (1) (a) of the Prevention of Corruption Act. It follows therefore that the charge framed against the accused in this case that he has committed the offence under Section 5 (1) (a) of the Prevention of Corruption Act necessarily implies that he has committed the offence, punishable under Section 161 of the Indian Penal Code. (1959) 1 Lab LJ 28: 1957 Ker LJ 476: ILR (1957) Ker 559: (1957) Mad LJ (Cr) 443: 1957 Cr LJ 1127: 1957 Ker LT 784: AIR 1957 Ker 134 (139) (Pt D) (Pr 10) (DB).

Even after the amendment of 1952 in the Prevention of Corruption Act, the position regarding an offence under Section 161, I. P. Code and under sub-section (2) of Section 5, Prevention of Corruption Act is that it is cognizable so far as officers of the rank of a Deputy Superintendent of Police and above are concerned. But so far as the officers below the rank of a Deputy Superintendent of Police are concerned, the said offences are non-cognizable in so far as they cannot investigate them without the permission of a Magistrate of the First Class. All that Section 5-A enjoins is that if investigation is to be conducted by a Deputy Superintendent of Police he does not require any order from a Magistrate. But if investigation is to be conducted by an officer of the lower rank then permission of a Magistrate of the First Class is necessary. The object underlying both the cases is to save public servants from frivolous and vexatious harassment at the instance of disgruntled persons. Where the Magistrate perused the F. I. R. before giving permission it could not be said, that he did not satisfy himself regarding good and sufficient reasons to conduct the investigation. Madh BLR 1956 (Cr) 395: 1957 Crl LJ 184: AIR 1957 Madh Bha 43 (44 to 47) (Pt B) (Prs 6, 7, 11, 12) (DB).

The accused had abused his position and helped other persons to derive a pecuniary advantage thereby. He had done this consistently for over several months. This would amount to his habitually obtaining in the discharge of his duty gratification from other persons. The High Court's judgment was therefore consistent with the charge framed under Section 5 (1) (a) and could not be held to be an alteration of the conviction under Section 5 (1) (a) to one under Section 5 (1) (d). ● ——Ss. 5 (1) (a) and (d) and 5 (3) — Charge under S. 5 (1) (a) — Failure of, does not necessarily mean failure of charge under S. 5 (1) (d).

As soon as the requirements of sub-section (3) of Section 5, have been fulfilled, the Court will not only be justified in making but is called upon to make, the presumption that the accused person is guilty of criminal misconduct within the meaning of Section 5 (1) (d). In order to succeed in respect of the charge under Section 5 (1) (a), the prosecution has to prove that the accused person had accepted or obtained or agreed to accept or attempted to obtain from any person any gratification by way of bribe within the meaning of Section 161, of the I. P. Code. The charge under S. 5 (1) (d) does not require any such proof. If there is evidence forthcoming to satisfy the requirements of the earlier part of sub-section (3) of Section 5, conviction for criminal misconduct can be had on the basis of the presumption which is a legal presumption to be drawn from the proof of facts in the earlier part of the sub-section (3) aforesaid. Hence, the failure of the charge under Cl. (a) of sub-section (1) of Section 5, does not necessarily mean the failure of the charge under Section 5 (1) (d). C. S. D. Swami v. An offence under Section 5 (1) (c), Prevention of Corruption Act, is almost identical with an offence under Section 409, I. P. Code, when it is committed by a public servant. For all practical purposes they are one and the same offence.

Two laws under which the same act or omission is punishable can co-exist side by side. Where a new law makes an act punishable, which is already penal under an existing law and there is nothing in the latter enactment which either expresses or implies that the operation of the earlier law is excluded, an offender can be prosecuted and punished under either of the two enactments. The earlier law will not be put out of operation merely because there is some change in procedure or some difference in penalties. The effect of the new enactment is to add a remedy and not to repeal the former remedy. AIR 1952 Punj 89, Dissented from.

The Prevention of Corruption Act has not expressly repealed any of the provisions of the Indian Penal Code. There is nothing in the Act from which a repeal by implication can be inferred. A repeal by implication can only be inferred if it is consistent with the object and purpose which necessitated the new enactment. But where it is in direct conflict with this object and purpose, it is impossible to infer such an intention. The Prevention of Corruption Act was intended to be only a supplementary measure and it did not repeal Section 409, I. P. Code by implication. Thus Section 5 (2), Prevention of Corruption Act, does not pro tanto repeal Section 409, I. P. Code, and it is open to the State to prosecute a public servant for committing criminal breach of trust under Section 409, I. P. Code. AIR 1954 SC 715, Foll. Om Prakash v. ——S. 5 (1) (c) — Procedure for trial — Joint trial — Offence under S. 477-A, I. P. Code — Propriety — Fraudulent and dishonest intention — Inference — Statements recorded in preliminary enquiry — Failure to furnish — Effects.

The specific provisions of sub-section (3) of Section 7 of the Criminal Law (Amendment) Act (46 of 1952) admit of no doubt in authorising Special Judges to try any offence other than the offences specified in Section 6, with which the accused may, under the Criminal Procedure Code, be charged. The only limitation is that prescribed by the provisions relating to joinder of charges under Sections 233 to 236, Criminal Procedure Code. The offences under S. 477-A, Indian Penal Code, could be tried along with the offences under Section 5 (2) (1) of the Prevention of Corruption Act at one trial. (1958) 2 Andh WR 523, Correctness doubted. While the prosecution can give up any witness it likes, it must conduct itself in a fair manner and should not manoeuvre or adopt tactics with a view to forcing the accused to put witnesses it should have examined in the box.

The three ingredients in Section 5 (1) (c) of the Prevention of Corruption Act are that the accused must be a public servant at the time of the commission of the offence, that he dishonestly or fraudulently misappropriates or otherwise converts to his own use any property entrusted to him or under his control or allows any other person so to do. There is no doubt that the accused was a public servant at the time of the alleged offence and that the property was entrusted to him. If the accused, who alone could say what he did with the property entrusted to him, gives an explanation which is found to be false, the setting up of that false defence would impute to him a fraudulent and dishonest intention.

An investigation will be deemed to have commenced whether or not the F. I. R. has been registered. Though an investigation may be declared to be illegal for non-conformity with any apecific provision of law, it cannot anytheless be said that the statements were not recorded during the course of an investigation. In cases where the investigating officer does not register a case and issues an F. I. R. but carries on a preliminary enquiry which is in fact an investigation, statements recorded during this irregular proceedings are nonetheless hit by Section 162. In the instant case, there is not the slightest doubt that the investigation had commenced on receipt of Exhibit P. 18 and all the statements of witnesses recorded by the investigating officer are hit by Section 162, Cr. P. Code. The accused should have been furnished with copies of these statements under S. 173, Cr. P. Code. The accused is fully justified in complaining that the non-furnishing of these copies has prejudiced his trial. The omission and refusal to furnish copies of the statements recorded in the preliminary enquiry has prejudiced the accused and the trial on that account is vitiated. (1960) 2 Andh WR 73: (1960) MLJ (Cr) 477: 1961 Cr LJ 33: AIR 1961 Andh Pra 3 (5) (Pt B) (Pr 8).

If the facts constitute an offence requiring either the sanction of a superior authority or the filing of a complaint by a Court, it cannot be evaded by adopting the device of omitting one of the ingredients of the offence and prosecuting him under some other section. To illustrate, if a public servant receives amounts on behalf of the State and dishonestly misappropriates them the offence directly falls under Section 5 (1) (c) of the Prevention of Corruption Act. He can be prosecuted only with the previous sanction of his superior authority. The prosecution cannot by adopting the device of ignoring the fact that the accused is public servant, evade the requirement of previous consent by filing a complaint under Section 408, Penal Code. 1956 Andhra WR 73: 1956 Andhra LT 169: 1957 Cri LJ 1078: AIR 1957 Andh Pra 663 (670) (Pt C) (Pr 24) (DB).

——S. 5 (2) read with S. 5 (1) (c) — Criminal misconduct by committing misappropriation need not be in discharge of duties as public servant.

It is not necessary to constitute an offence under Cl. (c) of Section 5 (1) that the public servant must do something in connection with his own duty and thereby obtain any valuable thing or pecuniary advantage.

Criminal misconduct by committing misappropriation need not be in the discharge of the duties of the accused as a public servant. Where, therefore, the accused who is in service in the audit section of the Co-operative Department of the State, collects arrears of audit fees payable by some societies, although it is not a part of his duties, during the course of audit, and instead of crediting the money which comes under his control, misappropriates it and deprives the owner namely the State of that property, an offence under Section 5 (1) (c) is complete. ——S. 5 (1) (c) — 'Allowed', meaning and import of — Words and Phrases — 'Allowed' — Penal Code (1860), S. 405.

The word 'allowed' as used in the section is much wider in its import than the expression 'wilfully suffering any person to misappropriate the property entrusted' in Section 405 of the Penal Code.

The word ordinarily involves permission, express or implied, and before a person can be said to allow anything there must be something in the nature of actual knowledge or connivance on his part. However wide the import of the word 'allow' in the section, there must be some evidence that the accused had known of misappropriation and that by some act or omission of his he made it possible or easy for another person to misappropriate. His failure to bring the accused to book or his gross negligence in detecting the fraud that was committed would not by itself lead the inference that he allowed the fraud to be perpetrated within the meaning of the section. ——S. 5 (1) (c) — Scope whether repeals Section 409, Penal Code.

Section 5 (1) (c), Prevention of Corruption Act, does not create any new offence. Read with sub-section (2) of Section 5, it only makes an act already punishable under Section 409, I. P. Code, punishable as a criminal misconduct under the Act.

The difference in the punishment, the requirement as to sanction and the special rules of evidence cannot make it a new offence.

Section 5 (1) (c), Prevention of Corruption Act, 1947, as it stood prior to the Prevention of Corruption (Second Amendment) Act, 1952, did not pro tanto repeal S. 409, Penal Code, so far as it relates to offences by public servants. Therefore a public servant could be prosecuted under Section 409, Penal Code, notwithstanding S. 5 (2) of that Act. This is now expressly made clear by Section 5 (4) of that Act. ——S. 5 (1) (c) — Scope — If repeals S. 409, I. P. Code.

It cannot be held that Section 5 (1) (c) of the Prevention of Corruption Act repeals S. 409, I. P. Code. AIR 1952 Punj 89, Dissented from.

The general principle of law is that the Penal Code would apply if the acts fall within the I. P. Code, though there may be specific offences and penalties under the special Act. It is idle to contend that a special law repeals the provisions of the I. P. Code because both of them deal with offences arising under both the Acts. There are two restrictions: (1) No prosecution under the special law is admissible, if it appears upon the whole frame of the special Act that it was intended to be complete in itself and to be enforced by the penalties created by it. If the Magistrate proceeds under the Penal Code, it is better to drop the charges under the Local Act. (2) A person cannot be punished under both the Penal Code and the special law for the same offence. 1952 Mad WN (Cri) 269: 1952 Mad WN 957: 65 Mad LW 1120: (1952) 2 MLJ 777: 1953 Cr LJ 309: AIR 1953 Mad 137 (137) (Prs 3, 4).

——S. 5 (1) (c) — Section does not repeal Section 409 — Penal Code (1860), S. 409—General Clauses Act (1897), S. 26).

The Prevention of Corruption Act does not expressly repeal any of the provisions of Penal Code, nor did Section 5 (1) (c), Prevention of Corruption Act, as it stood before the amendment of 1952, impliedly repeal any of the provisions of Section 409, I. P. C. AIR 1952 Punj 89, Dissented from. There is no repugnancy or inconsistency between the two enactments. The one is enacted as supplementary measure to the other, with a different and special object. The fact that the Prevention of Corruption Act provides for a different mode of procedure for trial or makes the offence differently punishable does not involve any inconsistency with the earlier enactment. The two provisions can co-exist side by side even though the one may, to some extent, overlap the other. 1956 Cr LJ 100: AIR 1956 Pepsu 1 (2, 3) (Pt A) (Prs 3, 10) (DB).

——S. 5 (1) (c) — Whether ultra vires — If denies equal protection of laws — (Constitution of India, Art. 14) — (Cr. P. Code (1898), Section 197) — (Penal Code (1860), S. 409) — (Evidence Act (1872), S. 114).

Section 5 (1) (c) of the Prevention of Corruption Act is intra vires and does not offend against Art. 14 of the Constitution. The offence referred to in Section 409, Penal Code, is essentially the same as the offence referred to in Section 5 (1) (c) of the Prevention of Corruption Act. The procedure provided under the Prevention of Corruption Act is in some respects different from the procedure according to which a person charged under Section 409, Penal Code is tried. The differences are in the main five relating to (1) mode of sanction; (2) maximum sentence which can be awarded; (3) the forum; (4) presumptions arising under Section 4 and Section 5 (3) of the Prevention of Corruption Act, and (5) competence of the accused to appear as a witness.

The Prevention of Corruption Act does not lay down which Government servant must be tried under the Act and which upon a charge under Section 409, Penal Code, according to the ordinary procedure, and the Government has been given the absolute discretion to make a decision in this respect. Therefore if any disadvantage attaches to one kind of trial, the person aggrieved may genuinely complain that he has been denied equal protection of the laws in that there is no basis for classification (and the Government has been given the discretion to choose) but would be subjected to a more disadvantageous procedure. The essence of discrimination is that of persons similarly situated; some may be subjected to a more disadvantageous treatment. If the presumptions which must be imported into the case under the provisions of Section 4 and Section 5 (3) of the Prevention of Corruption Act entail a real disadvantage then the Act is discriminatory and bad.

Examination of Section 197, of the Criminal Procedure Code and Section 6, of the Prevention of Corruption Act would show clearly that really there is no essential difference with regard to the mode of granting sanction. On this ground, therefore, the vires of S. 5 (1) (c), cannot be challenged.

In the matter of punishment also a person who is being tried under the Prevention of Corruption Act cannot have any grievance and cannot complain that he has been denied equal protection of laws by being subjected to a harsher treatment under the special law. There is a distinct advantage to the person who is being tried under the Prevention of Corruption Act, although it will appear that by reason of the provisions of Section 71, of the Penal Code a person charged under Section 409, Penal Code cannot be awarded a higher sentence than the sentence permissible under Section 5 (2) of the Prevention of Corruption Act. If the procedure in the Court of a Special Judge is to be the same as in the Court of a Magistrate, then the trial in the Court of the Special Judge would not amount to a denial of equal protection of the laws. The denial lies in the deprivation of certain rights with regard to procedure or substantive law. Therefore, in order to determine whether the provisions of Art. 14 of the Constitution have been violated, the nature of the procedure and not the nature of the forum must be considered.

In the matter of presumption, S. 114, of the Evidence Act is very wide in its terms, and when a public servant is charged with criminal misappropriation of a large sum of money and he is found to have in his possession pecuniary resources which he could not have acquired honestly, the Court may in a fit case presume that there is a nexus between the resources of the accused person and the factum of misappropriation. There are distinct advantages which an accused person enjoys under the Prevention of Corruption Act and only one disadvantage with regard to the presumption which must be drawn under Section 5 (3). Section 5 (3) is not so far reaching as to undo the effect of the other provisions that place the accused person at a distinct advantage particularly his competence to give evidence as his own witness. Weighing the advantages against a single disadvantage, the scales incline slightly in favour of advantages and it therefore cannot be said that a person tried under the Prevention of Corruption Act for an offence defined in Section 5 (1) (c) is denied equal protection of the laws. 59 Punj LR 133: 1957 Cr LJ 659: ILR (1957) Punj 618: AIR 1957 Punj 110 (112 to 116) (Prs 1, 5, 6, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 16, 17, 27, 28) (DB).

6. Dishonest and fraudulent misappropriation — Sub-section 5 (1) (c).

● ——S. 5 (1) (c) — Offence under — Ingredients — Proof and onus — Evidence Act (1 of 1872), S. 106 — Scope.

The offence under Section 5 (1) (c) of the Prevention of Corruption Act is the same as embezzlement, which in English law is constituted when the property has been received by the accused for or in the name or on account of the master or employer of the accused and it is complete when the servant fraudulently.

misappropriates that property. So the essence of the offence is that after the possession of the property the accused dishonestly or fraudulently appropriated the property entrusted to him or under his control as a public servant and deprived the owner of that property. The question is one of intention and not a matter of direct proof but giving a false account of what he has done with the goods received by him may be treated as a strong circumstance against the accused person. The elements of criminal offence of misappropriation will be established if the prosecution proves that the servant received the goods, that he was under a duty to account to his master and had not done so. If the failure to account was due to an accidental loss then the facts being within the servant's knowledge, it is for him to explain the loss. Of course the prosecution has to establish a prima facie case in the first instance, Shri Krishna Kumar v. ——S. 5 (2) — Criminal misconduct.

The prosecution case was that the accused, in his capacity as booking-clerk at Mandi, received, on or after 26th April, 1956, the sums in question, from the drivers of various transport vehicles, for deposit with the adda cashier. The accused, however, failed to deposit the sums. It was only several days after he was placed under suspension, that the missing sums were handed over by him to the adda cashier. Held, that the conduct of the accused in retaining the money unduly long, his failure to hand over the same to the cashier, when required to do so by the Regional Manager and his abrupt departure for Bilaspur without permission and without handing over charge of his records and the sums, in question were a clear pointer to his dishonesty. The accused is guilty of dishonest misappropriation, although it was only temporary, punishable under Section 5 (2) of Prevention of Corruption Act. 1959 Cri LJ 973: AIR 1959 Him Pra 14 (16, 17) (Prs 12, 14 to 17, 20).

——S. 5 (2) — Applicability — Amount withdrawn from bank by Contingent clerk for specific purpose but retained by him for 4½ months and then paid by him only in part — Offence— (Penal Code (1860), S. 409).

The fact that money entrusted to be used for a particular purpose was not used for such purpose and that there was retention for a sufficiently long time, would justify the inference that the accused did not intend to pay. Where a contingent clerk in the office of Superintendent of Police withdraws money from the bank for specific purpose of paying it to certain person but retains it for 4½ months and even then pays it to that person only in part, it can be said that the contingent clerk retained the sum with dishonest intention. He is therefore guilty under Section 5 (2) of the Prevention of Corruption Act. AIR 1934 Cal 532 and AIR 1936 Pat 350, Rel. on. 1957 Cr LJ 131 (133) (Pt B) (Prs 9, 12) (Him Pra).

——S. 5 (1) (c) — Scope — Penal Code (1860), S. 409 — Distinction.

Section 5 (1) (c), Prevention of Corruption Act, is more or less similar to Section 409, Penal Code, except with respect to the mens rea which is enlarged for the purposes of Section 5 (1) (c). For a breach of trust the act or omission of the accused should be dishonest, while under Section 5 (1) (c) it may be dishonest or fraudulent. The words 'dishonestly' and 'fraudulently' do not mean exactly the same thing. A dishonest act is not necessarily a fraudulent act. The elements which make an act fraudulent are deceit or intention to deceive and in some cases even mere secrecy. Where there is neither the intention to deceive nor secrecy, the act though dishonest is not fraudulent. 1954 Cr LJ 464: ILR (1953) Hyd 573: AIR 1954 Hyd 56 (59) (Pt D) (Pr 7) (DB).

——S. 5 (2) read with S. 5 (1) (c) — Criminal breach of trust by public servant — Proof of precise mode of conversion or misappropriation, not necessary — Penal Code (1860), S. 409.

Wrongful gain includes wrongful retention and wrongful loss includes being kept out of property as well as being wrongfully deprived of property. Therefore when a particular thing has gone into the hands of a servant, he will be guilty of misappropriating the thing in all circumstances which show malicious intent to deprive the master of it. AIR 1959 SC 1390, Ref.

To establish a charge of criminal breach of trust, the prosecution is not obliged to prove the precise mode of conversion, misappropriation or misapplication by the accused of property entrusted to him or over which he has dominion.

The principal ingredient of the offence, being dishonest misappropriation or conversion, which may not ordinarily be a matter of direct proof, entrustment of property or failure in breach of obligation to account for the property if entrusted, it proved, may, in the light of other circumstances, justifiably lead to an inference of dishonst misappropriation or conversion. 1962 Ker LT 467: 1962 Ker LJ 692.

7. Misappropriation — Evidence of Sub-section 5 (1) (c).

——S. 5 (1) (c) and (2) — Scope — Criminal misconduct by public servant by misappropriating money — Misappropriation need not be in discharge of his duty as public servant — Public servant collecting audit fees due to Government from Co-operative Societies — Failure to remit into treasury for a period — Proof of misappropriation.

Section 5 (2) is a new offence created by the Act in addition to those mentioned in Ss. 161 and 409, Indian Penal Code. The Legislature advisedly widened the scope of the offence by giving a very wide definition in Section 5 with a view to punish those who holding public offices come by money and misappropriate the same or who taking advantage of his official position obtains for himself or for any other person any valuable thing or pecuniary advantage. Criminal misconduct by committing misappropriation need not be in the discharge of his duties as a public servant. If after the money had come under his control as a public servant he fraudulently misappropriates it, the offence would be complete. AIR 1962 SC 195, Foll.

Held, on facts that the accused was guilty of criminal misconduct punishable under S. 5 (2) read with Section 5 (1) (c) of the Prevention of Corruption Act and the mere fact that he subsequently remitted the amounts into the treasury will not exonerate him. To establish a charge of criminal breach of trust, the prosecution is not obliged to prove the precise mode of conversion, misappropriation or misapplication by the accused of the amount properly entrusted to him or over which he has dominion. The principal ingredient of the offence being dishonest misappropriation or conversion which may not ordinarily be a matter of direct proof entrustment of property and failure in breach of an obligation to account for the property entrusted, if proved, may in the light of other circumstances, justifiably lead to an inference of dishonest misappropriation or conversion. 1962 Ker LJ 692: 1962 Ker LT 467: 1963 Mad LJ (Cr) 639: 1963 (1) Cr LJ 360 (362, 363) (Prs 6, 10, 11).

——S. 5 (1) (c) — Offence under — Nature and essentials of — Evidence — Direct proof neither possible nor necessary.

It is neither necessary nor possible in every case of breach of trust to prove in what precise manner the money was spent or appropriated by the accused. The question is one of intention and not a matter of direct proof; but giving a false account of what he has done with the money received by him may be treated as a strong circumstance against the accused.

The offence under the section is the same as embezzlement which in English Law is constituted when the property has been received by the accused for or in the name or on account of the master or employer of the accused and is complete when the servant fraudulently misappropriates that property. 1960 Ker LJ 1056.

——S. 5 (1) (c) — Post-master delaying entries in relevant registers regarding money received for remittance by money order — Conviction under section proper — Proper inference arising from his conduct is that he has committed misappropriation and it is for him to establish his innocence.

Where the prosecution fully establishes that the accused, a post-master on receipt of amount for remittance by money orders, did not make the relevant entries in the daily account book as required by R. 139 (4) of the Rules for Branch Post Offices and made delay of seven days, though in the meantime, the had made other entries in the account book and the accused has no satisfactory explanation to offer for the delay, the only inference that can be drawn from the conduct of the accused is that he committed temporary misappropriation of the amounts which were entrusted to him for remittance and hence his conviction under S. 5 (1) (c) must be upheld. It is well settled that it is not necessary or possible in every case to prove in what precise manner the accused person has dealt with or misappropriated the goods of his master. The question is one of intention and not a matter of direct proof. It is not the law of the country that the prosecution has to eliminate all possible defence of circumstances which may exonerate him. All that the prosecution has to do is to establish a prima facie case in the first instance. It is enough to establish facts which give rise to suspicion and then by reason of S. 106, Evidence Act, to throw the onus upon the accused to prove his innocence. ● ——S. 5 (1) (d)—Scope—Public servant causing wrongful loss to Government by benefiting third party — Section 5 (1) (d) applies.

As the Act is a socially useful measure conceived in public interest, it should be liberally construed so as to bring about the desired object, i.e., to prevent corruption among public servants and to prevent harassment of the honest among them. It will not be correct to say that S. 5 (1) (d) would only take in cases of direct benefit obtained by a public servant for himself or for any other person from a third party in the manner described therein and does not cover a case of a wrongful loss caused to the Government by abuse of his power. Taking the phraseology used in the clause the case of a public servant causing wrongful loss to the Government by benefiting a third party squarely falls within it. The Act was brought in to purify public administration. When the Legislature used comprehensive terminology in S. 5 (1) (d) to achieve the said purpose, it would be appropriate not to limit the content by construction when particularly the spirit of the Statute is in accord with the words used therein.

The juxtaposition of the word 'otherwise' with the words "corrupt or illegal means", and the dishonesty implicit in the word "abuse" indicate the necessity for a dishonest intention on the part of the public servant to bring him within the meaning of the clause. 1956 SCJ 432; (1956) 2 MLJ (SC) 4; (1956) 2 An WR (SC) 4; AIR 1956 SC 476; (1962) 2 SCJ 538; (1962) 2 MLJ (SC) 164; (1962) 2 An WR (SC) 164; 1962 MLJ (Crl) 645; AIR 1962 SC 195; (1872) 4 AC 184, Rel. on. ● ——S. 5 (1) (d) — Misconduct by public servant need not be in connection with his own official duty.

The offence under S. 5 is wider than the offence of bribery as defined in S. 161, I. P. Code. In order to bring the charge home to an accused person under Cl. (d) of S. 5 (1), it is not necessary that the public servant in question, while misconducting himself, should have done so in the discharge of his duty. It is not necessary to constitute the offence under Cl. (d) of the section that the public servant must do something in connection with his own duty and thereby obtain any valuable thing or pecuniary advantage. It is equally wrong to say that if a public servant were to take money from a third person, by corrupt or illegal means or otherwise abusing his official position, in order to corrupt some other public servant, without there being any question of his misconducting himself in the discharge of his own duty, he has not committed an offence under S. 5 (1) (d). It is also erroneous to hold that the essence of an offence under S. 5 (2), read with S. 5 (1) (d), is that the public servant should do something in the discharge of his own duty and thereby obtain a valuable thing or pecuniary advantage. ● ——S. 5 (1) (d) and (2) — Government teacher taking money for procuring job in Railway Running Shed — Offence.

Mere receiving of money by public servant even if it be by corrupt means is not sufficient to make out an offence under S. 5 (2) read with S. 5 (1) (d). The words "by otherwise abusing his position" read along with the words "in the discharge of his duty" appearing in Section 5 (1) (d) make it quite clear that an offence under that section requires that the public servant should misconduct himself in the discharge of his own duty. It is no part of the duty of a Government teacher to make appointments in a Railway Running Shed. There would, therefore, be no question of his committing misconduct in the discharge of his duty when he takes money for procuring a job for a person in the Running Shed. ● ——S. 5 (1) (a) and (d) — Scope — Charge and trial for habitually receiving bribe (Section 5 (1) (a)) — Conviction for receiving one bribe (S. 5 (1) (d)) — Sanction obtained under S. 6 for offence under S. 5 (1) (d) — Legality of conviction.

It was contended in this case that as the sanction under S. 6 was only for receiving Rs. 50 as illegal gratification from P and therefore, an offence under S. 5 (1) (d), the prosecution, the charge and conviction should have been under that provision, but as the accused was tried under S. 5 (1) (a) for the charge of being a habitual receiver of bribes and the sanction was only for one single act of receiving illegal gratification, the trial was wholly void as it was a trial by Court without jurisdiction:

Held, that the prosecution for offence under S. 5 (1) (d) was not barred because the proceedings were not without previous sanction which was validly given for the offence of receiving a bribe; but the offence of habitually receiving illegal gratification could not be taken cognizance of, and the prosecution and trial for that offence was void for want of sanction which was a condition precedent for the Courts taking cognizance of the offence alleged to be committed. The want of sanction for the offence of habitually accepting bribes, therefore, did not make the taking of cognizance of the offence of taking a bribe of Rs. 50 void nor the trial for that offence illegal and the Court, a Court without jurisdiction. Held, further that the accused had not been prejudiced in the conduct of his defence. ● ——S. 5 (1) (d) — Offence under Bribery — Distinction — 'Obtains' — Meaning of — Acceptance on voluntary offer—Offence — (Penal Code (1860), Ss. 161, 162, 165).

The word 'obtains' in S. 5 (1) (d) does not eliminate the idea of acceptance of what is given or offered to be given, though it connotes also an element of effort on the part of the receiver. One may accept money that is offered, or solicit payment of a bribe, or extort the bribe by threat or coercion; in each case he obtains a pecuniary advantage by abusing his position as a public servant.

If a man obtains a pecuniary advantage by the abuse of his position, he will be guilty under Clause (d) of Sec. 5 (1). Sections 161, 162 and 163 of the Penal Code, refer to a motive or reward for doing or forbearing to do something, showing favour or disfavour to any person, or for inducing such conduct by the exercise of personal influence. It is not necessary for an offence under Cl. (d) to prove all this. It is enough if by abusing his position as a public servant a man obtains for himself any pecuniary advantage, entirely irrespective of motive or reward for showing favour or disfavour. No doubt, to a certain extent the ingredients of the two offences are common. But to go further and contend that the offence as defined in Cl. (d) does not come within the meaning of bribery is to place too narrow a construction on the sub-clause. Ram Krishna v. ——Ss. 5, 6 — Applicability — Complaint disclosing offence requiring sanction — Trial for offence not requiring sanction — Validity.

Where the facts mentioned in the complaint give rise to two offences one of which required either a complaint by the Court concerned or a sanction by the prescribed authority, the prosecution cannot be started under the section which did not require any complaint by the Court or sanction necessary in law for taking cognizance of the case and thus evade the provisions of sanction. 10. Sub-section 5 (3) — General.

●——S. 5 (3) — Presumption and proof under — Liberal construction in favour of accused.

Sub-section (3) of S. 5, provides an additional mode of proving an offence punishable under sub-section (2) for which any accused person is being tried. This additional mode is by proving the extent of the pecuniary resources or property in the possession of the accused or any other person on his behalf and thereafter showing that this is disproportionate to his known sources of income and that the accused person cannot satisfactorily account for such possession. If these facts are proved, the section makes it obligatory on the Courts to presume that the accused person is guilty of criminal misconduct in the discharge of his official duty, unless the contrary; i.e., that he was not so guilty is proved by the accused. The section goes on to say that the conviction for an offence of criminal misconduct shall not be invalid by reason only that it is based solely on such presumption.

This is a deliberate departure from the ordinary principle of criminal jurisprudence, under which the burden of proving the guilt of the accused in criminal proceedings lies all the way on the prosecution. Under the provision of this sub-section, the burden on the prosetution to prove the guilt of the accused must be held to be discharged if certain facts as mentioned therein are proved; and then the burden shifts to the accused and the accused has to prove that in spite of the assets being disproportionate to his known sources of income, he is not guilty of the offence. There can be no doubt that the language of such a special provision must be strictly construed. If the words are capable of two constructions, one of which is more favourable to the accused than the other, the Court will be justified in accepting the one which is more favourable to the accused. There can be no justification however, for adding any words to make provision of law less stringent than the legislature has made it. Sajjan Singh v. ——S. 5 (3) — Scope — If creates separate offence — Only a rule of evidence.

Section 5 (3) does not create any offence. It does not speak of any specific individual act of a person or his attempt at any specific act, but refers to a state of his pecuniary position as contrasted with his known earnings, which might be a cumulative result of acts done by him, which might fall under Section 5 (1). In enacting sub-section (3) of Section 5, the Legislature did not intend to create an offence, separate from the one created under sub-section (1), but intended to lay down a rule that if a person's pecuniary resources, as compared to his known or legitimate sources of income reached a point which was disproportionate to the said income, it shall be presumed unless the person concerned accounted satisfactorily for it, that he had acquired those pecuniary resources by the commission of an act or series of acts under S. 5 (1).

Possession of pecuniary resources disproportionate to the known sources of a person's income is not one particular act of a person, but is a consequence arising out of his habitual acceptance of bribes, in other words, a consequence of habitual commission of offences by him under Section 5 (1). Acquisition of such a pecuniary position is not and cannot be, a separate or distinct offence from an offence under Section 5 (1). In short, Section 5 (3) does not create a separate offence of criminal misconduct independently of sub-section (1), but is only a rule of evidence. ——S. 5 (1) (3) — Scope of sub-section (3) of S. 5 — Presumption under sub-s. (3) of S. 5, when arises.

In enacting sub-section (3) of Section 5, the Legislature did not intend to create an offence, separate from the one created under sub-section (1) but intended to lay down a rule that if a person's pecuniary resources, as compared to his known or legitimate sources of income, reached a point which was disproportionate to the said income it shall be presumed, unless the person concerned accounted satisfactorily for it, that he had acquired those pecuniary resources by the commission of an offence mentioned in Section 5 (1) of the Act. The sub-section lays down a rule of evidence enabling the Court to raise the presumption of guilt in certain circumstances — rule which is a complete departure from the established principle of criminal jurisprudence that the burden always lies on the prosecution to prove all the ingredients of the offence charged, and that the burden never shifts on to the accused to disprove the charges framed against him. Under sub-section (3) of Section 5 the Court has, therefore, to see as to what are the pecuniary resources or property, which are in the possession of the accused or of any other person on his behalf; secondly, what are his known sources of income; and thirdly, are the resources disproportionate to the known sources of income and, if they are disproportionate to the known sources of income, the Court is bound to raise the presumption unless the accused satisfactorily accounts for such possession. ——S. 5 (1), (3) — Scope of sub-section (3) of Section 5 — Presumption under sub-section (3) of S. 5, when arises.

In enacting sub-section (3) of S. 5, the Legislature did not intend to create an offence, separate from the one created under sub-section (1) but intended to lay down a rule that if a person's pecuniary resources, as compared to his known or legitimate sources of income, reached a point which was disproportionate to the said income, it shall be presumed, unless the person concerned accounted satisfactorily for it, that he had acquired those pecuniary resources by the commission of an offence mentioned in S. 5 (1) of the Act. The sub-section lays down a rule of evidence enabling the court to raise the presumption of guilt in certain circumstances — rule which is a complete departure from the established principle of criminal jurisprudence that the burden always lies on the prosecution to prove all the ingredients of the offence charged, and that the burden never shifts on to the accused to disprove the charges framed against him. Under sub-section (3) of S. 5 the Court has, therefore, to see as to what are the pecuniary resources or property, which are in the possession of the accused or of any other person on his behalf, secondly, what are his known sources of income, and thirdly, are the resources disproportionate to the known sources of income and, if they are disproportionate to the known sources of income, the court is bound to raise the presumption unless the accused satisfactorily accounts for such possession. ——S. 5 — Criminal misconduct by habitually obtaining illegal gratification — Failure of prosecution to prove affirmatively truth of allegation of bribes on earlier occasions — Effect.

The failure of the prosecution to prove affirmatively the truth of the allegations in regard to the bribes on earlier occasions, does not justify a finding that they are probably false. Further, even in a case where it is found that the prosecution had failed to prove the particular facts and circumstances of criminal misconduct, the presumption under sub-section (3) cannot be avoided, if the prosecution has satisfied the requirements of that sub-section. 1960 Cr LJ 934: 38 Mys LJ 265: 1962 Mad LJ (Cri) 222: ILR (1960) Mys 26: AIR 1960 Mys 111 (134) (Pt N) (Pr 16) (DB).

——S. 5 (3) — Sub-section virtually creates distinct head of offence of criminal misconduct — (Criminal P. C. (1898), Section 221 (3)).

It is partly true that sub-section (3) of S. 5 does not create an offence by itself but is only in the nature of a rule of evidence as to what constitutes criminal misconduct; but in view of the provisions that on proof of unexplained possession of resources or property disproportionate to known sources of income, a presumption of misconduct is to be made against the accused and a conviction can be based solely on that presumption, it is virtually the creation of a distinct head of the offence of criminal misconduct.

A charge, therefore, which specifies "being in possession of property disproportionate to your known resources" as an offence by itself is not open to the objection that no such offence has been created by the Act. 1952 Cri LJ 1533: ILR (1952) Cut 109: AIR 1952 Orissa 289 (293) (Pt A) (Prs 7, 8) (DB).

——S. 5 (3) — Presumption of criminal misconduct — When to be drawn — Rebuttal of presumption — Burden of proof.

Under Section 5 (3) once the disproportionate possession is made out, the accused has two opportunities, viz., one that of satisfactorily accounting for this disproportion and the other of rebutting the presumption of criminal misconduct arising therefrom, if the explanation is found unsatisfactory. The presumption against the accused under this sub-section is not to be drawn until the explanation of the accused for the disproportionate possession and the evidence bearing on it is considered and found unsatisfactory. At that stage of the consideration of case, the normal principle will apply, viz., that the accused is entitled to the benefit of doubt and that where reasonable explanation is offered, which is acceptable and raises a doubt that the prosecution has not discharged the burden, though the accused may not have proved the explanation. But where the Court feels justified in drawing the presumption against the accused after a due consideration of the explanation, then the burden is on the accused to displace the presumption of criminal misconduct, always remembering that the burden of proof on the accused in such cases is less than that on the prosecution and that it is enough for the accused to make out the truth of his defence in all reasonable probability though not clearly beyond doubt. ——S. 5 (3) — Charge — Frame and contents of — Basis of conviction.

Section 5 (3), Prevention of Corruption Act, does not create an offence by itself but is only in the nature of a rule of evidence as to what constitutes criminal misconduct. But in view of the provisions that on proof of unexplained possession of resources or property disproportionate to known sources of income a presumption is to be made against the accused and a conviction can be based solely on that presumption, it is virtually the creation of a distinct head of the offence of criminal misconduct.

In a case where trial of the accused is only for the single offence of criminal misconduct under Section 5 (3) of the Act and not for specific offences under Section 161, Penal Code, limitations under Section 234, Cr. P. Code are not applicable. The policy of Section 234 is to prevent undue embarrassment and confusion to the accused in the trial by evidence being given of a large number of items spread over a long period. If in any particular case the Court finds that the prosecution attempts to give evidence of quite a large number of instances covering over a long period in proof of an alleged habitual misconduct, the Court has the power to require the prosecution to limit itself to a reasonable number of instances extending over a reasonable period in order to prevent abuse of process and harassment to the accused and in order also to prevent any prejudice arising in the mind of the Court by mere allegation of numerous items. ILR (1952) Cut 109: 1952 Cr LJ 1533: AIR 1952 Orissa 289 (306) (Pt J) (Prs 63, 64) (DB).

——S. 5 (3) — Presumption under, which can be drawn.

Before drawing a presumption as contemplated by sub-section (3) of Section 5, it must be shown that the accused is a public servant, that he is alleged to have committed criminal misconduct within the meaning of sub-section (1) of Section 5 and that he is being tried for an offence punishable under sub-section (2) of the section. The presumption under Section 5 (3) can be drawn only in a trial of an offence punishable under sub-section (2) of the Act and not otherwise. A Court must first find that the public servant concerned is being tried for an offence punishable under sub-section (2) and then in appropriate circumstances proceed to draw a presumption. Observations to the contrary in AIR 1952 Orissa 289, Dissented from. Section 5 (3) cannot be held to create a separate offence and therefore it is wrong to say that without putting the accused on trial for having committed criminal misconduct within the meaning of Section 5 (1) (a), (b), (c) or (d) a presumption as permitted under Section 5 (3) of the Act can be drawn.

Where the charge framed read as a whole showed that the accused had been put on trial, not because he had committed criminal misconduct within the meaning of Section 5 (1) (a), (b), (c) or (d), but because he was found to be in possession of property which was disproportionate to his known sources of income it cannot be said that he is charged with criminal misconduct. It is necessary to charge the accused for having committed criminal misconduct within the meaning of any of the four clauses of Section 5 (1), and then if he is found to be in possession of property which is disproportionate to his known sources of income, a presumption under Section 5 (3) of the Act is permissible. Without there being a charge, it is not possible to say in which of the four circumstances, as mentioned in Section 5 (1), (a) to (d), the accused was being tried for having committed criminal misconduct. It is not permissible to assume that he is being tried under one or all the four conditions laid down in S. 5 (1), (a) to (d) without further saying so. ——S. 5 (2) and (3) — Court when bound to presume accused guilty under S. 5 (2).

"Sub-section (3) of Section 5 sets out a new rule of evidence. Therefore all that the prosecution has to do is to show that the accused or some person, on his behalf, is in possession of pecuniary resources or property disproportionate to his known sources of income and for which the accused cannot satisfactorily account. Once that is established then the court has to presume, unless the contrary is proved, that the accused is guilty of the new offence created by Section 5 namely criminal misconduct in the discharge of his official duty". AIR 1954 SC 359, Rel. on.

Hence in a case where Section 5 (3) of the Prevention of Corruption Act 1947, is not attracted the Court is not bound to presume that the appellant was guilty under Section 5 (2) of the Act. 1957 BLJR 275.

——S. 5 (3) — Presumption under — Scope of.

The rule of law laid down in Section 5 (3) is a departure from the normal law of the land that no person can be convicted on a mere presumption of his having committed an offence. The normal rule of law is that an accused is presumed to be innocent until his guilt is established, and the onus of establishing the guilt is always on the prosecution. Under sub-section (3) however, a presumption of criminal misconduct may be drawn if the accused person or any person on his behalf is in possession of pecuniary resources or property disproportionate to his known sources of income for which resources the accused person cannot satisfactorily account and unless the contrary is proved the presumption is that the accused person is guilty of criminal misconduct in the discharge of his official duty and his conviction shall not be invalid by reason only that it is based solely on such presumption. No doubt evidence can be adduced under the sub-section in respect of a specific charge under any of the clauses of Section 5 (1), but in order that an accused can be tried on that specific charge a sanction has to be given at the outset. The rule in sub-section (3) has nothing to do with sanction. 6 Sau LR 398: 1954 Cr LJ 1559: AIR 1954 Sau 132 (135) (Pt B) (Pr 7) (DB).

Regard being had to the context in which the words occur, and also to the fact that it is the Court which is required to presume that he is guilty, there is no doubt that S. 5 (3) requires that the accused should satisfactorily account for his possession of disproportionate resources not to some one else but to the Court before which he is being tried. (1954) 1 MLJ 643: 1954 Mad WN 139: 1955 Cri LJ 691: AIR 1955 Mad 214 (218) (Pt C) (Pr 18).

——S. 5 (3) — Applicability — Presumption — Conditions for raising — Duty of prosecution.

In the case of a whole-time Government servant, the known source of his income is generally the salary; by rules governing the conduct of Government servants and by conditions of service, full-time Government servant is generally prevented from following any other occupation or profession.

Before the presumption under sub-section (3) of S. 5 could arise, it has to be seen whether the assets acquired by the accused after he entered Government service and in his possession on the date of offence, were disproportionate to his known sources of income.

If the prosecution has failed to disclose all the sources of income of an accused person, it is always open to him to prove those other sources of income which have not been taken into account or brought into evidence by the prosecution. 1960 Cr LJ 934: 38 Mys LJ 265: 1962 Mad LJ (Cri) 222: ILR (1960) Mys 26: AIR 1960 Mys 111 (132) (Pt K) (Pr 14) (DB).

● ——S. 5 — Scope — If repeals either Ss. 161 and 162 or 405, Penal Code — Prosecution under S. 409 — Sanction if offends provisions of Article 14 of the Constitution — Section 6 — (Penal Code (1860), Ss. 161, 162, 405, 409) — (General Clauses Act (1897), S. 6) — (Criminal P. C. (1898), S. 197).

The Prevention of Corruption Act being a temporary Act, the legislature would not have intended in the normal course of things that a temporary statute like that should supersede an enactment of antiquity, viz. the Penal Code even if the matter covered the same field. Under S. 6 (a) of the General Clauses Act if by efflux of time the period of a temporary statute which had repealed an statute earlier expires, there would not be a revival of the earlier one by the expiry of the temporary statute.

Section 405, Penal Code and S. 5 (1) (c) of Prevention of Corruption Act are not identical in essence, import and content and this conclusion gathers much force from the Amending Act of 1952 which added sub-section (4) to S. 5. The words used in sub-section (4) "any other law" made the position quite clear and explicit. "Other law" does not mean identical law. An offence under S. 405 of the I. P. Code is separate and distinct from the one under S. 5 (1) (c). There are three points of difference between S. 405 of the Indian Penal Code and S. 5 (1) (c). The dishonest misappropriation contemplated in Section 405 of the I. P. Code is different; whereas that under S. 5 (1) (c) is either dishonest misappropriation or fraudulent misappropriation. In S. 405 of the I. P. Code the words used are "in violation of any direction of law prescribing the mode in which such trust is to be discharged, or of any legal contract express or implied". There are no such expressions in S. 5 (1) (c). The word 'dominion' is not in S. 5 (1) (c). The word 'fraudulently" is not present in S. 405 and in S. 5 (1) (c) the gist of the offence can also be made out if the offender allows any person so to do, i.e., allows any person to derogate from the law as contemplated in the earlier portion of the section. In any event, allowing other persons so to do does not find a place in S. 405 of the I. P. Code. Therefore, the offence created under S. 5 (1) (c) of the Prevention of Corruption Act is distinct and separate from the one under S. 405 of the I. P. Code and, therefore, there can be no question of S. 5 (1) (c) repealing S. 405, I. P. Code. AIR 1955 Cal 236. Approved. ILR (1954) Punj 35; AIR 1952 Punj 89. Overruled.

Sections 5 (1) (a) and 5 (1) (b) are aggravated forms of Ss. 161 and 162 of the Indian Penal Code and the intention cannot be to abrogate the earlier offence by the creation of the new offence. These two offences can co-exist and the one will not be considered as overlapping the other.

As S. 405, Penal Code is not repealed by Section 5 (1) (c), Prevention of Corruption Act the application of S. 409 which is an aggravated form of offence to a public servant is not barred by Art. 14 of the Constitution. No sanction is necessary to prosecute the public servant as he does not normally act in his capacity as a public servant when committing criminal breach of trust View of Mulla, J. to contrary overruled. Section 5 (1) (c), Prevention of Corruption Act, 1947, has not the effect of repealing S. 409 of the Indian Penal Code in its application to public servant for committing criminal breach of trust under S. 409, Penal Code. Sections 6 and 7 of the Criminal Law Amendment Act (1952) have got no application to such a case, and it is not necessary that the case should have been sent to Special Judge for trial under the special procedure laid down under the Criminal Law Amendment Act of 1952.

Having regard to the amendment of sub-section (4) of S. 5 of the Prevention of Corruption Act, 1947, by the Prevention of Corruption Act (Second Amendment) Act, No. LIX of 1952, the provisions of S. 5 of the principal Act shall be in addition to, and not in derogation of, any other law for the time being in force and nothing contained in S. 5 of the principal Act shall exempt any public servant from any proceeding which might, apart from S. 5 itself, be instituted against him. ——S. 5 (4) — Option to proceed under S. 5 (1) (c), Prevention of Corruption Act or S. 408, Penal Code.

Sub-section (4) should necessarily be confined to the offence committed by a public servant qua public servant. The necessary condition for the application of sub-section (4) of S. 5 is that the liability to be proceeded against for any offence shall be on him as a public servant and not in his personal capacity. In this view sub-section (4) of S. 5 does not confer any option on the prosecution to proceed against a public servant under S. 5 (1) (c) or under S. 408, Penal Code. 1956 Andhra WR 73: 1956 Andhra LT 169: 1957 Cri LJ 1078: AIR 1957 Andh Pra 663 (667) (Pt A) (Pr 13) (DB).

The provisions of S. 5, Prevention of Corruption Act, 1947 do not derogate from any other provision of law. They do not derogate from the provisions of S. 409, Penal Code, or the Criminal P. The special procedure set up under the Prevention of Corruption Act does not entitle a public servant to insist that the only proceeding which could be instituted against him must be under the special Act and not under the Criminal P. ——S. 5 (1) (c) and (4) — Prosecution of public servant — Option — Section 5 (1) (c) or Penal Code (1860), S. 409.

In face of the amendment made in S. 5 of the Prevention of Corruption Act, 1947, by the substitution of a new sub-section (4) in place of the old one by the Amending Act LIX of 1952, it cannot be argued that the operation of that Act II, in the case of a public servant, excludes the operation of S. 409 of Penal Code. The amendment makes that the prosecution can elect to charge a public servant either under S. 409 of the Penal Code or under S. 5 (1) (c) of the Prevention of Corruption Act, 1947. Hence, the trial of a public servant before a special Judge under S. 409 of the Penal Code is held valid. The trap witnesses who are members of the raiding party may be treated as partisan witnesses but as regards partisan witnesses there is no rule of law that their evidence cannot be accepted in the absence of independent corroboration in material particulars. There cannot be such a rule of law when even the evidence of an accomplice is not by law required to be corroborated. It is only as a rule of prudence that the evidence of an accomplice is required to be corroborated. The object of corroboration is to produce mental satisfaction in the mind of the Court that the accomplice is a witness of truth. The rulings go to show that in a trial by jury if the Judge draws the attention of the jury to this rule of prudence in respect of the evidence of an accomplice and cautions it and the jury thereafter accepts the evidence of the accomplice as sufficient, a conviction based on such a verdict cannot be said to be wrong. Therefore, the true position is that a decoy need not be corroborated but the weight to be attached to his evidence will depend on his character, his standing, his position, the circumstances under which he became a decoy and how he has fared in the witness box. The considerations in the light of which his evidence is to be tested will naturally vary from case to case. AIR 1964 SC 1762; AIR 1958 SC 500, discussed and relied on. ——S. 5 (1) (d) — Sentence — Trap laid for detection of offence — If justifies lenient sentence — (Penal Code (1860), S. 161).

It cannot be laid down as an absolute rule that the laying of traps must be prohibited on the ground that by so doing an invitation is held out for the commission of offences. The detection of crime may become difficult if intending offenders, especially in cases of corruption, are not furnished opportunities for display of their inclinations and activities. Where matters go further and the police authorities themselves supply the money to be given as a bribe, severe condemnation of the method is merited. But whatever the ethics of the question might be, there is no warrant for the view that the offences committed in the course of traps are less grave and call only for lenient or nominal sentences. ● ——S. 5-A — Object in enacting S. 5-A.

Section 5-A of the Prevention of Corruption Act, 1947 is enacted for preventing harassment to a Government servant and with this object in view investigation, except with the previous permission of a Magistrate, is not permitted to be made by an officer below the rank of a Deputy Superintendent of Police. The said statutory safeguards must be strictly complied with, for they were conceived in public interest and were provided as a guarantee against frivolous and vexatious prosecution. 1959 MLJ (Cr) 571: 1959 SCJ 843: (1959) 2 An WR (SC) 105: (1959) 2 MLJ (SC) 105: AIR 1959 SC 707, Reiterated. ● ——S. 5-A (as amended by Act 59 of 1952) — Sections 3, Proviso and 5 (4) prior to amendment) — If mandatory — Effect of violation.

Section 5 (4) and proviso to Section 3 of the Prevention of Corruption Act as it stood prior to its amendment by Act 59 of 1952 and the corresponding Section 5-A as inserted by Amending Act 59 of 1952 are mandatory and not directory and the investigation conducted in violation thereof bears the stamp of illegality.

According to the scheme of the Cr. P. Code, investigation is a normal preliminary to an accused being put up for trial for a cognizable offence.

It is in the light of the scheme of the Code that the scope of a provision like Section 5 (4) of the Act has to be judged. Having regard therefore to the peremptory language of sub-sec. (4) of Section 5 of the Act as well as to the policy apparently underlying it, it is reasonably clear that the said provision must be taken to be mandatory and not merely directory.

There is, however, no reason to think that the policy comprehends within its scope only some and not all the steps involved in the process of investigation. It is to be borne in mind that the Act creates two new rules of evidence one under Section 4 and the other under Section 5 (3), of an exceptional nature and contrary to the accepted canons of criminal jurisprudence.

What sub-section (2) of Section 156, Cr. P. Code cures is investigation by an officer not empowered under that section, i.e., with reference to sub-sections (1) and (3) thereof. Sub-sec. (1) of Section 156 is a provision empowering an officer in charge of a police station to investigate a cognizable case without the order of a Magistrate and delimiting his power to the investigation of such cases within a certain local jurisdiction. It is the violation of this provision that is cured under sub-section (2). Obviously sub-section (2) of Section 156 cannot cure the violation of any other specific statutory provision prohibiting investigation by an officer of a lower rank than a Deputy Superintendent of Police unless specifically authorised. But apart from the implication of the language of Section 156 (2), it is not permissible to read the emphatic negative language of sub-section (4) of Section 5 of the Act or of the proviso to Section 3 of the Act, as being merely in the nature of an amendment of or a proviso to sub-section (1) of Section 156, Cr. P. Code. H. N. Rishbud v. State of Delhi, 1955 Mad WN 232: (1955) 1 SCR 1150: 1955 Cr LJ 526: ILR (1955) Punj 135: 1955 Andhra WR (SC) 173: 1955 SCA 258: 57 Punj LR 235: 1955 SCJ 283: (1955) 1 MLJ (SC) 173: AIR 1955 SC 196 (200, 202, 203) (Pt A) (Prs 5, 6, 7, 8).

——Ss. 5-A and 6 — Sanction for investigation — Validity — Demand and acceptance on different dates — Sanction obtained after demand — Investigation — Validity — Subsequent trial — Legality — Criminal P. C. (1898), Sections 156 (2), 190, 520 and 537 — Penal Code (1860), Section 161.

A sanction for investigation for an offence under Section 161, Penal Code issued immediately after a demand has been made does not become an anticipatory sanction even if the payment in pursuance of such demand is made on different date. One reason is that although under Section 161, Penal Code a demand as by itself is made an offence, where that demand has been effectively carried out by compelling payment and acceptance of money the whole series of transactions forms one offence, demand being the beginning and acceptance the end. The words of Section 161, Penal Code and Section 5-A, Prevention of Corruption Act are wide enough to include investigation into an 'intended offence or offence imminently likely to take place'.

Even assuming that such sanction is anticipatory there being nothing in the Prevention of Corruption Act which makes Section 156 (2) and Sections 529 and 537 of the Criminal P. C. inapplicable, the subsequent entertainment of the complaint and the ultimate trial of the accused cannot be affected unless the accused is able to show that prejudice has been caused to him because of such illegal investigation. 4. Compliance with the section.

——Ss. 5-A, 5 (1) (d), 5 (2) and 6 (1) — Charge under Section 5 (2) read with Section 5 (1) (d) and Section 161, Penal Code — Investigation made by Circle Inspector of Special Police Establishment — Legality — Officer who laid the trap — Power to investigate into offence — Circle Inspector of Special Police Establishment — If Station Officer — Police Establishment Act (25 of 1946), Section 3 (2) — Circle Inspector is Station Officer.

The Circle Inspector who investigated the matter belongs to the Special Police Establishment which is governed by the Police Establishment Act (25 of 1946). In such a case an Officer not below the rank of Inspector of Police of the Delhi Special Police Establishment authorised by the Inspector General of Police of that Establishment can investigate into these offences as provided for under Section 5-A of the Prevention of Corruption Act. The Notification published in the Gazette made the necessary authorization under Section 3 of the said Act. The investigation by the Officer is governed by the Proviso to Section 5-A of the Corruption Act. The only condition in such a case of investigation is that the investigating officer should have sent a report of the investigation to a Magistrate of the First Class. The laying of a trap or the apprehension of a person while committing an offence cannot preclude or prevent the same Officer from investigating the offence. From Section 3 (2) of the Police Establishment Act, it can be found that the Circle Inspector of the Special Police Establishment is also to be taken as a Station Officer for certain purposes. (1959) 2 An WR 317: 1959 MLJ (Cri) 754.

●——S. 5-A — Scope — Criminal P. C. (1898), Sections 154, 157, 162 — Investigation by Circle Inspector and first information by Deputy Superintendent of Police — Legality.

It cannot be said that in view of the mandatory provisions of Section 5-A of the Prevention of Corruption Act insisting on the investigation of the case by an officer not below the rank of a Deputy Superintendent of Police, any enquiry that is made by a Circle Inspector of Police does not have the legal effect of an investigation and as such the taking of signed statements during such enquiry by him is not hit by Section 162, Criminal P. C., which only prohibits the taking of such statements during investigations. The Circle Inspector acts in violation of Section 162 of the Criminal P. C. when he takes down the statement of the witnesses and gets their signatures thereto.

Delay in investigation of cognizable cases and that of eight months is a serious neglect of duty which invariably leads to failure of justice. AIR 1955 SC 196, Relied on. State of Kerala v. ——S. 5-A (as amended in 1952) — Investigation by Assistant Superintendent of Police — Legality.

Rank of Assistant Superintendent of Police as a Police Officer is just below that of a District Superintendent of Police, and definitely above the Inspector of Police. His designation as Assistant Superintendent does not and will not by itself make out that he is an officer inferior in rank to a Deputy Superintendent. It appears that an officer holding the rank of Deputy Superintendent of Police is designated in some jurisdictions as Assistant Superintendent. In the absence of any evidence to support, the contention that the rank of the Assistant Superintendent of Police is inferior to that of a Deputy Superintendent, it cannot be said that the investigation by him was in violation of Section 5-A. 1954 Cr LJ 1604: 1954 Ker LT 455: ILR (1954) TC 856: AIR 1954 Trav-Co 492 (494) (Pt B) (Pr 5) (DB).

See Criminal P. C. (1898), Section 156. 1964 (1) Cr. LJ 140: AIR 1964 SC 221.

●——S. 5-A — Provision is mandatory — Investigation in violation of the provision is illegal — Trial is however not vitiated in absence of miscarriage of justice.

Originally the entire investigation was done by sub-inspector of police and thereafter the case under Sections 409/406 of the Penal Code was instituted against the accused, and other persons. That case was however later withdrawn and it was thereafter that sanction was granted for the prosecution of the accused under Section 5 (2) of the Prevention of Corruption Act and investigation was made as required by Section 5-A. But this investigation merely consisted of this that duly authorised investigating officer went through the papers of the earlier investigation made by the sub-inspector and decided to file four prosecutions on the basis of the earlier investigation:

Held, that though the letter of S. 5-A of the Act was complied with, its spirit was not, for in reality there was no investigation by the officer authorised under that section, and the real investigation was by a sub-inspector of police who was never authorised. Section 5-A is mandatory and not directory and an investigation conducted in violation thereof is illegal. Even if however there was irregularity in the investigation and Section 5-A was not complied with in substance, the trials could not be held to be illegal unless it was shown that miscarriage of justice had been caused on account of the illegal investigation. There was no miscarriage of justice in these cases at all due to the irregular investigation. As a matter of fact on the alternative case put forward by the accused the substance of the prosecution case was practically admitted by him and he merely pleaded certain mitigating circumstances. No objection was taken at the trial when it began and it was allowed to come to an end. AIR 1955 SC 196, Rel. on; AIR 1959 SC 707, Distinguished. Munnalal v. ●——S. 5-A, Proviso — Non-compliance with — Investigation is illegal — Illegality however does not affect result of trial in absence of miscarriage of justice.

Where the two conditions laid down in the proviso to Section 5-A have not been complied with by the Inspector of Police conducting the investigation, the investigation is illegal, but the illegality committed in the course of the investigation does not affect the competence and jurisdiction of the Court for trial and where cognizance of the case has in fact been taken and the case has proceeded to termination, the invalidity of the preceding investigation does not vitiate the result unless miscarriage of justice has been caused thereby. No doubt sub-section (4) of Section 5 opens with the words "notwithstanding anything contained in the Code of Criminal Procedure" but that exception is designed to overcome the provisions of Section 156 (1), Criminal P. C. which permits all cognizable offences to be investigated by an officer-in-charge of a police station. The words however do not go any further because Act 2 of 1947 does not lay down any rules governing investigation and the rules contained in the Code of Criminal Procedure continue to govern investigations even in cases under the Act.

Thus the investigation by an officer below the rank of Deputy Superintendent of Police, however undesirable, is a mere irregularity and not an illegality vitiating the investigation and the complaint based upon it: 1951 Cr LJ 197, Rel. on. 1951 All WR (HC) 493: 1951 All Cri R 120: 1952 Cri LJ 292: AIR 1952 All 122 (124) (Pt C) (Pr 21).

● ——S. 5-A — Police Officer below rank of D. S. P. investigating offence under Section 120-B read with Section 420, Penal Code and Section 5 (2), Prevention of Corruption Act without complying with Section 5-A — This does not vitiate entire proceedings.

When a Police Officer below the rank of a Deputy Superintendent of Police investigates an offence under Section 120-B, read with Section 420, Penal Code and Section 5 (2), Prevention of Corruption Act of 1947 without complying with the provisions of Section 5 (4) (now Section 5-A) of the latter Act such failure would not vitiate the entire proceedings in Court based on the charge-sheet submitted by the Investigating Officer. Hence, the case of 'AIR 1953 Cal 226' in so far as it decided that the entire proceedings in Court would be vitiated in such circumstances, was not rightly decided. It does not, however, follow that the invalidity of the investigation is to be completely ignored by the Court during trial.

When the breach of such a mandatory provision is brought to the knowledge of the Court at a sufficiently early stage, the Court while not declining cognizance, will have to take the necessary steps to get the illegality cured and the defect rectified, by ordering such reinvestigation as the circumstances of an individual case may call for.

The stage contemplated is a stage when question of taking or declining cognizance is still relevant. AIR 1955 SC 196, Foll.; AIR 1953 Cal 226, Overruled. Debi Prasanna v. The State, 1956 Cr LJ 396: ILR (1957) 2 Cal 993: AIR 1956 Cal 56 (56, 57) (Prs 1 to 6) (FB).

——S. 5-A — Investigation by Inspector of Police — If illegal — Duty of Magistrates before granting permission.

Section 5-A of the Prevention of Corruption Act is a mandatory provision and any investigation conducted in violation thereof bears the stamp of illegality. It is no doubt true that in the decisions it is also laid down that contravention of Section 5-A is curable under Section 537 of Criminal Procedure Code if no prejudice is caused to the accused. Before granting permission under Section 5-A the Magistrates should decide two points, viz. (1) that the facts placed before them justified an investigation into them and (2) that there are good reasons, such as administrative exigencies to permit officers lower in rank than those designated in Section 5-A to investigate into the complaints made. 1962 Mad LJ (Cr) 479: 1962 (1) Cri LJ 55 (56) (Pt A) (Pr 5) (Mys) (DB).

Non-compliance with the provisions of Section 5-A, Prevention of Corruption Act, in the matter of investigation does not bar the trial based on the report of a Police-Officer not empowered by Section 5-A to investigate. Such non-compliance does not vitiate the proceedings based on the report of a Police Officer not empowered by the section to investigate. Non-compliance with the provisions of the section in the matter of investigation is curable within Section 537, Criminal P. The provisions of Section 5 (4) are mandatory but they are in the nature of a direction to the Police and though the Police Officer conducting unauthorised investigation may expose himself to other penalties for contravening it, the jurisdiction of the Court to take cognizance of the offence and try it cannot be questioned.

The legality of a trial depends upon whether the Court taking cognizance of the offence had jurisdiction to do so and has nothing to do with investigation which is antecedent to the trial and does not form part of it. Under the Prevention of Corruption Act the jurisdiction to take cognizance of an offence is conferred on the Court by the sanction to prosecute the accused granted under Section 6 (1). If the sanction is a proper and valid sanction the Court is invested with jurisdiction to take cognizance of the case and the fact that the investigation preceding the sanction was irregular or was conducted by an officer not properly authorised to investigate the offence will not affect the jurisdiction of the Court to take cognizance of the offence and after taking cognizance to try the accused. 6. Permission of Magistrate for investigations.

●——S. 5-A (as amended by Act 59 of 1952) — Investigation by officer other than designated one — Permission by Magistrate — Essentials — Duty of prosecution.

In a case where an officer, other than the designated officer, seeks to make an investigation he should get the order of a Magistrate empowering him to do so before he proceeds to investigate and it is desirable that the order giving the permission should ordinarily, on the face of it, disclose the reasons for giving the permission. For one reason or other, if the said salutary practice is not adopted in a particular case, it is the duty of the prosecution to establish, if that fact is denied, that the Magistrate in fact has taken into consideration relevant circumstances before granting the permission to a subordinate police officer to investigate the case. ●——S. 5 (4) (prior to amendment by Act 59 of 1952) — Contravention of — Effect.

During the course of an investigation started on 2-5-1949, by an Inspector of Police in respect of offences punishable under Section 420, Penal Code and Section 6, Essential Supplies (Temporary) Powers Act committed by a certain person who was not a public servant, it was found that some persons who were public servants were liable to be prosecuted under Section 5 (2), Prevention of Corruption Act. The Inspector then made an application to the Magistrate for sanction for investigation under Section 5 (4) of the Act against such public servants. The sanction was given on 20-3-1951 and a charge-sheet was filed on 15-11-1951.

Held, that in the circumstances of the case the continuance of such portion of the investigation as remained, as against the public servants concerned by the same officer after obtaining the permission of the Magistrate was reasonable and legitimate and, therefore, there was no such defect in the investigation as to call for interference. ——S. 5-A — Order entrusting investigation to Police Officer of lower rank must show reasons — Duty of prosecution to establish that Magistrate considered relevant circumstances — Breach of Section 5-A — Order of acquittal is not proper.

Before giving permission under Section 5-A, the Magistrate should satisfy himself that there are good and sufficient reasons for authorising an officer of a lower rank to conduct investigation. The reasons should be disclosed on the face of the order. Where the order does not expressly show that the Magistrate felt satisfied that there was sufficient reason to entrust an officer subordinate in rank to the Deputy Superintendent with the investigation it is open to the prosecution to establish that the Magistrate in fact took into consideration relevant circumstances before granting permission to the Inspector of Police to investigate the offence. AIR 1959 SC 707 and AIR 1955 SC 196, Rel. on. Where the Magistrate giving permission is cited in the charge-sheet as a witness it would be open to the Special Judge to consider, with reference to the evidence let in, whether the permission had been, in fact granted by the Magistrate after properly taking into consideration the relevant facts and circumstances. Even if ultimately he found that the order had not been granted properly and that there was a breach of the provisions of Section 5-A, he would have to consider the nature and extent of the violation and pass appropriate orders for re-investigation. But, in any case, it would not be open to the Special Judge to discharge the accused under Section 251-A (2), Criminal P. C. on the ground of breach of the provision of Section 5-A regarding investigation by appropriate police officer. When a Magistrate is approached for granting permission he is expected to satisfy himself that there are good and sufficient reasons for authorising an officer of a lower rank to conduct the investigation. He must also be satisfied that there is sufficient reason, owing to the exigencies of administrative convenience, to entrust a subordinate officer with the investigation. ——S. 5-A — Investigation — According of sanction under, to police officer of lower rank, not routine matter — Duty of Magistrate — Reason behind provision — Section mandatory — Criminal P. C. (1898), Section 195 — Sanction.

When a Magistrate is requested to accord sanction under Section 5-A, he is expected to satisfy himself from all the available materials that there are good and sufficient reasons for authorising an officer of lower rank to conduct the investigation. The granting of permission is not to be treated as a mere matter of routine but it is an exercise of his judicial discretion. Under the Criminal P. C. most of the offences against public servants are non-cognizable; but so far as offences under Section 5 of the Prevention of Corruption Act, the legislature thought fit to remove this ban and hence it was thought fit to provide a safeguard by requiring that the investigation should be conducted only by a police officer of a designated high rank.

Having regard to the peremptory language of the section and the policy underlying it, it is clear that the provisions of the section are mandatory. 1960 Ker LJ 1056.

——S. 5-A — Additional District Magistrate participating in trap — Laying of trap is no part of investigation of the offence of taking illegal gratification — He is still competent to pass orders under Section 5-A authorising investigation by officer below rank of Deputy Superintendent of police.

Where the accused is being prosecuted for actually taking illegal gratification the first information could be given and the investigation commenced only after illegal gratification was actually taken. The laying of the trap was no part of the investigation of this offence. Where immediately upon recovery of Rs. 50 from the accused, the Additional District Magistrate ordered the Circle Inspector of Police to investigate the case, the case may be said to have been investigated from the start by a properly authorised police officer. Hence it is not correct to say that the Additional District Magistrate, who had participated in laying the trap, was incompetent to pass an order under Section 5-A. 1960 Jab LJ 141: 1960 MPC 192: 1960 MPLJ 163.

Where after investigating a part of the case the Sub-Inspector of police presented an application, unaccompanied by any papers relating to the case, before the City Magistrate to accord him permission to investigate the offence under Section 161, I. P. C., as required by Section 5-A of the Prevention of Corruption Act, wherein he stated that he was deputed to investigate the case, and the City Magistrate without applying his mind, merely wrote on the application, "permission granted".

Held: The permission having been granted mechanically and the case having been conducted partly before the so-called permission and partly after, there was an illegality. AIR 1955 SC 196, Relied on. But the illegality committed in the course of investigation did not affect the competency and the jurisdiction of the Court. Such a defect being an irregularity is curable under Section 537 of the Criminal Procedure Code. AIR 1955 SC 196 and AIR 1944 PC 73 and AIR 1950 PC 26, Relied on. But the question of curability under Section 537, Cr. P. C. arises where the trial has proceeded to conclusion. But where the trial has not been completed, different considerations would prevail.

(Without quashing the proceedings, in which the point of jurisdiction was raised as a preliminary point, it was ordered that the matter should be reinvestigated by competent authority. ——S. 5-A — Investigation under — Duty of Magistrate according permission to officer below rank of Deputy Superintendent.

Magistrate before granting permission under Section 5-A should decide two points, i.e., (1) that the facts placed before them justified an investigation into them; and (2) that there are good reasons, such as administrative exigencies, to permit officers lower in rank than those designated in Section 5-A to investigate into the complaints made. AIR 1959 SC 707, Foll. AIR 1954 SC 322, Rel. on. 1962 Mad LJ (Cr) 479: 1962 (1) Cr LJ 55 (56) (Pt B) (Pr 5) (Mys) (DB).

——S. 5-A — Investigation by officer below designated rank — Sanction by magistrate — Discretion not to be surrendered to the police officer.

An order of the magistrate which empowers a police officer below the designated rank is invalid where it does not indicate that the magistrate was satisfied that the investigation of the case could not be taken by an officer of the designated rank and that it was necessary in the interest of administrative convenience or otherwise that he should empower such other officer to investigate into the matter.

The Legislature when it removed the protection from public servants in so far as it related to the investigation of the offences comprised in the Act by making them cognisable provided a substituted safeguard from undue harassment by requiring that the investigation is to be conducted normally by a police officer of a designated rank. In the case of an officer of assured rank and statuts the legislature was prepared to believe them implicitly but it prescribes an additional guarantee in the case of officers below that rank, namely, the previous order of a Presidency magistrate or a magistrate of the first class as the case may be so that the magistrate's status can give assurance to the bona fides of the investigation. AIR 1959 SC 707, Rel. on.

The point before the Magistrate when he is considering the question of sanction under Section 5-A is not whether the grounds urged in the petition disclosed an offence punishable under Section 181 of the Indian Penal Code and Sec. 5 (2) of the Prevention of Corruption Act, and whether it is necessary to investigate into the matter, but whether it is necessary in the circumstances of the case to empower an officer below the designated rank to carry on the investigation.

When a Magistrate is approached for granting permission to lay a trap or to investigate a case under the Act, he is expected to satisfy himself that there are good and sufficient reasons for authorising an officer of a rank lower than the designated officer to conduct the investigation. A Magistrate should not surrender his discretion to a Police Officer but must exercise it having regard to the relevant material made available to him at that stage. He cannot mechanically accord sanction without applying his mind to the facts of the case and satisfying himself that it is necessary in the circumstances of the case that an officer below the rank of a Deputy Superintendent of Police should be permitted to investigate the case.

It is, therefore, necessary that when a police officer below the rank of a Deputy Superintendent of police approaches a Magistrate for permission to investigate into the allegations against a public servant he should give all the necessary facts in his application to enable the Magistrate to apply his mind to them and accord his sanction. The order passed by the Magistrate should also contain the necessary facts which induced him to permit a police officer below the rank of a Deputy Superintendent of Police to investigate the case. In other words, the order passed by the Magistrate permitting the Officers should be a speaking order. (1963) 1 Mys LJ 395.

●——S. 6 — Applicability — Essentials — Accused ceasing to be public servant at time of trial — Effect — Interpretation of Statutes — Principle — Use of precedents under Section 197, Cr. P. Code — (Interpretation of Statutes).

In construing the provisions of a statute, it is essential for a Court, in the first instance, to give effect to the natural meaning of the words used therein, if those words are clear enough. It is only in the case of any ambiguity that a Court is entitled to ascertain the intention of the legislature by construing the provisions of the statute as a whole and taking into consideration other matters and the circumstances which led to the enactment of the statute. Section 6 must be construed with reference to the words used therein independent of any construction which may have been placed by the decisions on the words used in Section 197, Cr. P. Code.

If a general power to take cognizance of an offence is vested in a Court, any prohibition to the exercise of that power, by any provision of law, must be confined to the terms of the prohibition. In enacting a law prohibiting the taking of cognizance of an offence by a Court, unless certain conditions were complied with, the legislature does not purport to condone the offence. Thus, in giving effect to the ordinary meaning of the words used in Section 6, the conclusion is inevitable that at the time a Court is asked to take cognizance not only the offence must have been committed by a public servant but the person accused is still a public servant removable from his office by a competent authority before the provisions of Section 6 can apply.

Where, therefore, the accused have ceased to be public servants at the time the Court takes cognizance of the offences alleged to have been committed by them as public servants the provisions of Section 6 do not apply and the prosecution against them is not vitiated by the lack of a previous sanction by a competent authority. ——S. 6 — Sanction — Necessity.

Previous sanction from the competent authority is a condition precedent to confer jurisdiction on any particular Court to try a person accused of an offence under Section 161 or Section 165, I. P. C. or under sub-section (2) of Section 5 of the Prevention of Corruption Act where the offence has been committed by a public servant. 1957 All LJ 211: 1957 All WR (HC) 248 (1): (1957) 2 Lab LJ 185.

——S. 6 — Applicability to ex-public servants.

An offender cannot invoke the protection of Section 6 unless two conditions are fulfilled: (1) He was a public servant when the offence charged against him was committed, (2) On the date when he is prosecuted there is some authority who could remove him from his office. Section 6 affords protection only to those public servants who were in office both on the date of the commission of the offence charged and the date when a Court is asked to take cognizance. Section 6 is enacted only for the protection of public servants and not ex-public servants. ●——S. 6 — Applicability — Prosecution under Section 409, Penal Code — Previous sanction.

Per majority, Mulla, J., Contra :— It is a well recognised principle that a statute should be interpreted according to the plain meaning of the words and should not be given a wider meaning than what the words would actually denote.

By omitting to mention Section 409 it is plain that the Legislature intended that the provision for sanction as laid down in Section 6, Prevention of Corruption Act did not apply to an offence punishable under Section 409, I. P. Code. It is not competent for a Court to extend the meaning so as to include Section 409 which is not there. Thus the rule about sanction as laid down in Section 6, Prevention of Corruption Act has no application when a public servant is prosecuted under the general law for an offence under Section 409, I. P. Code. AIR 1952 All 35, Approved; AIR 1954 Bom 549 (FB), Rel. on. Om Prakash v. State, 1955 ALJ 224: 1955 Cr LJ 754: AIR 1955 All 275 (278, 279, 285, 286) (Pt F) (Prs 11, 12, 15, 44, 46) (FB).

——S. 6 — Sanction to prosecute — Retrospective operation — Interpretation of Statutes.

The rule requiring sanction before a Court can take cognizance of an offence is a rule of procedure which applies retrospectively to all complaints, whatever be the date of the commission of the offence to which they relate. The procedure to be followed is the procedure that prevails on the date of the complaint. If at the date of the complaint the law makes it incumbent upon a Court to take cognizance only of such offences for which there is a previous sanction, then unless the sanction to prosecute is produced, no Court will take cognizance of the offence, even though the offence may have been committed before the Act requiring sanction came into force. 1950 All LJ 383: 1950 All WR 544: 1950 All Cri Cas 201: 51 Cri LJ 1323: AIR 1950 All 494 (495) (Pt A) (Pr 5).

——S. 6 — "Public servant" — Meaning of.

The words "public servant" in Section 6 (1) means a person who is in service at the time when the Court is called upon to take cognizance of the offence. Section 6 (1) has consequently no application to the case of the public servant who is no longer in service. 55 Bom LR 719: 1954 Cr LJ 284: AIR 1954 Bom 109 (112) (Pt A) (Pr 10) (DB).

——S. 6 — Construction — Marginal note — Effect of — (Interpretation of Statutes — Marginal notes).

The marginal note to Section 6 is perfectly general, and it throws no light whatsoever upon the meaning of the section, when taken by itself. It cannot therfore be taken into consideration in the interpretation of the language of the statute. 55 Bom LR 719: 1954 Cr LJ 284: AIR 1954 Bom 109 (112) (Pt B) (Pr 11) (DB).

——S. 6 — Applicability — Prosecution under Section 409, Penal Code — Sanction — (General Clauses Act (1897), S. 26).

The Act creates a new offence altogether, an offence termed criminal misconduct in the discharge of official duty and although Clause (c) of Section 5 (1) overlaps to some extent the definition of criminal breach of trust it is one form of criminal misconduct as defined by the section. The main item on which the Act introduces a departure from the ordinary criminal law consists, in the first place in creating certain presumption under Section 4 (1) and a presumption again under Section 5 (3). The presumption under Section 4 (1) is only in connection with an offence punishable under Section 161 or Sec. 165, Penal Code, but the presumption under Section 5 (3) is in respect of all kinds of offences which come within the definition of criminal misconduct in the discharge of official duty. Another important departure from the ordinary criminal law is the provision of Section 7 whereby an accused person, if he chooses to examine himself as a witness for the defence may do so.

For embarking on a prosecution under the Act where the presumptions have to be invoked, the previous sanction of the authority concerned has to be taken; but as Section 6 stands it would be only when there is prosecution under the Act and not otherwise.

Under Section 26 of the General Clauses Act the choice lies with the prosecutor as to whether the offender should be prosecuted and punished under one or other of the two enactments under both of which the act or omission complained of might fall. This choice of the prosecutor is always there and if the authorities in any particular case decide on a prosecution under the Prevention of Corruption Act then and then only the question of sanction would arise and not otherwise. Hence it cannot be held that although the accused was prosecuted under Section 409, Penal Code, it is really an offence covered by Section 5 (1) (c) of the Prevention of Corruption Act and is punishable under Section 5 (2) of that Act and as the accused was prosecuted without any sanction under Section 6 the prosecution is bad. 1955 Cr LJ 784: ILR (1956) 2 Cal 625: AIR 1955 Cal 236 (239) (Pt B) (Prs 7, 8) (DB).

——S. 6 — Sanction — Validity — Public servant to claim protection under Section 6 must be public servant both at time when he committed offence and when cognizance of offence is taken against him.

Before sanction under Section 6 becomes necessary, it must not only be that the offence was committed by a person when he was a public servant but that such accused person should still be a public servant at the time the Court took cognizance of the offence alleged to have been committed by him, and unless both these conditions are fulfilled, the provisions of Sec. 6 do not come into play at all. If the accused ceases to be a public servant when cognizance of the offence is taken against him, he cannot be heard to say that he enjoys any immunity from prosecution without sanction. 2. Essentials of sanction.

——S. 6 — Sanction — Essentials — Form of sanction — Routine order of passing on charge-sheet to Court — If sufficient compliance with Section 6 — Criminal P. C. (1898), S. 197.

It is true that the Act does not prescribe any particular form of sanction; but sanction to prosecute a particular person for an offence implies, first, a full knowledge of the facts upon which it is sought to prosecute him and, secondly, a deliberate decision of the sanctioning authority that he may be prosecuted. These two things are necessary to be proved before it can be said that a particular order amounts to a sanction for prosecution. Furthermore, it is necessary that the sanction should be given after all the facts have been collected against an accused so that the sanctioning authority has before it the materials upon which the prosecution is to be launched.

A request by the authority whose sanction was necessary for leave to investigate the case cannot be said to be a sanction to prosecute. Nor does the routine order passed in the usual course of business that the charge sheet be submitted to the Court, amount to a 'previous sanction' as contemplated by Section 6. Such sanction must be something more deliberate and formal than a mere routine order of passing on a charge-sheet to the Court. 1950 All LJ 383: 1950 All WR 544: 1950 All Cri Cas 201: 51 Cri LJ 1323: AIR 1950 All 494 (495, 496) (Pt B) (Prs 6, 7).

——S. 6 — Sanction — Validity — What is essential for a valid sanction for prosecution under Section 161, Penal Code and Section 5 (2) of the Act 2 of 1947 is that the nexus between the sanction and the fact constituting the offence charged must be clear from the terms of the sanction itself or must be established by extraneous evidence — The Court is not concerned with the question whether the matters placed before the authority were adequate or not or whether the sanction was accorded after a real consideration of the facts. See Prevention of Corruption Act (1947), Section 5. AIR 1955 NUC (Madh Bha) 852.

——Ss. 6 (1), 5 (2) — Penal Code, Sec. 161 — Cognizance under Section 161, Indian Penal Code or Section 5 (2) of Prevention of Corruption Act against a person can be taken only on previous sanction by authority competent to remove such person from office — The sanction itself or other evidence should clearly show that sanctioning authority applied its mind and gave sanction after consideration of all circumstances — Lack of proper sanction vitiates the trial. AIR 1958 SC 124 and 73 IA 30; AIR 1948 PC 82, Rel. on. 1963 MPLJ (Notes) 255.

——S. 6 — Requisites of valid sanction — Evidence — Onus of proof — (Criminal P. C. (1898), Section 197).

A valid sanction is regarded as a condition precedent to a valid prosecution under Section 6 of the Prevention of Corruption Act. The burden of proving that the requisite sanction has been obtained rests on the prosecution and such burden includes proof that the sanctioning authority had given the sanction in reference to the facts on which the prosecution was to be based. All these facts must appear on the face of the sanction or might be proved by extraneous evidence. It is not necessary that sanction should contain particulars of the offence or essential evidence on which the accused is to be prosecuted. 1957 Jab LJ 786: 1958 Cri LJ 41: AIR 1958 Madh Pra 2 (4, 5) (Pt B) (Prs 19, 34).

——S. 6 — Sanction — Form and contents of.

All that the order of sanction must show is that all relevant materials were placed before the authority sanctioning the prosecution and that the authority considered those materials and the order sanctioning prosecution resulted therefrom. The sanction need not set out the reasons for the sanction. The object of this sanction is nothing more than to ensure the discouragement of frivolous, doubtful and impolitic prosecutions (Sanction held proper). 1953 Mad WN 291: (1953) 1 MLJ 636: 1953 Cr LJ 1429: AIR 1953 Mad 785 (786) (Pt B) (Pr 5).

——S. 6 — Sanction — Requirement of law.

The law relating to requirements of sanction is that correlation between the sanction and the offence to be taken cognizance of in, respect of essential facts of the offence, has to be made out. It is not necessary that the particulars of the offence or the essentials of the evidence relating thereto should be set out in the sanction or should be proved to have been placed before the sanctioning authority. It is sufficient that the sanction sets out the offence and the essential factual ingredients thereof in such manner as to indicate that taking cognizance of the charge which is before the Court is authorised. AIR 1948 PC 82, Considered. Case law discussed.

Where, therefore, the District Magistrate wrote a letter to the Chief Secretary to the Government of Orissa wherein he set out that according to his information the accused in the course of his visit to rice mills as Inspector of Factories had been collecting heavy sums as illegal gratification from the managers or the proprietors of the mills under threat or mischief to the mill owners and that a heavy sum of money had been seized from his possession but the various instances of bribery were not referred to in the letter and the sanction to prosecute the accused was granted on the basis of that letter.

Held, that the sanction was perfectly valid. 1952 Cri LJ 1533: ILR (1952) Cut 109: AIR 1952 Orissa 289 (306) (Pt J) (Prs 63, 64) (DB).

——S. 6 — Validity of sanction — Consideration of facts of case by sanctioning authority.

Even where the facts of the case have clearly not been referred to on the face of the sanction for prosecution given under Section 6, yet if the prosecution proves by extraneous evidence that all the facts necessary to enable the sanctioning authority to decide whether sanction should be accorded or not were before him, then the sanction fulfils all that the law requires. 1954 BLJR 577: 1955 Cr LJ 1089: AIR 1955 Pat 317 (319) (Pt A) (Pr 8).

——S. 6 — Essentials of sanction — Necessity to place essential facts before sanctioning authority.

In a charge of criminal misconduct by a public servant in the discharge of his duty by habitual acceptance of illegal gratification, the instances of bribe-taking would no doubt constitute evidence of the offence and it may not be necessary to bring to the notice of the sanctioning authority particular instance of bribe-taking; but, it cannot be said that the same principle applies where the accused is charged with accepting illegal gratification from a specified person on a specified occasion. In such a case, the factual constituent of the offence is the instance itself and, therefore, the necessity of placing essential facts constituting the offence for which the accused is to be prosecuted cannot be dispensed with. ——S. 6 (c) — Authority competent to remove from office — Assam General Clauses Act (2 of 1915), Section 18.

The power to appoint Upper Division Clerks in permanent vacancies in the existing divisions vests in the Executive Engineer of the Division concerned and not in the Chief Engineer though the latter exercises supervision in the matter of filling up these vacancies by requiring his approval to the appointment. The Executive Engineer being the authority competent to appoint, he is also the proper authority to remove the clerk from his office and, is therefore, the proper authority to sanction prosecution under Section 6 (c). ('50) ILR (1950) 2 Assam 344: AIR 1951 Assam 42 (42) (Prs 2, 3) (DB).

——S. 6 — Sanction — 'Competent to remove him from his office' — Meaning of — (Constitution of India, Article 311) — (Criminal P. C. (1898), Section 537) — (Police Act (1861), Section 7).

The words "competent to remove him from his office" would clearly show that the authority contemplated therein is the one competent to remove that public servant from his office and not any public servant holding the office held by the accused person. Section 6, Prevention of Corruption Act cannot override the provisions of the Constitution and consequently, sub-section (2) thereof can be made applicable to only such cases where it cannot be ascertained with reasonable certainty as to who had actually appointed the accused person, or where by change in rules, the authority who had actually appointed him was no longer competent to remove him from his office.

The Inspector-General of Police has the statutory power under Section 7, Police Act (1861) to dismiss or remove any police officer of the subordinate ranks. But this power would be indirectly taken away if that particular officer was appointed by an authority superior to the Inspector-General of Police. This power of the Inspector-General is subject to the provisions of Article 311 of the Constitution and to such rules as the State Government may, from time to time, make under this Act. Where the accused was originally appointed as a Police constable in the Police Force of Uttar Pradesh and was in due course promoted as a Head Constable and for a certain period officiated as a Police Sub-Inspector prior to his being sent on deputation to the State of Bhopal for appointment as a Police Sub-Inspector and after he had worked for a few years, he was absorbed in the cadre of Sub-Inspectors of Bhopal State with effect from 1st April, 1952, the competent authority of Uttar Pradesh would be the authority who had made his appointment but after his absorption in the cadre of Police Sub-Inspectors of Bhopal State, he would be deemed to have been appointed by the person competent to make such an appointment and who had, in fact, appointed him as such. Therefore, the authority competent to appoint him or who had actually appointed him will have to be determined from the date of his absorption and from the orders whereunder he was absorbed in the services of the Bhopal State as a Police Sub-Inspector. Thus any order passed prior to first April, 1952, can be disregarded in determining the authority who had in fact, appointed the accused.

The accused was absorbed in the Bhopal Police under G. O. 1239, dated 28th January, 1954, though the order was to take effect from 1st April, 1952. In these circumstances only the Government of Bhopal, that is, the Chief Commissioner, was competent to appoint the accused as a Police Sub-Inspector. When he was so appointed by the Chief Commissioner the authority competent to remove him from his office would, by virtue of Article 311 of the Constitution, be not one subordinate to the Chief Commissioner. Consequently the sanction for prosecution as required under Section 6, Prevention of Corruption Act must be by the Chief Commissioner and not by an authority subordinate to him. The sanction of the Chief Secretary could be of no help to the prosecution. The Chief Secretary was subordinate to the Chief Commissioner and consequently the sanction of the former cannot be deemed to be the sanction of the Chief Commissioner.

As there was nothing on the record to show, that the Chief Commissioner had given his sanction for the criminal prosecution of the accused of the offences of which he had been convicted and as no legal sanction had been given, the Special Judge had no jurisdiction to take cognizance of the case. The trial was thus ab initio invalid and was liable to be quashed. 1956 Madh BLJ (Bhopal) 65: 1965 Cr LJ 975: AIR 1956 Bhopal 36 (38, 39, 40) (Pt B) (Prs 4, 6, 10, 11, 12).

——S. 6 — Sanction — Contents of sanction — Contents must relate to specific offence — (Criminal P. C. (1898), Section 537).

It is quite necessary that the sanction should relate the facts constituting the offence and for which the person is to be prosecuted, and this it must do in respect of all the offences for which he is to be prosecuted.

Where the sanction under Section 6 related to the specific allegation in respect of the illegal gratification of Rs. 5,700 and it was in respect this sum that the Chief Secretary had sanctioned the prosecution of the accused for offence under Section 161, Penal Code and Section 5 (2), Prevention of Corruption Act, apart from Section 120-B, Penal Code, the sanction, by no stretch of reasoning can be extended to the facts constituting another distinct offence in relation to another sum, of attempt to receive the amount as illegal gratification even though it was an act which was in the nature of a step in the process of the bribe taking. If the accused is to be prosecuted in respect of the offence in relation to the other sum then evidently sanction for the same is essential. Similarly the offence of habitual bribe taking falling under Section 5 (1) (a) of the Prevention of Corruption Act too is a distinct than the former one and in respect of this offence too sanction is absolutely necessary. Thus the sanction does not cover the offence in respect of the other sum nor the offence of habitual bribe taking falling under Section 5 (1) (a) of the Prevention of Corruption Act, and that being so, the Court has no jurisdiction to take cognizance of these offences.

The illegality cannot be cured under Section 537, Criminal P. C.

The whole trial which is held by the Special Judge without a jury would be void if prejudice is caused to the accused in respect of offences not covered by the sanction.

Held, that grave prejudice had been caused to the accused in this case by the joinder of the two charges not covered by the sanction and the whole trial was, therefore, vitiated and became void altogether. 1954 Cr LJ 1559: 6 Sau LR 398: AIR 1954 Sau 132 (135, 136) (Pt A) (Prs 7, 8, 10) (DB).

——S. 6 — Scope of — Sanction to prosecute — Facts necessary before the authority — Sanction accorded for prosecution under Section 161, Penal Code — Conviction on prosecution under Section 5 (2) — Legality.

B was tried and convicted of the offence under Section 5 (1) and sentenced under Section 5 (2) on a sanction accorded by the District Magistrate, who was appraised of the material particulars of the case for prosecution under Section 161, Penal Code by the police challan submitted to him for the purpose. In the appeal against it the contention was that the sanction was invalid for the reasons; (1) that it did not disclose the facts that would have enabled the District Magistrate to properly grant the sanction; and (2) the sanction for prosecution under Section 161, Penal Code, could not support the prosecution under Section 5 of the Act.

Held: The law does not lay down what minimum facts are to be laid before the sanctioning authority. Sanction is intended for the protection of the public servant in the larger interests of the State. The discretion to grant sanction under Section 6 of the Act is solely vested in the authority and it is absolute. He is the judge, if the facts are sufficient and his exercise of discretion is purely subjective and cannot be questioned in a Court of law. The Court is concerned with the only matter if sanction is accorded by the proper authority.

The conviction and sentence for a major offence can be altered to one under a minor offence under Section 238, Criminal P. C., only in a case where the trial for the major offence was valid in law. For want of sanction to prosecute under Section 5 of the Act (a separate offence) the trial in the case is not valid and the conviction cannot, therefore, be altered into one for the minor offence under Section 161, Penal Code. 1952 ALJ 541: 1952 AWR (HC) 474: 1952 All Cri Cas 118: 1953 Cri LJ 192: AIR 1953 All 37 (41) (Pt C) (Prs 15, 17).

——S. 6 — Sanction granted on basis of material illegally collected — Fresh investigation ordered — Effect — Fresh sanction after re-investigation not necessary — Criminal P. C. (1898), S. 197.

A sanction granted under Section 6 on the basis of invalid investigation is not illegal. The sanctioning authority can proceed on any material, which, according to him, is sufficient or trustworthy. He is not concerned to find out even the truth or otherwise of the facts disclosed to him. All that is necessary for the sanctioning authority to do is to apply his mind to the facts as disclosed to him. The grant of sanction is not a judicial act. It is purely an executive act: ILR 27 Mad 54, Rel. on.

A sanction already accorded under Section 6 does not lapse by reason of the fact that a fresh investigation has taken place. The sanction that was already granted remains valid and there is no need of any fresh sanction after re-investigation. Even if fresh material is assumed to have been collected in the course of fresh investigation, it would not affect the sanction accorded earlier. ——S. 6 — Sanction — Duty of sanctioning authority.

It is essential that persons charged with the responsible duty of granting sanction, which is a duty of deciding whether or not the credit and reputation of another citizen should be put in peril by means of a criminal prosecution, should bring to the discharge of their duty a sense of responsibility and the industry required to examine the relevant materials. The duty of granting a proper sanction can hardly be imagined to have been properly discharged by merely putting one's signature on a ready-made sanction presented by the police. 1955 Cr LJ 1169: AIR 1955 Cal 430 (431) (Pt A) (Pr 7) (DB).

——S. 6 — Sanction — Grant of — Enquiry as to truth of facts alleged, if necessary.

Where one officer holding two offices of the District Magistrate and the Collector in charge of the District, acts as a Collector in according the sanction to prosecute required under Section 6 it does not matter that he describes himself as the District Magistrate provided his action is of an officer acting as Collector.

Where there is no reason to suppose that the officer did not read the charge sheet which contained all the material particulars of the case when he accorded the sanction, the sanction is not vitiated on the ground that he has not applied his mind to the case. ——S. 6 — Valid sanction — Meaning of — Relevant facts not appearing on face of sanction — Duty of prosecution.

A valid sanction means sanction given after a consideration of all relevant facts. Those facts may appear on the face of the sanction itself, and where they do so appear on the face of the sanction itself, the task of the prosecution is easy. Where they do not appear on the face of the sanction, the prosecution has the liberty of proving such facts by other evidence, but it is not liberty alone. It is also a duty, because unless the prosecution proves by reference to other evidence that the sanctioning authority had in fact applied his mind to the relevant facts, a proper sanction cannot be made out and it cannot be proved that the foundation of the prosecution had been well and truly laid. 1955 Cr LJ 1169: AIR 1955 Cal 430 (432) (Pt B) (Pr 8) (DB).

——S. 6 — Scope — Sanction — Defect in form held did not vitiate sanction — (Constitution of India, Article 77) — (Criminal P. C. (1898), Section 197).

The document containing the contents of a sanction, required under Section 6, Prevention of Corruption Act, (1947), to prosecute an accused an employee of the Central Government, was not expressed to be made in the name of the President though it was mentioned at the foot that it was made by the order of Central Government. On behalf of the prosecution a witness, an Assistant, Ministry of Home Affairs, Police Section, was examined. He stated that the document bore the signature of the Deputy Secretary, Ministry of Home Affairs and that he was authorised to issue sanction in question on behalf of the Government (Central).

Held, that the statement of this witness who had requisite means of knowledge was enough under the circumstances to remove any doubt created by the use of a form though compliance with the provisions of the Prevention of Corruption Act was not in strict conformity with Article 77 (1) of the Constitution and that the departure did not vitiate the order. Where it is alleged that there is a material difference between the facts represented to the sanctioning authority and those sought to be proved at the trial the crucial question to be considered in such a case is, is the departure such as might reasonably be taken to affect the judgment of the sanctioning authority on the question of sanction with regard to the matter placed before it? If the variations are not so substantial as might reasonably be taken to have affected the judgment of the sanctioning authority, then the order of sanction is not vitiated. Where the facts alleged against a Government servant, the nature of the offence committed by him and also the date on which it was so committed, are clear from the sanction given under Section 6 of the Prevention of Corruption Act, there is sufficient material from which it can be inferred that the authority which granted sanction did not act mechanically but considered all matters and only then accorded its sanction. ——S. 6 — Previous sanction for prosecution — Essentials of sanction — Its purpose.

In respect of a valid sanction for the prosecution of an accused for offence under the Prevention of Corruption Act, 1947, the following principles can be deduced from the decisions, namely, (1) the sanction to prosecute is an important matter. A valid sanction is a condition precedent to the valid prosecution of an accused; (2) the provision of sanction is a most salutary safeguard. The sanctioning authority is placed somewhat in the position of a sentinel at the door of criminal Courts in order that no irresponsible or malicious prosecution can pass the portals of the Court of justice; (3) to constitute a valid sanction it must be established that the facts constituting an offence were placed before the sanctioning authority and that the sanctioning authority applied its mind before giving consent; (4) the facts constituting the offence should either appear in the order sanctioning the prosecution or they should be proved by the prosecution by extraneous evidence during the course of trial; and (5) the question of validity or the sufficiency of the sanction may be raised by the accused at any stage before the final decision. 1964 Raj W 478: ILR (1964) 14 Raj 1108.

——S. 6 — Sanction — Validity.

The sanction to prosecute the accused under Section 161, Penal Code, did not state the facts which constituted the offence nor did the prosecution offer any extraneous evidence to show that the facts on which the opponent had been prosecuted were placed before the sanctioning authority.

Held, that there was no valid sanction for prosecuting the accused. AIR 1948 PC 82, Foll. 1953 Cr LJ 1268: AIR 1953 Sau 139 (140) (Prs 5 to 8) (DB).

8. Form of sanction.

● ——S. 6 (1) — Object of sanction — Form of sanction — (Cr. P. Code (1898), S. 197).

The object of the provision for sanction is that the authority giving the sanction should be able to consider for itself its evidence before it comes to a conclusion that the prosecution in the circumstances be sanctioned or forbidden. It should be clear from the form of the sanction that the sanctioning authority considered the evidence before it and after a consideration of all the circumstances of the case sanctioned the prosecution, and therefore unless the matter can be proved by other evidence, in the sanction itself the facts should be referred to indicate that the sanctioning authority had applied its mind to the facts and circumstances of the case. ● ——S. 6 — Essentials of sanction.

It is not necessary for the sanction under the Prevention of Corruption Act to be in any particular form, or in writing or for it to set out the facts in respect of which it is given. The desirability of such a course is obvious because when the facts are not set out in the sanction proof has to be given aliunde that sanction was given in respect of the facts constituting the offence charged but an omission to do so is not fatal so long as the facts can be, and are, proved in some other way. Therefore, in accordance with the common sense and the requirements of justice, all that the order of sanction must show is that all the relevant materials were placed before the sanctioning authority and the authority considered those materials and the order sanctioning the prosecution resulted therefrom. The sanction order need not set out the full facts or the reasons why sanction was accorded. The object of sanction is nothing more than to ensure the discouragement of frivolous, doubtful and impolitic prosecutions. It should be clear from the order that the sanctioning authority considered the materials before it and after a consideration of all the circumstances of the case, sanctioned the prosecution. ——S. 6 — Facts not referred to on face of sanction — Sanction is not rendered invalid.

Section 6, Prevention of Corruption Act, does not require the sanction to be in any particular form, or that it should be in writing. However desirable it may be that the facts should be referred to on the face of the sanction, the mere lack of it does not render the sanction invalid. In that case, the prosecution may prove by extraneous evidence that the material facts constituting the offence were placed before the sanctioning authority and that the facts related to the offence charged. 1956 Cr LJ 103: ILR (1956) Pepsu 1: AIR 1956 Pepsu 12 (13) (Pt B) (Pr 6).

——S. 6 — Sanction — Validity — (Criminal P. C. (1898), Section 197).

The sanction to prosecute is an important matter; it constitutes a condition precedent to the institution of the prosecution and the Government have an absolute discretion to grant or withhold their sanction. Though it is plainly desirable that the facts should be referred to on the face of the sanction, it is not essential since Section 6 does not require the sanction to be in any particular form, nor even to be in writing. But if the facts constituting the offence charged are not shown on the face of the sanction, the prosecution must prove by extraneous evidence that those facts were placed before the sanctioning authority. but by a Judicial Officer of the standing of the District and Sessions Judge. AIR 1952 Punj 53 (55) (Pt D) (Pr 9).

●——S. 6 — Form of sanction.

It is not necessary for the sanction under the Prevention of Corruption Act to be in any particular form or in writing or for it to set on facts in respect of which it was given. It is, however, desirable to mention the facts. But the omission to mention the facts in the order does not invalidate the sanction. 9. Burden of proof.

——S. 6 (1) — Order sanctioning prosecution — Validity.

Where the evidence shows all the facts are placed before the sanctioning authority and it is only after fully satisfying itself that the sanction was accorded by it, the sanction order is perfectly in order. 1962 Ker LT 690: (1962) 2 Lab LJ 301: 1962 Ker LJ 881: ILR (1962) 2 Ker 362.

——S. 6 — Burden of proof as to proper sanction is on prosecution — Facts must appear on face of sanction or that sanction was in reference to facts might be proved by extraneous circumstances — (Evidence Act (1872), Sections 101 to 103). AIR 1955 NUC (Mad) 3253.

——S. 6 — Validity of sanction — Burden of proof — Prosecution to prove that sanctioning authority was competent to sanction prosecution and had applied its mind to the facts of the case — Facts constituting offence not appearing on face of order sanctioning prosecution — Prosecution must prove same by other evidence.

The burden of proof that the sanctioning authority had applied its mind to the question before it and had all the relevant papers in that connection before it while according the sanction, lies on the prosecution and this burden must be squarely discharged by it. The requirement of previous sanction is not a formal or technical one; it goes to the very root of the jurisdiction of the Court trying the case. The burden which rests on the prosecution in such a case includes proof that the authority sanctioning the prosecution was competent to do so and further that it had given the sanction with reference to the facts on which the proposed prosecution was based and that it had applied its mind to the same.

Therefore, where the facts constituting the offence do not appear on the face of the order sanctioning the prosecution, or where the order omits to show that such facts were brought to the notice of the authority which actually sanctioned the prosecution, then the proper course for the prosecution to adopt is that it should prove by other evidence that the material facts constituting the offence were placed before the sanctioning authority, and where this is not done, the sanction cannot but be held to be illegal, and the want of a valid sanction must have the effect of vitiating the entire trial and leave the Court without jurisdiction to try the case. ——S. 6 (1) (c) — Authority competent to remove public servant — Railway taken over by Government — Appointing authority — Who is.

According to the provisions of Article 311 of the Constitution, or for that matter those of Clause (c) of Rule 1705, (Page 179 of the Railway Establishment Code, Volume 1 of 1951), the accused could be removed only by an authority who appointed him or who was superior to that authority, and not by an authority lower than that by which he was appointed to the post held by him substantively. It had therefore to be examined as to by what authority the accused was appointed at the time when he was taken into Government Service after taking over the management of the B. B. and C. I. Railway by the Government of India. As to what authority appointed him when the management was in the hands of the B. B. and C. I. Railway Company was immaterial.

Where sanction had been given by the Regional Traffic Superintendent the sanction would be valid only if the appointment was made by the Regional Traffic Superintendent, or an officer of equal or lower rank. It was for the prosecution to show that valid sanction had been given and it was, therefore, the duty of the prosecution to prove that the accused was appointed under the Government of India by Regional Traffic Superintendent, or an officer of equal rank or lower rank. ILR (1958) 8 Raj 688: 1959 Cr LJ 1115: 1959 Raj LW 644: AIR 1959 Raj 214 (216, 217) (Pt A) (Prs 14, 16).

10. Proof of sanction.

●——S. 6 (1) (c) — Sanction — Validity — Facts on which proposed prosecution is based must be proved to have been put before the sanctioning authority — (Penal Code (1860), Section 161).

The burden of proving that the requisite sanction has been obtained rests on the prosecution and such burden includes proof that the sanctioning authority had given the sanction in reference to the facts on which the proposed prosecution was to be based; and these facts may appear on the face of the sanction or may be proved by extraneous evidence. Where the facts constituting the offence do not appear on the face of the letter sanctioning prosecution, it is incumbent upon the prosecution to prove by other evidence that the material facts constituting the offence were placed before the sanctioning authority. Where this is not done, the sanction must be held to be defective and an invalid sanction cannot confer jurisdiction upon the Court to try the case. AIR 1948 PC 82 (84), Relied on. ——S. 6 — Applicability — Offence under Section 161, Penal Code — Sanction.

The accused moved the Sessions Court to quash the proceedings in a case under Section 161, Penal Code and the Sessions Judge made a reference recommending the same.

Held : There is a distinction between Section 197, Cr. P. Code and Section 6 of Act 2 of 1947. Under Section 197 sanction for prosecution for an offence under Section 161, Penal Code, it is stated, was required only when the public servant is accused of the offence while acting in the discharge of his official capacity. But Section 6 of the Act makes no such distinction and the Acts being applied to Tripura State by the Part C States (Laws) Act 1950, sanction is a necessity irrespective of the question whether the public servant was acting or purporting to act in discharge of his official duty. AIR 1952 Punj 89, Rel. on.

Sanction for prosecution under Section 161, Penal Code to be legal must be clearly evidenced from the order granting the sanction or other documentary evidence placed before the Court. The theory of implied sanction is unknown to law. (AIR 1951 M 255, Rel. on).

It is not incumbent on the accused to raise the objection; it is the duty of the Magistrate to satisfy himself before taking cognizance. Section 537, Cr. P. Code, cannot cure the want of sanction as it cuts at the basis of prosecution. 1952 Cr LJ 1648: AIR 1952 Tri 21 (21, 22) (Prs 3, 4).

The sanction said that the accused had received money and misappropriated it by not crediting the same into the treasury and embezzled it and was therefore guilty of criminal misconduct and liable to prosecution under Sections 409/406, Penal Code and Section 5 (2) of the Act.

Held, that the allegations made clearly showed that the sanctioning authority had Section 5 (1) (c) of the Act in mind because the sanction spoke of misappropriation and embezzlement of the moneys and misappropriation and embezzlement was only to be found in Section 5 (1) (c). There was nothing in the words 'misappropriation and embezzlement' to imply that this was only with reference to conversion by the accused to his own use. As the words of the sanction stood they would cover a case of misappropriation or conversion to his own use by the accused himself or by allowing others to do so. The Superintendent of Police, after giving in his letter for sanction, requested the Government to give sanction under Section 6 of the Prevention of Corruption Act and Section 197 of the Cr. P. Code for the prosecution of the appellant under Section 5 (2) and (3) of the Prevention of Corruption Act. The First Information Report and the letter gave all the necessary facts to satisfy the mind of the sanctioning authority that the appellant was habitually receiving gratification other than legal gratification within meaning of Section 5 (1) (a) of the Act, and that he by his corrupt and illegal means or otherwise was abusing his position as public servant to obtain for himself pecuniary advantage within the meaning of Section 5 (1) (d) of the Act. The orders issued by the Government showed that it gave the sanction under sub-section (2), read with sub-section (3) of Section 5 of the Act, after considering the facts disclosed in the said two documents. Upon this sanction the appellant was convicted under sub-section (1) of Section 5 read with sub-section (3):

Held, that all the relevant facts necessary to satisfy the mind of the sanctioning authority were placed before it. Though the sanction ex facie did not disclose the facts, the documents which were exhibited in the case gave all the necessary relevant facts constituting the offence. AIR 1948 PC 82, Rel. on; AIR 1954 SC 637, Distinguished. Held, further, that sub-section (1) describes the ingredients of the offence of criminal misconduct. Sub-section (2) is the penal section, that is the section which imposes punishment for such a criminal misconduct. The sanction referred to sub-section (2) which is the provision that makes criminal misconduct punishable. The sanction ex hypothesi must have reference only to criminal misconduct as defined in sub-section (1). The sanction, therefore, though in terms it referred to sub-section (2), in effect must be deemed to relate to sub-section (1) read with sub-section (2) for the expression criminal misconduct in sub-section (2) takes in the definition of criminal misconduct. Therefore the contention that because the sanction was given for prosecuting the appellant under sub-section (2) read with sub-section (3) of Section 5 of the Act, his conviction under sub-section (1) of Section 5 read with sub-section (3), was bad, had no merits. AIR 1954 SC 359, Relied on; AIR 1958 SC 124, Distinguished. Held, also, that the contention that the sanction was given under sub-section (3) of Section 5 which lays down only a rule of evidence on a wrong assumption that the said sub-section created an offence, had also no merits. When the sanction was given under sub-section (2) read with sub-section (3) it only meant that on the facts disclosed in the said two documents, a case has been made out for drawing a presumption of guilt against the appellant. A sanction for prosecution granted by a competent authority under Section 6, Prevention of Corruption Act clearly stated that the accused had demanded, on 12th May, 1952 as bribe the sum of Rs. 100 from Doraiswamy and had accepted the sum as a motive or reward for speedy and favourable settlement of the claim cases, that the sanctioning authority had applied his mind to the facts and the circumstances of the case and was satisfied that in the interests of justice, the accused should be put on his trial in a Court of competent jurisdiction for offences under Section 161 of the Indian Penal Code and Section 5 (2) of the Act, alleged to have been committed by him. In his evidence in Court the sanctioning Authority stated that the sanction was prepared by the police and put before him by the personal branch of his office and that before according sanction he went through all the relevant papers put before him.

Held, that the sanction granted under Section 6 was perfectly valid. It was not for the sanctioning authority to judge the truth of the R., became the Northern Railway and the designation of the District Traffic Superintendent was dropped and three officers were appointed in his place. These three Officers were the Divisional Personnel Officer, the Divisional Commercial officer and the Divisional Transport Officer, and all the three were under the Divisional Superintendent. This Divisional Superintendent gave the sanction under Section 6, Prevention of Corruption Act, for the prosecution of the said Station Master for accepting bribe.

Held, that as the Authority who gave the sanction was an officer superior to the District Traffic Superintendent of 1918 who had appointed the Station Master, there was no flaw in the sanction for the prosecution of the Station Master. 1958 All Cri R 51: 1958 All WR (HC) 47.

Sub-section (2) of Section 5 is the penal provision, but before a cognizance is taken of an offence under this sub-section, it is imperative that there should be a sanction as required by Section 6 for the said prosecution. The Superintendent of Police alleged in his letter for sanction that the accused showed undue favours obtained money by corrupt or illegal means and received a sum of Rs. 400 as illegal gratification from the proprietor of a firm and these facts were placed before the sanctioning authority. The sanctioning authority, accorded sanction for the prosecution of the accused in respect of the offence under sub-section (2) of Section 5.

Held, that though the sanctioning authority mentioned sub-section (3) while granting the sanction, sub-section (3) must be deemed to be a surplusage. The effect of the sanction was not to limit the offence committed by the accused to one under sub-section (3) only of Section 5 and the sanction was not invalid. In the case of a Class III railway servant it is the General Manager of the Railways who is the appointing authority and who normally can take disciplinary action of suspending or dismissing the servant from service. The opening words of Rule 1704 of Discipline and Appeal Rules under the Indian Railways Establishment Code 1951 "subject to the provisions of Rule 1705" govern the provisions of Rule 1704 (i) and Rule 1704 (ii), so that the delegation which the General Manager purported to make in favour of the Traffic Superintendent is subject to the provisions of Rule 1705. Under Clause (c) of Rule 1705 the only authority that could remove or dismiss the railway servant is the General Manager and not the Traffic Superintendent, so that it is clear that in regard to the power to dismiss a railway servant a delegate cannot exercise his authority having regard to the fact that the delegation is subject to the provisions of Rule 1705. Hence, the sanction by Traffic Superintendent must be taken to be granted by an officer who was not competent to dismiss the servant and is not valid. 1956 Cr LJ 879: AIR 1956 Bom 504 (505) (Pt A) (Pr 4) (DB).

Under Section 6 of the Prevention of Corruption Act, no Court can take cognizance of an offence punishable under Section 5 (2) of the Act except with the previous sanction of the authority competent to remove the public servant from his office.

The power to remove a Sar Panch of a Panchayat from office vests only in the Panchayat Mandal under Section 39 of the Bombay Village Panchayats Act and the power to suspend a Sar Panch during the pendency of criminal proceedings vests in the Collector of the District under Section 41 of the Act. Apart from Section 39, there is no other provision under this Act, which provides for removal of a Sar Panch from his office.

But, under the powers conferred upon it by Section 187 of the Act, the Government of Bombay published a notification, dated September 19, 1959. The Collector was given powers under Section 39, until the Mandals were duly constituted. Therefore, sanction under Section 6 of the Prevention of Corruption Act given by the Collector, for the prosecution of the Sar Panch for the offence under Section 5 (2) of the Prevention of Corruption Act, after the constitution of the Mandal, is not valid, and the Special Judge does not get any jurisdiction to entertain the matter so far as the offence punishable under Section 5 (2) of the Prevention of Corruption Act is concerned. The Special Judge also has no jurisdiction to try the offence under Section 409, Penal Code. Since this is a question of want of jurisdiction, it is obvious that the entire trial before the Special Judge is vitiated. (1963) 2 Lab LJ 540: (1963) 4 Guj LR 563: 1963 (2) Cr LJ 556 (556 to 558) (Pt B) (Prs 2 to 6) (Guj) (DB).

C. committed whilst in service under Central Government — Clause (c) and not Clause (a) or (b) of Section 6, applies — Sanction given by Governor-General is invalid — Trial is vitiated.

Clauses (a) and (b) of Section 6, Prevention of Corruption Act, 1947 (as it stood in 1949) deal with persons permanently employed in connection with the affairs of the Federation or in connection with the affairs of the Province respectively, and in regard to them, the appropriate authorities who can grant the sanction are the Central Government and the Provincial Government. The case of a public servant whose services are loaned by one Government to the other, does not fall either under Clause (a) or under Clause (b), but it falls under Clause (c). The word 'employed' in the context must mean permanently employed. The employment referred to in Clauses (a) and (b) must mean the employment of a permanent character and would not include the ad hoc or temporary employment of an officer whose services have been loaned by one Government to the other.

Held, on facts that the case of the accused fell under Clause (c) of Section 6 and that it was only the Provincial Government of Assam which could have given a valid sanction under Sec. 6. The sanction given by the Governor-General was therefore invalid and the consequent trial in respect of offences under Sections 161 and 165, I. P. C., was without jurisdiction and invalid. ——S. 6 — Sanction for prosecution of a civil servant — Sanction to be from competent authority — Competency to be determined with reference to appointing authority under Article 311 (1) of Constitution of India.

Sanction under Section 6 of Prevention of Corruption Act in respect of a civil servant who is sought to be prosecuted for offences under S. 5 (1) (d) and Section 5 (2) read with Section 161 of the Penal Code is to be obtained from that Government or officer who is an appointing authority within the meaning of Article 311 (1) of the Constitution of India. One of the requirements of Article 311 (1) is that the authority that orders dismissal or removal should not be one subordinate in rank to that by which the civil servant in question was appointed. Section 6 of the Prevention of Corruption Act cannot override the provisions of the Constitution and consequently sub-section (2) thereof can be made applicable to only such cases where it cannot be ascertained with reasonable certainty as to who had actually appointed the accused person. Thus, where the civil servant was appointed by the former Cochin Government, it is only the successor Kerala Government who has got the right to dismiss the accused from service and under Section 6 (1) (c) it is only that authority which is competent to remove him from his office who can validly accord sanction. ILR (1961) 1 Ker 512: 1961 Ker LT 445: 1961 Mad LJ (Cr) 535: (1961) 2 Lab LJ 484: 1962 (1) Cr LJ 334: AIR 1962 Ker 50 (52) (Prs 6, 7).

The rule of sanction as incorporated in Sec. 6, Prevention of Corruption Act, is based on the principle that public servants should be protected from malicious and irresponsible prosecutions.

A valid sanction is necessary only for taking cognizance of a case but once a proper cognizance is taken, the Court can exercise and should exercise all the rights given to it under the Criminal Procedure Code. It is the duty of the Court to try the offender under that section which in its opinion most appropriately covers the illegal act or omission of the offender. The discretion is given under the provisions of S. 230, Cri. P. C. Thus, a Court acts within its rights when it tries the accused under Section 5 (2) of the Prevention of Corruption Act, even though the sanction to prosecute him was given only for an offence under Section 161, Penal Code. SECTION 7

●——S. 7 — Scope — Criminal P. C. (1898), Section 342) — (Penal Code (1860), Sections 161 and 165-A).

Section 7 is a departure or deviation from the procedure till then obtaining in a criminal case and thereby an accused person is held competent to be a witness on his behalf. Whereas under Section 342, as it stood before the recent amendment, no accused person was entitled to be administered an oath and thereby competent to testify in a Court of law in a case in which he is accused; under Section 7, any person charged with an offence punishable under Section 161 or Section 165-A of the I. P. Code, or under sub-section (2) of Section 5, of the Prevention of Corruption Act, is a competent witness for the defence and may give evidence on oath in disproof of the charges made against him or any person charged together with him at the same trial; and there are also certain safeguards provided in the matter of giving such testimony. ——S. 7 — Scope — Right of accused — Prosecution under Section 161, I. P. C. — Accused has a right to examine himself in defence — Court not bound to inform the accused of his right — Conviction cannot be quashed merely on the ground of refusal or failure of the Court to inform the accused of his right. See Penal Code (1860), Section 161. 1954 Cri LJ 459: AIR 1954 All 223.

● ——S. 7 — Duty of Court under.

The failure of a Court to inform an accused of the right conferred by Section 7 of the Act is not an irregularity and it is not obligatory on the part of the Court trying case under Section 161 or 165, I. P. Code to inform the accused that he can appear as a witness for himself. The right may be of great value to the accused and the Court may have to be jealous to safeguard it, but it does not follow that the Court must inform the accused that he possesses it. It is for him to know what his rights are and to seek to exercise them; the Court's duty is to see that he has every reasonable opportunity of exercising them and nothing more. AIR 1953 All 110, Approved. Raja Ram v. State. 1953 All LJ 644: 1953 All WR (HC) 657: 1954 Cr LJ 438: ILR (1954) 1 All 379: AIR 1954 All 204 (208) (Pt C) (Pr 15) (FB).

——S. 7 — Scope and effect of.

The section never contemplated Courts giving a kind of warning or offering a kind of reminder to the accused about the right or privilege conferred upon him by the section. The provisos to the section clearly indicate that a Court cannot ask the accused to appear as a witness for himself, nor can the Court draw a presumption against the accused, if the accused has chosen not to appear as a witness for himself. 1953 All Cri R 1: 1952 RD (HC) 375: 1953 All WR (HC) 4: 1953 Cr LJ 340: 1953 All LJ 193: ILR (1954) 1 All 45: AIR 1953 All 110 (113) (Pt F) (Prs 22, 23).

——Ss. 7, 4, 6 — Applicability to provisions of Penal Code — These sections do not apply to a case where the offence charged is other than Section 161 or Section 165 of I. P. C. See Prevention of Corruption Act (2 of 1947), Section 4. AIR 1952 All 35 (DB).

——S. 7 — Failure of Court to inform accused of his right to give evidence on oath in disproof of the charge under Section 161 or Section 165, I. P. C. is a grave irregularity — The effect of which must depend upon whether it has in fact occasioned a failure of justice — Effect — Criminal P. C. (1898), Section 537. AIR 1951 All 546 (548) (Pt C) (Pr 18) (DB).

——S. 7 — Non-compliance — Effect of not informing accused of his right to give statement on oath is not to prejudice him when he is represented by counsel whose advice he could take. AIR 1955 NUC (Him Pra) 1295.

——S. 7 (a) — Duty of Court to inform accused that he is a competent witness.

It is not the duty of the Court to inform the accused that he is a competent witness. Since the request is to come from the accused it would not be proper for the Court to invite the request. It is not business of the Court to advice the accused as to his rights. His failure to give evidence is not a matter to be commented upon and if the Court were to ask the accused whether he would like to tender evidence on his own behalf, his reply in the negative may prejudice the Court. PREVENTION OF CRUELTY TO ANIMALS ACT (11 of 1890)

——Ss. 3 (a) and 3-A — Ingredients of offence — 'Overloading'.

What is made punishable under Section 3 (a) is 'overdriving, beating, or otherwise treating any animal so as to subject it to unnecessary pain or suffering'. From the manner in which this sub-section is worded, it is obvious that overdriving by itself is not made punishable. To constitute an offence under this sub-section, it must be shown that the overdriving was such as to subject the animal to unnecessary pain or suffering. Overloading is not the same as overdriving. The fact that bulls appeared to be weak and to be struggling hard to drag the cart, is not sufficient to make out that the bulls were subjected to unnecessary pain or suffering. 1958 Ker LJ 159: 1958 Ker LT 866: 1959 Cr LJ 1182: AIR 1959 Ker 325 (325) (Pt A) (Pr 2).

——S. 3-A (as added by Act 25 of 1938) — Overloading — Proof — Duty of prosecution.

In a case for an offence under Section 3-A where the charge is one for overloading, the prosecution has necessarily to prove the actual weight of the load. In a Criminal prosecution there is very little scope for any presumption being drawn as to the weight of the goods loaded in a cart. It will be wrong and unsafe to enter a conviction against the accused on the strength of any such presumption. 1958 Ker LJ 159: 1958 Ker LT 866: 1959 Cr LJ 1182: AIR 1959 Ker 325 (326) (Pt B) (Pr 3).

Kesari dhall supplied to a purchaser who asks for "thoranparipu" being of an entirely different substance than the one demanded is adulterated within the meaning of Sec. 2 (i) (a) and the fact that there is no prohibition for the sale of kesari dhall is of little consequence when it is made out that the consumption of the said article is injurious to health and is to be deemed to be adulterated. ——S. 2 (i) read with S. 7 — Adulterated article of food — What constitutes — Mixture of Bengal-gram flour with Pea-powder — Nature of.

An article of food purchased by the Food Inspector was sold to him as Bengal-gram flour. On analysis it was found to contain fifty per cent. of Pea-powder. The Pea-powder, so mixed, was found to be a costlier substance than Bengal-gram flour. On the question whether an offence under Sec. 7 of the Prevention of Food Adulteration Act can be said to have been committed by the accused in selling the combination of these two powders:

Held, the gravamen of the charge, when a person is accused of adulterating an article of food, is that, such adulteration prejudices the vendee or injuriously affects the nature, substance or quality of the article of food. It is not always that the mixture of article of food that invariably makes an offender liable for an offence under Sec. 7 (1) on the ground that there was sale of an adulterated food. The lack of evidence that the Pea-powder, when mixed with Bengal-gram flour, is injurious or injuriously affects the nature, substance or quality of the Bengal-gram powder, makes it impossible to bring the mixing of these powders as 'adulteration' falling under Clause (c) or (b) of Sec. 2 (i) of the Act. 1963 Mad LJ (Cri) 220: (1963) 1 Andh WR 265: (1963) 1 Andh LT 350.

——S. 2 (i) — Adulteration — Extraneous matter mixed with article of food being injurious to health, not necessary.

It is not necessary in order to make an article of food adulterated that extraneous matter mixed in it must be injurious to health.

Tea in which gram husk or coffee is mixed falls below the quality or purity prescribed for it and is therefore to be deemed adulterated apart from any consideration as to whether such extraneous matter is injurious to health. 1962 Ker LT 415: 1LR (1962) 2 Ker 105: 1962 Ker LJ 1005.

——Ss. 2 (i) and 16 (1) (a) — Adulterated — Vinegar found containing sulphuric acid — Presence of sulphuric acid specifically prohibited — Public Analyst need not mention exact quantity of sulphuric acid present.

If synthetic vinegar contains sulphuric acid in any quantity it shall be deemed to be adulterated and its sale or storage for sale will be a contravention of the provisions of the Act and rules made thereunder and as such punishable under Sec. 16 of the Act. It is not necessary for the Public Analyst to mention the quantity of sulphuric acid that is present in the sample. AIR 1957 Punj 56, Distinguished. be no escape from the conclusion that the sample in question does not conform to the prescribed specification. It cannot be contended that because the sample was not found to be below standard so far as the content of oleic acid and moisture was concerned it should not be held to be adulterated. The Act aimed at prohibition of sale of adulterated food in larger interests of maintenance of public health and with that aim prohibited totally, under S. 7, the manufacture, sale, distribution or storage of any adulterated food. ——S. 2, Appendix B, Item A, 11-14 — Prevention of Food Adulteration Rules (1955), Rr. 44, 46 — Ghee — Sub-standard by definition — Prosecution for offence under Rr. 44, 46.

When the rules say that any deficiency in the Reichert value below a particular stipulated figure means a sub-standard quality and such sub-standard quality is by definition an act of adulteration, the Court cannot embark on an academic investigation about the Reichert value and its bearing upon the quantum of fat in ghee in different areas in this country. If the quality or purity of ghee falls below the standard prescribed by the rules or its constituents are in excess of the prescribed limits of variability, the ghee shall be deemed to be adulterated within the meaning of S. 2 of the Act. When the prescribed standard is not attained, the statute treats such ghee, by fiction, as an adulterated food, though in fact it is not so. When a complaint is filed under Sections 7 and 16 of the Act read with Rules 44 (c) and 46 or with Rule 41 (b), it must be deemed that the sanctioning authority has exercised his mind in considering the analyst's report, the elements constituting the offence. Therefore, the want of specific sanction for contravention of the items in terms defined in Appendix B would not affect a prosecution when the offence contemplated by the non-conformity with the definitions and standards of quality are those mentioned in Rr. 44 and 46. ●——S. 2 (v) (a) — Linseed oil is "food" within S. 2 (v) (a) — "Ordinarily" — Meaning—Words and Phrases — Interpretation of Statutes — 1960 All LJ 94, Overruled.

Per majority (Sharma, J., contra): Linseed oil is comprehended by the definition of "food" given in S. 2 (v) (a) of the Act, inasmuch as linseed oil is used in some parts of the country in the preparation of human food. 1960 All LJ 94, Overruled.

That it is not so used in Uttar Pradesh is immaterial because the Act is an all India Act, and if linseed oil can be considered to be food in areas where it is used as a cooking medium or for other food purposes, it would be deemed to be 'food' in Uttar Pradesh also.

The same word in a statute cannot have two different and diametrically opposite meanings in two different local areas governed by the same statute.

It is in the sense of non-exceptional or usual that the word 'ordinarily' has been used in sub-cl.(a) of S. 2 (v) of the Act. The word 'ordinarily' does not mean "primarily" nor does it mean "universally". It does not also mean "generally'. By the use of the word 'ordinarily' the Legislature intended to provide that if an article enters into or is used in the composition or preparation of human food even by some people usually and not as exception, it would be deemed to be 'food'.

The word "ordinarily" qualifies both "enters into" and also "is used".

An article may have more than one use and it may ordinarily be used for more than one purpose. The mere fact that linseed oil is also used for making varnishes and paints would not make it any the less an article of food as defined in S. 2 (v) of the Act.

The fact that linseed oil has been treated as an item of food under the Rules (R. 5) framed under S. 23 of the Act also lends support to the conclusion that it is food within the meaning of S. 2 (v) (a) of the Act. ——Ss. 2 (v), 7 (iii), 16 — Applicability — Sale of adulterated linseed oil as oil for lighting purposes only — Offence.

If the definition in S. 2 (v) is read as a whole, it appears that an article which is not ordinarily used as food or drink is not to be treated as food. Linseed oil is not a common article of food in the country, at least in Uttar Pradesh. It does not, therefore, amount to 'food' as defined by the Act and there is no question of its storing as adulterated food for sale within S. 7. AIR 1951 All 595, Rel. on.

Further, when the seller does not represent to the Inspector that the article contained in the tin is linseed oil or pure linseed oil, but on the other hand, there is a distinct label on the tin that the oil is for lighting purposes only, there can be no serious objection to the exposure of such an article meant for lighting purposes only. 1960 All LJ 94.

——Ss. 2 (v) (a), 2 (xiii), 16 (1) (a) read with 7 (i) and 19 — Respective scope — Adulteration of coconut oil — Coconut oil, if an article of food— Sale and purchase for 'analysis' and 'human consumption' — Relevancy — AIR 1958 Andh Pra 681, Overruled.

There is nothing in the Prevention of Food Adulteration Act which posits that an article of food may be adulterated with impunity provided it is not used as food throughout the length and breadth of the country. On the contrary, there is every indication in the Act that it seeks to protect the public by preventing adulteration of any article or substance which is used as food in any part of the country. It is immaterial whether a given article or substance is not used at all as food in a particular region, or is used only by a section of the people in a given region. The word 'ordinarily' occurring in sub-clause (a) of Clause (v) of S. 2 of the Act, does not mean universally or generally but is apparently used in contradistinction to 'exceptionally' or 'unusually'; nor is the word used in relation to a particular region or a particular section of the people in a region. When an article of substance is used as an ingredient in the preparation of food, even by some inhabitants of this country, usually and not as something exceptional or out of the ordinary, it would come within the definition of 'food'. By the definition in S. 2 (xiii) of the Act, a sale is not any the less a sale because it is for analysis; it need not necessarily be for human consumption or for human use. The purchase of a sample by a Food Inspector is not for his personal consumption or use but is only for the purpose of detecting if the article of food is adulterated. It is obviously for this reason that S. 19 of the Act, which sets out the defences open to accused persons in prosecutions under the Act, expressly rules out a plea that the purchaser of an article of food for analysis was not prejudiced by the transaction. Therefore, the lower Court was in error in insisting on proof of an additional element not contemplated by the Act, viz., that the respondent had sold the sample of coconut oil to the Food Inspector as an article of food. In doing so, it obviously lost sight of the important circumstance that in the instant case, the sale was for analysis and not for human consumption or use. In view of the definition of 'food' which is to be found in S. 2 (v) of the Act, the Court is not concerned with the actual use to which the article in question may be put. To constitute 'food' for the purpose of the Act, it is enough that the article in question is usable as food or drink for human consumption. For conviction under S. 16 (1) (a) of the Prevention of Food Adulteration Act (37 of 1954), it is not necessary that a person must make a sale on his own behalf. The section punishes any person who sells an adulterated article and a servant selling an adulterated article on behalf of his master can be convicted under S. 7 (i) read with S. 16 (1) (a) of the Act. The reason is that in view of S. 19 of the Act, mens rea is not necessary and the definition of sale in S. 2 (13) of the Act is wide enough to cover the case of a servant having in his possession article for sale and also exposure of the article for sale by a servant on behalf of his master. When a Food Inspector obtains a sample under S. 10 of the Act, there is no sale. Of course, it is possible for a Food Inspector, just like any other human being, to effect a purchase in the ordinary course, and the transaction would be a sale notwithstanding that the purchaser is a Food Inspector and that his purpose is to have the article analysed with a view to prosecution. But, if he obtains the article not by a voluntary exchange for a price but in exercise of his statutory power under S. 10 of the Act, the transaction is not a sale notwithstanding that in obedience to sub-sec. (3) of S. 10 its cost is paid to the person from whom the sample is taken. AIR 1953 Mad 862, Dissented from; AIR 1938 Mad 541 and AIR 1942 Mad 609, Rel. on.

Hence, the person from whom the sample has been taken cannot be convicted for an offence under S. 16 (1) (a) (ii). 1961 Ker LT 308: 1961 Ker LJ 349: (1961) 1 Ker LR 484: 1962 (1) Cri LJ 152 (153, 154) (Pr 7).

of proof — Purchase of samples for cash — Held amounted to sale — (Evidence Act (1872), S. 114).

Goods stocked in a shop are normally stored there for sale, and ordinarily such a presumption can legitimately be drawn by the Court under Section 114 of the Evidence Act. It would then be for the person asserting the contrary to displace the presumption.

Thus, where a Food Inspector went to the shop of the accused, took three samples of tea dust, paid for them and obtained a cash bill from the accused shopkeeper and on analysis the tea was found to be adulterated with coffee and gram dust:

Held, that the transaction was nothing other than an ordinary sale and purchase.

(2) That a purchase, even if it be for the purpose of analysis, did not cease to make a sale as is expressly laid down in Section 2 (xiii) of the Act, and it follows that the accused did sell adulterated tea, and that he did thereby commit an offence under Section 16 (1) (a) read with S. 7 (i) of the Act. ILR (1959) Ker 1.

——S. 7 (i) and (vi) — Prevention of Adulteration Rules (1955), R. 44 (e) — Sale of mustard oil found to contain foreign ingredients — Offence.

Where a person sells mustard oil which is found to be mixed not with other edible oils but with a foreign ingredient, it is true he does not infringe R. 44, but he infringes S. 7 (i) which is an entirely different provision. 1961 All LJ 67: 1961 All WR (HC) 97: 1961 All Cri R 45: 1961 (2) Cri LJ 447 (447) (Pt A) (Pr 2).

——S. 7 — Mixture of articles of 'food' — When amounts to adulteration — Bengal-gram flour found mixed with pea powder — Held no adulteration.

The gravamen of the charge, when a person is accused of adulterating an article of food, is that such adulteration prejudices the vendee or injuriously affects the nature, substance or quality of the article of food. Such being the case, it is not always that the mixture of articles of food that invariably make an offender liable for an offence under S. 7 (i) on the ground that there was sale of an adulterated food.

Thus, where the flour sold to the purchaser as Bengal-gram flour was, on analysis, found to contain 50 per cent of pea powder which was costlier than the former flour and there was no sufficient evidence to bring out that the pea powder, when mixed with Bengal gram, was injurious or injuriously affected the nature, substance or quality of the Bengal-gram powder or that the purchaser had been prejudicially affected, the mixing of the powders could not be held to be 'adulteration' within Cls. (a), (b) or (c) of S. 2 (ii) so as to make out an offence under S. 2 (i) (a) read with S. 7 (1) of the Act. (1963) 1 Andh WR 265: (1963) 1 Andh LT 350: 1963 Mad LJ (Cri) 220: 1964 (1) Cri LJ 448 (448) (Prs 1, 2) (Andh Pra).

——Ss. 7, 2 (i), 16 (1) — Prevention of Food Adulteration Rules, Rr. 5, 44 (e) — Sale of adulterated oil not coming under R. 44 (e) — Offence.

An act of adulteration proved under Sec. 2 (i) is committed by contravention of R. 5 read with paragraph A-17-11 of Appendix B. R. 44 does not affect R. 5. Selling food which is of the category of 'adulterated food' under Sec. 2 (i) is prohibited by Sec. 7 (i) and is, therefore, punishable under Sec. 16, independent of R. 44 (e) and even if there be no contravention of R. 44 (e). 1963 (1) Cr LJ 109 (111) (Pt B) (Pr 9) (Andh Pra).

——S. 7 — Sale of sample of adulterated food to Food Inspector — Offence is committed — Quantity from which sample was taken need not be shown to be intended for sale.

If a sample of adulterated food is sold to the Food Inspector, that would be an offence under Sec. 7 and it is not necessary to prove that the sample was taken out of a larger quantity which was also intended for sale. Even one act of sale or distribution would come within that section. AIR 1959 Mad 333 and AIR 1962 All 82, Dissented from. (1964) 5 Guj LR 78: 1964 (2) Cr LJ 290: AIR 1964 Guj 191 (192) (Prs 6, 7).

——Ss. 7 (i), 16 (1) and Appendix B, Cl. A. 11.03 — Adding water to butter-milk and selling product — Whether amounts to an offence — Non-specification of a standard — Effect.

It cannot be disputed that butter-milk is a product of milk. Butter-milk is defined in Cl. A. 11.03 of Appendix B. It says butter-milk means the product obtained after removal of butter from curd by churning or otherwise. It is true that no separate standard is prescribed, but it is not necessary as the standard is implicit in the definition itself. To amount to butter-milk it should be a product obtained after removal of the butter from the curd. Thus due regard being had to the definitions and standards prescribed for milk, curd, butter and the definition of butter, as the residue left after removal of butter from curds it can be easily gathered what standard of butter-milk is to satisfy and that is the reason why it was felt not necessary to prescribe the standard of the butter-milk separately. In any case the non-specification of a standard for butter-milk does not absolve a vendor from conforming to the standard that is necessarily implied in respect of butter-milk. If water can be freely added one fails to see what the need was for defining buttermilk at all. As such it has to be held that the addition of water in curd and reducing the solids-not-fat contents and selling the same as butter-milk will be an offence under the Act. ——S. 7 (i) — Storing of goods in shop — Presumption of sale — Burden of proof — Purchase of samples for cash — Held, amounted to sale. See Prevention of Food Adulteration Act (1954), S. 2 (xiii). ILR (1959) Ker 1.

——S. 7 — Sale — Meaning of — Compulsory seizure of adulterated food-stuffs, on payment, by Food Inspector — Does not amount to sale.

There is no offence under Sec. 7 of the Act, if there is merely a compulsory seizure of a sample by an officer of the department, because such seizure, even if money be paid therefor will not amount to a sale: (1962) (1) Cr LJ 152 (Ker) and AIR 1942 Mad 609, Rel. on. A Food Inspector may purchase a sample in the ordinary course of business, though he intends it for analysis, yet it is voluntary sale and purchase. But, if the vendor is aware that the sale is a forced one, in the sense that an official of the department is compelling the vendor, to part with the sample, because of the statutory obligation and further because a prevention of the taking of such a sample by the Food Inspector is itself an offence under Sec. 16 (1) (b) of the Act, then there is no 'sale'; this is only a case of a seizure or compulsory acquisition though it may externally wear the form or semblance of a sale. Upon this interpretation, even if the sample has been adulterated, this single act of delivery of the food-stuff to the official, will not render the person in possession of the food-stuff liable for the offence of a sale of adulterated food. 1964 Mad WN 325: 1965 (1) Cri LJ 452: 1964 Mad LJ (Cr) 679: (1964) 2 Mad LJ 543: AIR 1965 Mad 146 (147) (Prs 5, 6).

——S. 7—Prosecution under, for selling adulterated food — Essentials.

In a prosecution under the Prevention of Food Adulteration Act, the essential requisite to be established is that the commodity alleged to be adulterated should be one intended for sale. Where it is found that the accused was merely taking the milk got from the buffaloes owned by his brother to his (brother's) hotel and it was not intended for sale as such, the accused cannot be guilty of an offence under the Act even if the milk is proved to be adulterated. It may be that the quantity of milk that was given to the Sanitary Inspector on demand might amount to a sale, but what has to be really decided is whether the milk which the accused was taking was intended for sale. But the hotel-keeper who sells such milk, though it is used for coffee, might be guilty of an offence under the Act. 1959 Mad WN 339: (1959) 1 Mad LJ 234: 1959 Mad LJ (Cr) 239: 1959 Cr LJ 997: AIR 1959 Mad 333 (333) (Pr 1).

2 (A). "Store".

——Ss. 7, 2 (xiii) — Articles of food found in possession of person in habit of manufacturing or storing like articles — Presumption.

That articles were really offered or exposed for sale and possession was for the purpose of sale cannot, in all cases, be proved by direct evidence and is a matter which could reasonably be inferred from the circumstances of a particular case. If articles of food are found in the possession of a person who is in the habit of manufacturing or storing like articles for sale then it may reasonably be presumed that he had manufactured or stocked them for sale and a Court would be justified in inferring that the possession of the articles was for the purposes of sale. 1962 Ker LT 206: 1962 Ker LJ 214: ILR (1962) 1 Ker 359.

——Ss. 7 (i) and 16 (1) (a) — Article containing 95.9 per cent. Calcium Carbonate and rest sand offered for sale to public as black-gram flour — Offence — S. 2 (v) and (ix).

If an accused, a dealer in black-gram flour, was found to have stored and exposed for sale to the public in his shop some article purporting to be black-gram flour, a sample recovered from which, on chemical analysis, was found to contain 95.9 per cent. calcium carbonate and 3.6 per cent. sand with no black-gram flour in it at all, the accused stored in his shop 'misbranded food' although the article stored did constitute 'food' as defined in Sec. 2 (v) and a conviction under Sec. 7 (i) read with Sec. 16 (1) (a) should follow. Cl. (a) to S. 2 (ix) would apply in terms to the article.

(As the prosecution evidence was not believed and it was not accepted by the Court that something which did not contain a particle of black-gram flour could be sold as black-gram flour, the accused was not convicted on the ground that this was either a case of honest bungling or of calculated mischief and foul play.) 1959 Cr LJ 840: AIR 1959 Ker 217 (217) (Pr 4) (DB).

——S. 7 (i) — Read with R. 46 — Scope of — Storage of adulterated article of food not meant for sale as such — Offence.

Having regard to the language of Sec. 6, of the Prevention of Food Adulteration Act, the possession of adulterated ghee by a person who does not sell it cannot in any sense be 'storing of an adulterated food' and would not fall within the purview of this section.

Mere intention to mix does not constitute the offence; for, the possibility of locus paenitentiae cannot be altogether ruled out in such a case. (1960) 1 An WR 209: 1960 Mad LJ (Cr) 222: 1960 Cr LJ 886: 1960 Andh LT 391: AIR 1960 Andh Pra 366 (366, 367) (Prs 2, 3).

——Ss. 7 and 16 — 'Store' — Meaning of.

In Ss. 7 and 16 of the Prevention of Food Adulteration Act, 1954, the word 'store' is not qualified; and if ghee is stored, the offence is complete. It is not necessary for the prosecution to prove that it is stored with a view to sell it in future. 1963 (1) Cri LJ 349: ILR (1963) 15 Assam 75: AIR 1963 Assam 28 (29) (Pt A) (Pr 6).

——Ss. 7, 16 — Liability of servant — Servant is not liable under the provisions.

The expression 'himself or by any person on his behalf' in Ss. 7 and 16 (1) of the Act must imply that the person contemplated is the master or the principal, and not the servant. On a plain reading, it is quite clear, that it is only the person who can be deemed to sell himself, or by another on his behalf, who is interdicted from selling by Sec. 7 and who is made punishable by Sec. 16 (1) of the Act. 4. Sale by the servant of co-operative society — Liability.

——Ss. 7, 16 (1), 17 — Sale of adulterated food by servant of society is sale by Society — Liability of Society not affected by Sec. 17 — Questions of intention, mens rea and knowledge do not arise.

The word 'person' in Sec. 7 includes any company or association or body of individuals whether incorporated or not. A Co-operative Society as a corporate body has a separate existence apart from its individual members and when any adulterated food belonging to such Society is sold, the Society makes itself liable to the penalties provided in Sec. 7. A sale by the servant of the society is sale by the Society. AIR 1948 Mad 329 and AIR 1958 Mad 183 and AIR 1960 Mys 80, Rel. on.

The liability of the Society is not affected by Sec. 17. It is only when a director or officer of the society other than the Society as such or the person who actually sold the article on behalf of the Society is prosecuted and sought to be made liable that Sec. 17 really comes into play. Cr. Rev. P. No. 344 of 1961 (Kerala), Rel. on. It is not necessary for the prosecution to prove that the Society knew that the article offered for sale was adulterated. It is not a question of intention, of mens rea or of knowledge; it is the sale of the adulterated food which the Act makes penal. The fact that no such words as 'knowingly' or 'intentionally' occur 'before the word 'sells' in Ss. 7 and 16 clearly shows that the intention of the Legislature in enacting these provisions was that the state of mind of the person who committed the offence was immaterial and irrelevant. 1962 Ker LT 667: 1962 Ker LJ 1120: 1963 Mad LJ (Cri) 421: 1963 (2) Cri LJ 451 (452, 454) (Prs 5, 11, 13, 14) (Ker).

There is clinching evidence in the case that the accused sold the adulterated food to the Food Inspector and as the liability of the vendor is absolute under the Act, the question whether he is the servant of the co-operative society or a committee member is irrelevant. There is the report of the Analyst that seals were found intact and it has to be presumed that he compared the seal with the specimen seal. He could not certify to that effect without making himself sure that there was no tampering of any sort in the seal. If the accused wanted to challenge the fact or establish that the sample sent for analysis was tampered with it was open to him to send the sample with him for analysis as provided in Sec. 12 of the Act. ——Ss. 7, 17, 16 and 2 (j) — Scope — Offence committed by a company — Prosecution of every person in charge of company at time of the offence or responsible for the conduct of business —Validity.

Under S. 17 of the Prevention of Food Adulteration Act, where an offence under this Act has been committed by a Company, every person who at the time the offence was committed was in charge of or was responsible to the company for the conduct of the business of the company could also be prosecuted for the same offence and shall be deemed to be guilty of the offence along with the company and shall be liable to be prosecuted and punished accordingly, provided it is established that the offence in question had been committed with the consent or connivance of the said director, manager, secretary, or other officer in charge of or responsible to the company for the conduct of its affairs or when it is proved that the offence is attributable to any neglect on the part of such director, manager, etc. The Explanation to the section makes it clear that the expression director includes a partner of a firm who is in charge of the affairs of the firm in question. Where, therefore, a complaint was filed by the Food Inspector for alleged offences punishable under S. 16 read with Ss. 7 and 2 (ix) (j) of the Act against the accused:

Held, S. 7 which prohibits the storing, selling and distribution of misbranded food, clearly implies that the selling, storing and distribution must have taken place with the knowledge that the food in question was misbranded. For, if a person innocently believed that it was not misbranded goods that he was selling, the offence could not be said to have been committed. On the facts of the instant case, held, the acquittal of the accused is correct. The expression 'as far as possible' in S. 10 (7) of Act 37 of 1954 is intended to obviate the necessity of the presence of two persons and securing their signatures if circumstances under which he takes the sample were such that there cannot possibly be two persons present at the time. The present case was not one where witnesses had not been requisitioned but where the testifying witnesses have not fully supported the prosecution case and therefore the question was one of appreciation of their evidence in the light of the evidence of the Food Inspector and not a case for the application of the rule relating to securing the signatures of two persons 'as far as possible' laid down in S. 10 (7). In determining the amount of added water in milk the freezing point test is the fair and safe method. Since the test has not been attempted in the present case, the order of acquittal has to be upheld. 1965 Mad LJ (Cri) 824: 78 Mad LW 476: (1965) 2 Mad LJ 381.

The fat content in the adulterated milk, according to the Public Analyst, was 2.6 per cent, while according to the Central Food Laboratory it was 2.4 per cent. The slight difference would not justify any inference that, notwithstanding the addition of formalin as a preservative in prescribed quantities the sample seized might have undergone such alteration by natural causes as to render the analysis unreliable with regard to proof of adulteration. If the prosecution had established its case prima facie, there was no duty cast upon the prosecution to anticipate some line of defence and to exclude it by further expert testimony. It is open to the petitioners to have insisted upon the examination in the witness-box of some officer, actually responsible for making the chemical analysis, and to have cross-examined him upon the points. The fact that the accused was an employee is not a mitigating circumstance which would justify the imposing of less than the minimum sentence prescribed by the statute for a second offence. 1964 Mad WN 166: (1964) 1 Mad LJ 443: 1964 Mad LJ (Cri) 357: 1964 (2) Cri LJ 560: AIR 1964 Mad 490 (490) (Pts B, C) (Prs 4, 5).

It is well settled that under the Prevention of Food Adulteration Act, the adulterated substance need not be poisonous or injurious. Indeed, it may even be conducive to health. The object of the Act is to see that the substance sold is not mixed with any other thing not permitted by law. Hence, the plea that the adulteration was not prejudicial to health and would not injure anybody, but only added colour to the substance and made it attractive to the buyer cannot be sustained. 1959 Mad WN 161: (1959) 2 Mad LJ 49: 72 Mad LW 117: 1959 Mad LJ (Cri) 491: 1959 Cri LJ 608: ILR (1959) Mad 418: AIR 1959 Mad 185 (185) (Pt A) (Pr 13) (DB).

Sale of adulterated asafoetida (containing coal-tar dye and alcoholic content below prescribed minimum, by a considerable margin), even for purpose of analysis, is punishable under S. 16 (1) (a) of the Act though the article is used to be sold on distinct understanding that it is not to be used for human consumption. As long as the article sold by shopkeeper, or stored by him for sale remains an article which ordinarily enters into the preparation of human food, it is irrelevant to consider whether it was sold to a particular customer on the distinct understanding that he should not use it for preparing food, but should give it only to animals. The crux of the offence is in the sale of food (as defined in the Act). That definition of 'sale' in S. 2 (xiii) of the Act is very wide and covers not merely a sale for human consumption, but a sale for analysis, exposing for sale or having in possession for sale, will all be brought within the scope of the definition of 'sale'. ——Ss. 9 and 20 — Scope of — Appointment of Sanitary Inspectors as Food Inspectors — Validity of — Complaints filed by them — If proper and valid.

There can be little doubt that the Government Analyst, Deputy Government Analyst and the Sanitary Inspectors possess the required qualifications prescribed by Rules 6 and 8 their appointment under Ss. 8 and 9 of the Prevention of Food Adulteration Act cannot on that ground be challenged.

Taking into consideration the definition in the General Clauses Act and the connotation of the word 'Magistrate' in Chapter II of the Code of Criminal Procedure, a Magistrate or a Court of Magistrate can only be regarded as an office and not an official. Thus, in construing S. 15 of the General Clauses Act, the Sanitary Inspectors would be deemed to be a class of officers generally by their official titles in the sense in which it was also used in S. 39 of the Code of Criminal Procedure. The Sanitary Inspectors could be appointed by virtue of their office under S. 9. There is nothing in S. 20 of the Act, which requires that a person should be appointed by the name before he can be authorised to lodge complaints. The case-law on this aspect which is based on the analogous provision of other Central and Provincial Acts also lend support to this view.

In the instant case, held, that an empowerment of Sanitary Inspectors by virtue of their office would be quite valid having regard to the terms of S. 15 of the General Clauses Act. ——Ss. 10 (1) (a) (i), 7 (iii), 16 — Interpretation of penal statutes — Principles — Wholesale dealer selling under licence — Refusal to sell quantity less than a tin — No offence — Powers of Food Inspector under S. 10 (1) (a) (i).

The provisions of Secs. 7 and 16 are penal in their nature and should be interpreted so as to harmonise with the purpose of the Act and not to create conflict or inconsistency between its different provisions.

It is also a well recognised rule that in a penal statute it is the duty of the Court to interpret words of ambiguous meaning in a broad and liberal sense so that they will not become traps for honest, unlearned (in law) and unwary men.

Thus, where a Food Inspector demands by way of purchase six chhataks of mustard oil for sample from a wholesale dealer who is, under the terms of his licence, unable legally to sell less than one tin and the dealer offers to sell one tin of the oil but not six chhataks, he commits no offence. On the other hand, by such a sale, the licensee would have been guilty of an offence of breach of his licence and the food Inspector of the abetment of the offence. Sec. 10 (1) (a) (iii) cannot, therefore, be interpreted as empowering a Food Inspector to take (by purchase) sample of any article of food in such quantity as would result in breach of the conditions of the seller's licence. 1960 All LJ 100.

——S. 10 — Sanitary Inspector appointed Food Inspector by State Government — Sanitary Inspector's power to purchase sample, if Health Officer absent on the spot.

Notification issued by the State Government under S. 9 of the Prevention of Food Adulteration Act appointing the 'Health Officer of the Corporation of the City of Nagpur or in his absence Sanitary Inspector' as Food Inspectors for the purposes of the Act.

Held, that both the Health Officer and the Sanitary Inspector were empowered to exercise the powers of Food Inspectors for the purposes of the Act. The only limitation on the powers of the Sanitary Inspector was that if the Health Officer himself was present at any particular occasion then it would not be competent for the Sanitary Inspector to take any action. The expression 'in his absence' did not mean absence of Health Officer from duty altogether on that day but it means his absence at the spot when the Sanitary Inspector exercises the powers under the Act. 1959 Nag LJ (Notes) 31.

3. Cost shall be paid — Sub-sec. (3).

——Ss. 10 and 16 (1) (c) — Powers of Food Inspector — Power and duty — Importance of distinction — Refusal to accept price of sample by vendor — Offence.

Section 10 is headed as 'Powers of Food Inspector'. But all the sub-sections of Sec. 10 do not deal with powers of a Food Inspector, some deal with his power and some with his duties. There is a distinction between 'power' and 'duty'. 'Power' is a thing that may be done or is authorised to be done while 'duty' is a thing which must be done. The distinction between 'power' and 'duty' has this importance that the legislature may punish a vendor for preventing an Inspector from exercising his powers under the Act but has no necessity to punish him for preventing him from performing his duties towards him. If the exercise of the powers is prevented, the public would suffer because the enforcement of the provisions of the Act would be prevented, but if the performance of the duties is prevented, only the vendor will suffer and he need not be punished further.

By refusing to accept the price of the sample the vendors might prevent the Inspector from performing his duty but certainly they do not prevent him from exercising a power. The legislature never intended to punish a vendor for refusing to accept the price. 1959 Cr LJ 1382: 1959 All LJ 874: 1959 All WR (HC) 670: 1960 All Cr R 14: AIR 1959 All 753 (754) (Pt B) (Pr 2).

4. "He may seize" — Sub-sec. (4).

——Ss. 10 (4) and 10 (7) and R. 9 (c) of the Rules — Respective scope — Seizure of food articles by Food Inspector — Prior suspicion of Food Inspector as to adulteration — Necessity — Requirement as to presence of two witnesses at the time of seizure — Whether mandatory — Non-compliance — Effect.

Under Sec. 10 (4) of the Prevention of Food Adulteration Act and R. 9 (c) of the Rules made thereunder it is not the confirmed suspicion of the Food Inspector that is made a condition precedent while making out samples of the suspected articles of food, but the existence of reasons for entertaining a suspicion would be enough to make the Food Inspector move in the matter. Therefore, to make it appear that the above provisions are in the nature of a condition precedent, whereby the Food Inspector should have a confirmed view in regard to a suspicion as to the adulteration or the misbranding of the food article is unwarranted.

The employment of the word 'shall' in Sec. 10 (7) of the Act prima facie makes it appear that the direction to call not less than two persons to be present and to take their signatures is mandatory. But, the words that follow, viz., 'as far as possible' cannot but be said to qualify the force of that term so as to make it not applicable invariably in all cases. While, therefore, compliance with the provisions of Section 10 (7) of the Act is indispensable, exceptional circumstances must be proved to the hilt for bringing a particular case within the proviso creating the exception by the use of the words 'as far as possible', for making out that the direction contained therein is impossible of compliance. (1963) 1 Andh WR 296: 1963 Mad LJ (Cri) 213: 1964 (1) Cri LJ 24 (2): AIR 1964 Andh Pra 25 (26) (Pt A) (Pr 4).

——S. 10 (5), Proviso 2 — Search by Food Inspector — Rule 165 (c), Bihar Police Manual not applicable — Non-compliance with S. 103, Criminal P. C. does not vitiate search.

As the second proviso to Sec. 10 (5) of Prevention of Food Adulteration Act stands, it is not open to the Court to import the rules of the Bihar Police Manual into the provisions of Sec. 10 and to strike down the action taken by the Food Inspector in exercise of his powers under Sec. 10 of the Act as illegal or invalid by reason of non-compliance with the provisions of the Police Manual. Besides, a contravention of the provision of search contained in S. 108 of the Code of Criminal Procedure has not the effect of vitiating the search or the legality of the proceeding. But it undoubtedly casts a duty upon the court to examine the evidence regarding the seizure with greater care. Under sub-section (7) of Section 10 of the Prevention of Food Adulteration Act, the Food Inspector shall as far as possible call not less than two witnesses to be present when he takes a sample and obtain their signatures. This procedure must be complied with in every case by the Inspector. The expression as far as possible is intended to obviate the necessity of the witnesses if the circumstances under which he takes the sample were such that there could not possibly be two persons present at the time; as for example in a solitary place at a late hour. ——S. 10 (7)—Where there was no doubt about the fact of seizure of the milk from the accused and the fact that it was sold by the accused, it must be held that the act of the food inspector in getting only one mediator and failing to get two mediators does not mean that the sale and seizure cannot be acted upon for the purpose of finding the accused quilty. ——S. 10 (7) — Non-compliance with — Effect — Seizure of milk sold by accused — Food Inspector getting only one mediator instead of two — Still accused may be found guilty — Criminal P. C. (1898), S. 103 (1).

Section 103 (1), Cr. P. C., is stricter than S. 10 (7) because it does not contain the words "as far as possible". In the case of an illegality of the seizure in not complying with the provisions in S. 10 (7), the Court will be inclined to examine carefully the evidence regarding the seizure. No further consequence ensues. So, where there was no doubt about the fact of seizure of the milk from the accused and the fact that it was sold by the accused, it must be held that the act of the Food Inspector in getting only one mediator and failing to get two mediators does not mean that the sale and seizure cannot be acted upon for the purpose of finding the accused guilty. ——S. 10 (7) — Taking of sample — Presence of respectable witnesses — When necessary.

One of the meanings which can be assigned to the use of the words "as far as possible" in S. 10 (7) is that the sample should be taken in the presence of two or more respectable witnesses unless they are not available. But where it appears that what the prosecution witnesses are deposing is true and the accused has not in any way been prejudiced by the non-compliance with Sec. 10 (7), the law should take its normal course, namely, that the guilty person should be punished.

In Sec. 10 (7) of the Prevention of Food Adulteration Act the legislature intentionally added the words "as far as possible". Consequently, it will be improper to apply the case law of Sec. 103, Cr. P. C., with the same rigour to cases under that Act. AIR 1959 Mad 118, Dissented from. 1959

——S. 10 (7) — Taking of samples — Presence of two persons of locality — Provision not mandatory — Words 'as far as possible' in the section clearly indicate that there might be circumstances where it may not be possible for Food Inspector to strictly comply with the provision — Acquitting accused merely on the ground of non-compliance with the provision is therefore not justifiable. ILR (1963) Andh Pra 739.

——S. 10 (7) — Scope of — If mandatory.

Sub-section (7) of Sec. 10 of the Prevention of Food Adulteration Act requires a Food Inspector to do no more than call two persons to witness the seizure and the sampling of food suspected to be adulterated. He has no power to compel them to be present. The words 'as far as possible' occurring in sub-sec. (7) of S. 10 indicate that this is a mere directory provision and not a mandatory provision. 1961 Mad LJ (Cri) 495: (1961) 2 Andh WR 90.

——S. 10 (7) — Scope — Non-compliance — Effect.

The requirements in sub-sec. (7) of Sec. 10 of the Prevention of Food Adulteration Act that a panchanama should be prepared in the presence of the mediators, may be regarded as mandatory. But mere violation or failure to comply with that provision would not, by itself, affect the legality or the validity of the act of the Food Inspector concerned. Non-compliance with the provisions will be curable irregularity and the trial is not vitiated. AIR 1959 Mad 118, Disting. Such carelessness or callousness, however, is unbecoming of the conduct of responsible officers entrusted with the obligation of performing the duties of a public office. 1960 Cri LJ 212: AIR 1960 Andh Pra 96 (97, 98) (Pt B) (Prs 6, 9).

——S. 10 (7) — Non-compliance with — Effect on legality of conviction.

It cannot be said that in every case where there is a non-compliance with Sec. 10 (7), the conviction would be illegal; it is a curable irregularity. 1958 Andh LT 760.

——S. 10 (7) — Scope and object — Procedure to be followed when taking samples — Non-compliance with — Effect of — Trial not vitiated.

Sub-section (1) of Sec. 10 of Prevention of Food Adulteration Act does not expressly state that a memorandum has to be prepared, when a sample is taken, but when read along with sub-sec. (7) it becomes abundantly clear that the Food Inspector has to draw up a memorandum about the taking of the sample and it is in this memo. that the signature of the witnesses has to be obtained. The non-compliance with the provision of Section 10 (7) of the Act is only an irregularity and the question which would arise on such non-compliance would be whether the accused is prejudiced and whether the evidence adduced is worthy to be acted upon. It is only an irregularity which per se does not vitiate the proceedings relating to the taking of the sample or the subsequent prosecution based thereon. (1965) Mad LJ (Cri) 335: 1964 Ker LT 198: 1964 (2) Cri LJ 417 (2): ILR (1964) 1 Ker 589: AIR 1964 Ker 261 (262) (Pt A) (Prs 4, 5).

Where Food Inspector had not complied with the provisions of Sec. 10 (7), inasmuch as he did not call two persons to be present at the time he took samples of the articles, even though the shop of the accused was situated in the bazaar and that the samples were not taken in clean bottles as required by R. 14 :

——S. 10 (7) — 'As far as' — Effect.

The phrase 'as far as possible' does not give the Food Inspector power to dispense with the witnesess by just stating that he could not find any. It is meant only to obviate the difficult task of getting the witnesses in cases where the action occurs in isolated places, or at times during the day or night when it is not usual to find people walking about. The provision is mandatory and in case it is not complied with the Court cannot rightly convict the accused. 1959 Ker LR 558: 1959 Ker LT 657: (1959) Mad LJ (Cr) 821: 1959 Ker LJ 1005.

——S. 10 (7) — Non-compliance with — Effect — Trial — If vitiated.

The direction given by Sec. 10 (7) is prefixed by the words 'as far as possible' and consequently, it is not absolute in its terms. It gives a discretion to the food inspector to call at least two witnesses if the circumstances of the case permit it, of which he is made the Judge. Further, no penalty is prescribed for any non-compliance. The language thus shows that the provision for calling two persons as witnesses is directory and not mandatory, and consequently the irregularity in not complying with it in terms would not vitiate the whole trial.

The purpose of the safeguard contained in Section 10 (7) is that the act of the food inspector in taking a sample should be above suspicion and free from any doubt. Consequently, where the precaution provided in the Act, e. g., the calling of two witnesses, is not taken, on the analogy of Sec. 103 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, the taking of the sample has to be scrutinized with greater care and caution. 1960 MPC 88: 1960 MPLJ 273: 1960 Jab LJ 354: 1960 Cr LJ 913: ILR (1959) Madh Pra 617: AIR 1960 Madh Pra 179 (180) (Pr 4).

——S. 10 (7) — Scope — Non-compliance — If vitiates prosecution.

A contravention of Sec. 10 (7) does not per se vitiate the prosecution. Essential test is one of prejudice to the accused apart from the reliability of the evidence adduced. 37 Mys LJ 948: 1960 Cr LJ 494: 1960 Mad LJ (Cr) 324: AIR 1960 Mys 80 (82) (Pt C) (Pr 8) (DB).

——Ss. 10 (7) and 16 (1) (i) — Mandatory provisions of Sec. 10 (7) not complied with — Accused tried under S. 16 (1) (i), held entitled to acquittal.

Where in a case in which the accused was tried under Sec. 16 (1) (a) (i) of the Act, it was clear from the evidence that there were number of shops in the close proximity of the accused's shop and there were other persons near about the spot at the time when the sample was taken by the Food Inspector at about 3 P. M. But the Food Inspector did not even care to ask any of those persons to witness the transaction, and one of the two persons taken by the Food Inspector as witnesses was his peon who could not be said to be an independent person and the other person stated that he actually reached after the sample had been taken by the Food Inspector:

Held, that the provisions of sub-section (7) of Sec. 10 had not been complied with which were mandatory and therefore the accused was entitled to acquittal. When in a particular case sample was not taken in the presence of two persons it would be for the prosecution to satisfy the Court that it was not on account of any desire to circumvent the provisions of Sec. 10 (7) but due to the non-availability of witnesses or some such cause. AIR 1962 Punj 548, Foll. 1965 Cur LJ 287: 67 Pun LR 425: 1965 (2) Cri LJ 406: AIR 1965 Punj 366 (366) (Prs 3, 4).

——S. 10 (7) — Non-compliance with — Prosecution held not illegal.

Section 10 (7) merely prescribes a procedure of taking samples of the articles suspected to be adulterated and it would be unreasonable to hold that any non-compliance with it however minor it may be, would render the prosecution based upon such taking of samples illegal. 65 Pun LR 1083: 1964 (1) Cri LJ 606 (606, 607) (Pt A) (Pr 3).

——S. 10 (7) — Scope — Provision is mandatory— Memo. to be prepared under Sec. 10 (7) by Food Inspector — Composite memo. under Sec. 10 (7) and Sec. 11 not invalid — Non-compliance with Sec. 10 (7) by itself does not render trial invalid.

The provisions of sub-section (7) of Section 10 are mandatoy, and not merely directory, and it is the duty of the Food Inspector to comply with the same unless it is impossible to secure the attendance of two persons at the time he takes a sample or does any of the acts under sub-secs. (1), (4) and (6) of Sec. 10. Accordingly, when in a particular case sample is not taken in the presence of two persons, it would be for the prosecution to satisfy the Court that it was not on account of any desire to circumvent the provisions of sub-section (7) of Sec. 10 but due to the non-availability of witnesses or some such cause.

Sub-section (1) (a) of Sec. 10 does not expressly state that a memo. has to be prepared when a sample is taken by a Food Inspector, but when it is read along with sub-section (7) the Food Inspector has to draw up a memo. about the taking of sample, and it is on this memo. that the signatures of at least two witnesses have to be obtained. The memo. which only recites that the sample of milk had been divided into three parts and sealed in three separate bottles is not the memo. which is required to be prepared under sub-sec. (7) of S. 10. Since no forms for memos. are prescribed under Section 10 (1) read with sub-section (7) and Section 11, composite memo. relating to the taking of sample, its division into three parts and handing over of one of such parts to the person from whom the sample is taken, would meet the requirements of law, if it is attested by two independent persons.

The failure to comply with Sec. 10 (7) by itself, would not vitiate the proceedings regarding the taking of samples or affect the validity of the prosecution based upon such irregular action of the Food Inspector. AIR 1959 Mad 118, Not foll.; AIR 1960 Mys 80 and AIR 1960 Andh Pra 96 and AIR 1960 Madh Pra 179 and AIR 1960 Ker 356 and AIR 1956 SC 411 and AIR 1946 PC 16, Rel. on. ——S. 10 (7) — Non-compliance — Effect.

Non-compliance with S. 10 (7) of the Prevention of Food Adulteration Act by the Food Inspector would not vitiate the trial of a person for an offence under the Act unless such non-compliance has caused prejudice to the accused. The mere fact that the Inspector has failed to call two witnesses would not be sufficient. ILR (1963) 13 Raj 351: 1963 Raj LW 109.

8. Examination of persons as witnesses in trial, if necessary.

——S. 10 (7) — Scope — Compliance — Examination of search witness in Court — Omission — Effect.

The law does not require that any witness is to be examined in Court though it is desirable that the prosecution should examine all the search witnesses if possible, to dispel all doubts about the manner in which the sample was taken and about the place from where and the person from whom the sample was taken, in other words, to put the entire transaction being above board. This is all the more necessary in view of the severe nature of the penalty prescribed by the Act and also in view of the fact that for a second conviction imprisonment is compulsory. But where out of two witnesses called by the Food Inspector at the time of taking the sample only one was available for examination by the prosecution and his evidence which was accepted by the Magistrate and lower appellate Court was critized in second appeal on the ground that he was not a witness who was at all reliable or trustworthy or independent as he was not a witness of locality and was a person who always accompanied the Food Inspector.

Held, that it could not be said that there was no compliance with Sec. 10 (7) of the Act. 1963 (1) Cri LJ 658 (661, 662) (Pt B) (Pr 9) (Cal).

——S. 10 (7) — Evidence — Duty of prosecution, at trial.

Law does not require that the witnesses called by the Food Inspector while taking action under sub-secs. 1 (a), 2, 4 or 6, or any of them should be examined at the time of trial. In the circumstances of any particular case, the prosecution may choose to examine one or more of these witnesses.

If the Court is unable to place full faith on the evidence of the concerned Food Inspector the non-examination of the attestors may assume importance. 37 Mys LJ 948: 1960 Cr LJ 494: 1960 Mad LJ (Cr) 324: AIR 1960 Mys 80 (82) (Pt B) (Pr 7) (DB).

9. Restrictions on powers of Food Inspector — Sub-sec. (9) if contravenes Art. 19 of the Constitution.

——S. 10 — Constitution of India (1950), Articles 14 and 19 — Powers vested in Food Inspectors — Not arbitrary — Standards of food prescribed by rules — Whether unrelated to conditions of each State and region.

In the face of the safeguards and especially the one contained in Section 10 (9) of the Act, which serves as a deterrent to the Inspectors in that behalf and several rules enacted in regard to the procedure to be followed by the Food Inspectors in the matter of obtaining samples, it is idle to contend that the Food Inspectors are conferred with large powers which are likely to be abused and which will result in the harassment of the petitioners. The Food Inspectors are subject to various restrictions and they could act only in accordance with the Rules framed under the enactment and not arbitrarily.

Even assuming that this amounts to a restriction on trade or business, it is certainly a reasonable restriction within the contemplation of Art. 19 (6) of the Constitution and it is within the domain of the Parliament to impose such restrictions if it is in the public interest and for public good.

The standards for testing the contents of milk are not fixed in the Act but under the Rules. So, it is only the Rules that can be impeached. (1963) 2 An WR 7: (1963) 2 An LT 18: AIR 1964 Andh Pra 501 (503) (Pt B) (Pr 14) (DB).

4. Evidence and proof.
5. Practice and procedure.

●——Ss. 11 and 2 (xiii) — Sale to Food Inspector for analysis — Transaction though not consensual is still a sale under Act.

The Act gives a special definition of 'sale' in Section 2 (xiii) which specifically includes within its ambit a sale for analysis. A sale for analysis must be regarded as sale even if the transaction contains an element of compulsion. A contract comes into existence by the acceptance of a proposal made by one person to another by that other person. The latter is not bound to accept the proposal. It may not, however, necessarily follow that where that other person had no choice but to accept the proposal to the transaction would never amount to a contract. ——S. 11 — Scope — Vendor's refusal to accept notice given by Food Inspector and one part of sample — Offence — S. 16 (1) (c) — Applicability.

Where the Food Inspector offers a notice and one part of the sample to the vendors, he fully performs his duties by doing so. The vendors by refusing to accept the notice and one part of the sample cannot, therefore, be said to have prevented him from performing his duties: in any case they cannot be said to have prevented him from exercising his powers. These two provisions have been enacted in the interests of the vendor and the legislature could not have contemplated to punish him for doing an act to prevent their compliance. 1959 Cri LJ 1382: 1959 All LJ 874: 1959 All WR (HC) 670: 1960 All Cr R 14: AIR 1959 All 753 (754) (Pt C) (Pr 2).

In the case of a firm manufacturing aerated waters in some of which saccharine is used as a sweetening element, while in others only some form of sugar and not sachharine is used, it is better if the report of the analyst contains some indication of the quantity of saccharine because if the quantity of saccharine is only slight, its presence might be due to an accident, it being possible for traces of saccharine to remain in a bottle which had not properly been washed before being filled with liquid sweetened with sugar. SYNOPSIS

(Prevention of Food Adulteration Act (1954), S. 13.)

1. Dispatch of sample by Court to Central Food Laboratory for analysis — Sub-s. (2).
2. Certificate of Director of Central Food Laboratory to supersede the report of the Public Analyst — Sub-section (3).
3. Report or certificate to be used as evidence — Sub-s. (5).

7. Evidence and proof.
8. Practice and procedure.

1. Dispatch of sample by Court to Central Food Laboratory for analysis — Sub-s. (2).

——Ss. 13 and 11 — Third part of sample retained by Food Inspector must be produced before Court when demanded, to send for examination by Director — Failure to produce sample to test veracity of Public Analyst's report, would give the accused benefit of doubt — Provisions are mandatory — Word 'shall' used in section to be construed as 'must' — Interpretation of Statutes — C. P. Code (1908), Preamble.

Held, that since the accused had been denied the right to get the sample tested by the Director, it would not be safe to hold him guilty of the offence and it would be proper to give the accused the benefit of doubt. Section 13 (2) of the Act gives an option both to the accused vendor and the complainant to have either the part of sample in their respective possession or the part of the sample in possession of the other side sent to the Director. Held, further that the provisions of Section 11 are mandatory. Section 11 (1) uses the word 'shall' and it is well established that the word 'shall' is normally to be construed as mandatory, that is, as 'must' and not as directory, that is, as 'may'. But the use of the word 'shall' is not conclusive. The relevant provisions of Sections 11 and 13 require that the third part shall be produced and, on application of the accused, the Court shall send it to the Director. Moreover, where an act affects private rights, the prescribed formalities must be strictly performed. Even if it be assumed that the duty to produce the third part of the sample retained by the Food Inspector under Section 11 (1) (c) (iii) is discretionary, the discretion would in law, be complied with a duty to exercise it when the occasion arises, namely, when a demand is made for its production. It is a duty which cannot be shirked or shelved or evaded. (1879-80) 5 AC 214; AIR 1952 SC 16 and AIR 1963 SC 1618, Rel. on. (1964) 9 Fac LR 150: 1964 All LJ 893: 1964 All Cr R 390: 1964 All WR (HC) 528.

——Ss. 13 (2) and 11 (1) (c), (i) and (iii) — Scope of S. 13 (2) — Magistrate cannot upon an application by one party call for sample retained with other party.

Section 13 (2) provides for making an application to the Court for sending one or the other sample to the Central Food Laboratory for a certificate. The section does not authorise the Magistrate upon an application of one party to call for the sample retained with the other party. And the true meaning of the sub-section is that the accused vendor can make an application for sending the sample retained with him and he cannot ask the Magistrate to call for the sample retained with the Food Inspector to be utilised upon his application. Similarly the complainant by his application may ask the Magistrate to send the sample retained with him but he cannot ask the Magistrate to call for the sample retained with the accused vendor.

Moreover Section 11 (2) gives key to the whole problem, when it provides that if at the stage of Section 11 the accused vendor has not accepted the sample mentioned in sub-cl. (i) of Section 11 (1) (c) then that sample will be divided into two parts as provided in Section 11 (2) for production in case legal proceedings are taken. This means that if having refused at that stage, later at the stage of Section 13 the accused vendor makes an application under Section 13 (2) then the sample held under S. 11 (2) will be utilised for making direction upon such an application. Otherwise Section 11 (2) would be reduced to an unnecessary appendage. ILR (1961) 2 Cal 468.

Held, (i) that the conviction of the accused could not be sustained on the basis of the report of the public Analyst since his opinion was based upon the mean standard which was his own creation and had no statutory support (ii) that the report did not state what was the actual percentage of water in the sample and unless that was specified it was not possible for the Courts to test the accuracy of his opinion since standards vary. It is the Court not the public Analyst who is the ultimate judge of the question. The report must therefore be ignored. 1960 All WR (HC) 323: 1960 All LJ 318: 1960 All Cri R 214: 1960 Cri LJ 1056 (2): AIR 1960 All 504 (505) (Prs 5, 7).

——S. 13 (5), Proviso — Finality attaches to the facts found on factual data in respect of article by Director upon analysis of article — Whether article is adulterated has to be decided by Court — It is a question of law — Accused can show that article is not adulterated by showing that the essential ingredients are likely to disappear upon preparation of the article. (1961) 2 Guj LR 735: 1962 (1) Cri LJ 417: AIR 1962 Guj 44 (45) (Pt A) (Pr 5) (DB).

——S. 13 (5), Proviso — Art. 14 of the Constitution is not violated.

The proviso deprives the accused of his right to challenge the correctness of the facts stated in the certificate. But the object behind this provision is to have finality of a test and an analysis so as to prevent prolonged trials. The certificate of the Director does not conclude the trial. Whether the article of food is adulterated is to be decided by Court. It is a question of law which the Court alone can decide. Therefore the proviso to Section 13 (5) is not in violation of Article 14. (1961) 2 Guj LR 735: 1962 (1) Cr LJ 417: AIR 1962 Guj 44 (47, 48) (Pt B) (Prs 8, 9) (DB).

——S. 13 (5). Proviso — Proviso is not unconstitutional as infringing Art. 19 (1) of the Constitution.

Since the proviso to Section 13 (5) lays down a rule of evidence, it cannot be said to have the effect of a restriction or a restraint upon the right of an accused person to practice his profession or to carry on his occupation, trade or business. AIR 1957 SC 688. Applied. (1961) 2 Guj LR 735: 1962 (1) Cr LJ 417: AIR 1962 Guj 44 (49, 50) (Pt C) (Prs 11, 13) (DB).

——S. 13 (3) — Report of Central Food Laboratory — Evidentiary value.

Finality and conclusiveness have been attached only to the facts stated in the report of the Central Food Laboratory. It is not, however, conclusive as to any other matter and it may still have to be ascertained whether adulteration as disclosed in the report of the Central Food Laboratory is due to certain factors for which an accused could not be held responsible. (1965) 67 Pun LR 941.

The Form of Report presented under R. 7 (3), namely, Form III, is not in contravention of Form VI prescribed under Rule 12 and is not liable to be declared ultra vires under S. 11 (1) (a). Under Rule 7 (3) there is an option to the Public Analyst either to analyse the sample himself or cause it to be analysed by some other competent person. There is no real inconsistency between Form III as amended in 1960 and Form VI framed under Rule 12 inasmuch as the analysis done by a qualified assistant to the Public Analyst, under the latter's supervision would be deemed to be an analysis by the Public Analyst himself.

Sub-section (5) of Section 13 clearly makes the report of public analyst admissible in evidence. It is for the Court of fact which has to consider it, to attach to it what value it can. Under sub-section (2) of Section 13 the accused vendor or the complainant on payment of the prescribed fee, can apply to the Court for sending a sample of the allegedly adulterated commodity taken under Section 11 to the Director of Central Food Laboratory for a certificate. This certificate would supersede the report of the Public Analyst. This certificate is made admissible in evidence under sub-section (5) and is given finality of the facts contained therein by the proviso to that sub-section. Otherwise if such opinion were to be held to be conclusive evidence about the nature of the article of food the merit of the case against the accused would really be decided by the Public Analyst and not by the Court and the Court just gives its authority to the conclusion of the Public Analyst and this cannot be the position in law. (1963) MLJ (Cr) 191: ILR (1962) 1 Ker 430: 1962 Ker LT 95: 1963 (1) Cr LJ 124 (125, 126) (Prs 7, 11) (Ker).

——S. 13 (5) — Analyst's report — Contents of — Information given in should be complete — Prosecution should supplement if incomplete.

In cases under the Prevention of Food Adulteration Act where the main item of evidence to sustain the charge is the Analyst's report, the information given in the report should be as full and complete as could possibly be, so that, in a given case, the Court which is competent to treat the report as evidence may not be confronted with lacunae, which can only be filled in by examining the expert in Court. It is also the duty of the prosecutors where the information contained in the certificate is not full and complete to supplement it by citing the Analyst. ILR (1962) 2 Ker 243.

——S. 13 (5) — Report of Analyst — Contents — Data on which conclusion based — Necessity to furnish — Criminal P. C. (1898), S. 510 — Evidence Act (1872), Ss. 45 and 46.

It is not possible to lay down any hard and fast rule as to what particulars should be shown in the Analyst's report as the same may vary in each case. Thus, while it may be necessary to give the data regarding the proportion of the component parts in commodities like milk, ghee, etc. the position may be different where the article sold may be misbranded or entirely different from what it purported to be. In a prosecution under S. 7 (2) read with S. 16 of the Prevention of Food Adulteration Act on the ground that the accused sold the lac dhal as "thuvara parippu" the prosecution relied upon the certificate of the public analyst which stated that the commodity was not thuvara-parippu but lac dhal and this was arrived at as a result of microscopic exmination. The defence of the accused was that it was not possible to ascertain from the certificate as to what the characteristics noticed by the analyst were and it ought not to be relied upon.

Held, that the criticism was not unfounded. In view of the fact that the transaction was more than two years old, permission to examine the analyst was denied and the accused was acquitted. ——Ss. 13 (5), 7 and 17 (1) — Certificate of Public Analyst — Contents — Evidence Act (1872), Ss. 45 and 46.

The certificate of Public Analyst should contain the factual data which the analysis would reveal and not merely his opinion as to what that data indicates about the nature of the article of food. In the absence of such data, the certificate cannot be accepted as conclusive proof for prosecuting the accused. (1948) 2 All ER 1056, Rel. on.

——S. 13 — Report of Public Analyst — Reports are per se evidence.

Reports of the Public Analyst are per se evidence by reason of S. 13 of the Act. ——S. 13 — Report of public analyst — Time and date of examination of article should be mentioned.

Without the date of examination in the report by the Public Analyst it becomes difficult for the Court to know as to when the articles of food were examined by him, which leaves room for the argument that by the time they were analysed the articles of food had undergone a change. It is, therefore, desirable that the Public Analyst in report should mention the time and date of the examination of the articles of food sent to them for analysis, more so because under Section 13 (5) the report is used as evidence of the facts stated therein without the statement of the Public Analysts in Court. 1962 Raj LW 279: 1963 (1) Cri LJ 221: ILR (1962) 12 Raj 626: AIR 1963 Raj 17 (19) (Pt A) (Pr 5).

——S. 13 (5) and 23 — Prevention of Food Adulteration Rules, Rr. 7 and 20 — Belated analysis of milk — Presumption — Report of public analyst bearing date a month after taking of sample — Inference.

In the case of analysis of milk the Court has to be satisfied that the public analyst has conducted the analysis without any avoidable delay. Further, in view of Rule 7 (3) of the Rules in a case where the date of analysis is not mentioned in the report and the report is dated more than a month after the date of receipt of the sample, the presumption would arise that the analysis was not done immediately on receipt of the sample, but much later. It is for the prosecution, therefore, to rebut that presumption by examining the Public Analyst. Otherwise, the report will not be accepted as showing the contents of fat and non-fat solids at the time of taking the sample. Where no standard has been fixed under the rules for mixed milk of cow and buffalo, whether the sample taken is adulterated or not should be determined on the basis of the standard fixed under the rules for cow's milk. If the fat and non-fatty contents of the sample are less than those as fixed for cow's milk under the rules; then the sample must be held to be adulterated; but if the contents of the sample are above the standard prescribed for cow's milk then it will not be expedient in the interest of justice to convict the milk-vendor under S. 16/7 by holding that the milk was adulterated by applying the standard fixed for buffalo-milk. Where water is added to curd so as to reduce the solid-not-fats contents in the product to less than 8.5 per cent, and it is sold as skimmed buttermilk, the seller commits an offence under S. 16 (1) read with S. 7 (1) of the Act.

The non-specification of a standard for buttermilk does not absolve a vendor from conforming to the standard that is necessarily implied in respect of buttermilk. It is true that a strict construction should be adopted regarding a penal statute and that it is only when the thing charged is an offence within the plain meaning of the words used in the statute that Courts should hold that any offence is committed and that whenever there is doubt the construction favourable to the accused should be preferred. But there can also be no doubt that so far as possible, Courts should adopt the interpretation which will promote and further the object and policy of the legislation and suppress the mischief which the statute was enacted to prevent. Held, that Form No. III as it originally stood was amended by the Government of India's notification published in the U. P. Thus it must be held that the report submitted by the Public Analyst was in accordance with law and the learned Sessions Judge was wrong in holding it otherwise, and acquitting the accused on that ground. AIR 1964 All 418, Rel. on.

The argument that the sample was analysed on the day next it was taken and it could not have remained in a proper condition for analysis could not be accepted in view of the statement of the Food Inspector that a preservative formation was added to the sample. And therefore, the report of the Analyst could not have been doubted on the ground of the sample having undergone a change. The report of the Analyst being thus admissible in evidence, the accused must be held to have committed the offence punishable under S. 16 read with S. 7 (1) of the Food Adulteration Act. 6. Preventing a Food Inspector from taking a sample.

——S. 16 (b) — Applicability — Disappearance of seller from shop — If prevention.

If a person selling the article leaves the shop he prevents the Food Inspector from taking sample as authorised by the Act. The fact that the Food Inspector could have taken away the entire stock under S. 10 (4) would not amount to taking of sample. In cases of prevention overt act on the part of the accused is not necessary. AIR 1954 Mad 199, Rel. on; AIR 1957 Punj 99, Diss. from. ILR (1960) 2 All 755: 1960 All Cr R 310: 1960 All LJ 649: 1960 All WR (HC) 490: 1961 (1) Cri LJ 204: AIR 1961 All 103 (104) (Prs 7, 8) (DB).

——S. 16 (1) (b) — Refusal of vendor to receive price of sample and notice and to sign receipt and labels — Offence.

The refusal of the vendors to receive the price of the sample and the notice and to sign the receipt and the labels does not amount to their preventing the Inspector from taking a sample and hence, the vendors cannot be said to have committed the offence under S. 16 (1) (b) by such refusal.

There is no provision in the Act which authorises a Food Inspector to require the vendor to sign the labels put on the bottles in which he keeps the three portions of the sample or to sign a receipt for the price of the sample paid to him, therefore, the vendors commit no offence whatsoever by refusing to sign the labels or the receipt for the price. 1959 Cri LJ 1382: 1959 All LJ 874: 1959 All WR (HC) 670: 1960 All Cr R 14: AIR 1959 All 753 (754) (Pt A) (Pr 2).

——S. 16 (1) (b) and (c) — Running away when stopped by a Food Inspector — If an offence.

Under S. 10 (8) of the Prevention of Food Adulteration Act a Food Inspector is authorised to exercise the powers of a Police Officer. Hence when a Food Inspector stopped a person carrying milk and the person places the can down and takes to his heels, he is certainly preventing the Food Inspector from discharging his duty and is guilty of an offence under S. 16 (1) (b) of the Act. (1964) MLJ (Cr) 661: 1965 (1) Cri LJ 389 (390) (Pr 2) (Mad).

——S. 16 (1) (b) — Applicability — Preventing an Inspector from taking sample — When an offence — Necessity for witnesses — When arises.

In order to make out a case that an offence under S. 16 (1) (b) of the Prevention of Food Adulteration Act has been committed, it should be established that the articles of food, a sample of which was sought to be taken by the Inspector and which was prevented was intended for sale. If the article was in a shop, then there would be a presumption that it was intended for sale. But where it was in a house it should be proved that it was intended for sale. Only then the prevention of an Inspector from taking sample would amount to an offence under S. 16 (1) (b) of the Act. Section 10 (7) of the Act relating to witnesses being taken, will be attracted only when a sample is taken. 8. Giving false warranty.

——Ss. 16 (1) (g) and 19 (2) — Scope and applicability — Requirements of warranty. Every person who in respect of an article or substance sold by him in respect of which a warranty might be pleaded under the Act gives to the purchaser a false warranty in writing is guilty of the offence under S. 16 (1) (g). A label or cash bill cannot be termed as a warranty unless it falls within the proviso to R. 12-A. The wording in S. 19 (2) (1) shows that the warranty must have been obtained by the vendor at the time of his purchase of the article in question. The undertaking to give a warranty must have been one of the terms of the contract of purchase and it is only then that the warranty obtained subsequently can be availed of as a defence. Warranty under S. 19 must be in writing and in the prescribed form. It makes no difference whether the form was prescribed by the rules only in 1956. Therefore an advertisement circular is not a warranty as contemplated under the Act and the accused cannot be found guilty of the offence of issuing a false warranty. (1965) MLJ (Cri) 224: 1963 Ker LT 1040: 1963 Ker LJ 1189.

——S. 16 — Prevention of Food Adulteration Rules (1955), Rr. 5 and 44 (b) — Sale of mixed milk of cow and buffalo — Test of mean standard for cow and buffalo milk — If justified — Opinion of Public Analyst — Value of.

Held, on facts (i) that the conviction of the accused could not be sustained on the basis of the report of the Public Analyst since his opinion that the sample was adulterated was based upon the mean standard which was his own creation and had no statutory support. There are no statutory standards of quality or statutory limits of componental variability for mixed milk of cow and buffalo. Courts of law would refuse to accord it any sanctity until it has received statutory acknowledgment. (ii) That the report of the Public Analyst did not state what was the actual percentage of water in the sample and unless that was specified it was not possible for the Court to test the accuracy of his opinion since standards vary for various reasons. It is the Court, not the Public Analyst, who is the ultimate Judge of the question. The report must, therefore, be ignored altogether. (1896) 1 QB 202 and (1894) 1 QB 478. ——S. 16 (1) (g) (ii), Proviso — Second offence — Proof of previous conviction — Oral evidence — Admissibility.

Section 16 prescribes a minimum sentence in case of second offence. Two special modes for proving previous conviction have been laid down in S. 511, Criminal P. C. Further, a judgment of conviction has to be in writing. This is therefore, a matter required by law to be reduced to the form of a document. According to S. 91, Evidence Act, such matter can be proved either from the document itself or from secondary evidence when such secondary evidence is admissible. Where it has not been suggested that the original judgment of previous conviction has been lost, oral evidence could not be led to prove the previous conviction. The previous conviction could perhaps be proved from an admission of the accused. 1959 All LJ 462: 1959 Cri LJ 1263: ILR (1960) 1 All 13: AIR 1959 All 695 (695, 696) (Pt A) (Prs 5, 9, 10, 11).

——Ss. 16 (1) (a), 7 (i) and 11 (5) (b) — Prevention of Food Adulteration Rules, R. 14 — Taking of sample — Compliance with rule — Necessity — Absence of evidence of such compliance — Effect.

In cases under the Prevention of Food Adulteration Act where penalties are severe the requirements in the matter of taking samples should be very carefully observed. Prevention of Food Adulteration Rules do not deal in details with the manner or procedure of taking samples except what is provided in R. 14.

A sample of til oil taken by the Food Inspector having been found not to be in conformity with the required standards as laid down in App. B to the Act the owner of the oil mill was prosecuted under Ss. 16 (1) (a) (i) and 7 (i) of the Act and the oil seized was ordered to be destroyed. The Food Inspector in his evidence stated merely that all formalities were observed.

Held, that as the Food Inspector did not describe how or in what manner he took the sample of oil from the tank or the drum it could not be said with certainty that the sample was taken in dry and clear phials and it could not be said with certainty that the analysis had been correct and could be depended upon. The fact that the certificate does not reveal what type of tests were conducted by the analyst and it does not specify the quantity of the dye found present in the sample cannot make it invalid. Rule 28 of the Food Adulteration Rules insists that coal-tar dyes except those mentioned therein should not be used in foodstuffs. Where extraneous matter of a type like prohibited varieties of coal-tar dye is used, the analyst's report certifying to its presence in the food without specifying the exact quantity of the adulterant is sufficient to support a conviction. As the certificate shows that Metanil yellow a prohibited coal-tar dye was used, there is no need for the Court to insist that the report should contain the technical processes by which the presence of the dye was identified. The accused could not have escaped liability even if the certificate did not name the type of coal-tar dye used. Rule 29 lays down that even the permitted varieties of coal-tar dyes cannot be used in foodstuffs except those enumerated therein and dal is not to be found among the items mentioned. 1963 (1) Cri LJ 123 (Ker) and 1962 Ker LT 865 and AIR 1962 Punj 419 and 1962 (2) Cri LJ 579 (Punj), Dist.; AIR 1962 Punj 524, Rel. on. ILR (1963) 2 Ker 192: 1963 Ker LT 698: 1963 Ker LJ 921: 1964 (1) Cri LJ 403: 1964 Mad LJ (Cri) 259: AIR 1964 Ker 107 (108, 109) (Prs 3, 4, 5, 6, 7) (DB).

The sample of groundnut oil seized by the Food Inspector was sent to the analyst 5 days after it was seized. But the Public Analyst conducted the analysis only after a fortnight. However, the Analyst conducted the test immediately after the bottle containing the sample oil was opened and there was practically no exposure of the oil in the bottle to the atmosphere before it was tested. The analyst found that the free fatty acid in the oil was 6.9 per cent., the prescribed maximum percentage being only 3 per cent. The accused contended that the excess fatty content should be attributed to the lapse of time.

Held, that edible oil could in certain circumstances exist without there being a natural increase in its free fatty acid content. Rule 16 of the Food Adulteration Rules, 1955 provided sufficient safeguard to prevent decomposition of the oil by natural causes. It would however be always open to an accused, in any particular case, to show that the packing was inadequate, or that it was so defective that it could not have prevented air and light affecting the sample oil contained in the bottle. 1964 Mad LJ (Cr) 675: (1964) 2 Mad LJ 539: 1964 Mad WN 506: 1965 (1) Cri LJ 454: ILR (1964) 2 Mad 860: AIR 1965 Mad 168 (169, 170) (Prs 2, 4) (DB).

The burden of proving the guilt of the accused is on the prosecution and if the report or the certificate is to be used as evidence without calling the Public Analyst or the Director of the Central Food Laboratory for evidence as the law now permits, then it is imperative that all the rules prescribing the procedure commencing from the stage of purchasing the sample of food leading upto its analysis are strictly observed. To argue that the accused has got the liberty of getting his sample analysed to counteract the effect of the report of the Public Analyst is to require the accused in every case to prove his innocence.

The mere fact that the Report of the Public Analyst contained a statement that the sample sent for analysis had been properly sealed and fastened, and that he found the seal intact and unbroken is not sufficient. The presumption in regard to the regularity of procedure followed by the Public Analyst may be raised when there is proof that the Food Inspector had discharged his functions according to the rules. ——S. 16 (1) — Applicability — Second offence — Meaning of.

Clause (ii) of Section 16 (1) applies for a second offence, i.e., for repeating an offence. For the applicability of Cl. (ii) the previous offence must be one punishable under S. 16. If it was punishable under another law, even if the act was of a similar nature, the subsequent offence cannot be said to be a repetition of it. What is to be considered is the offence, not the act constituting it, the offence must be repeated and not the act. If an act was done when it was not punishable under Section 16 because it was not in force then and is repeated after the enforcement of the Act which punishes it, it is not a repetition of an offence and the offence cannot be said to be a second offence. Clause (ii) would not be applicable unless Cl. (i) had been applied once, i.e., there had been a previous conviction under this very Act. 1960 All LJ 473: 1960 All WR (HC) 339: 1960 All Cr R 217: 1960 Cr LJ 1298: AIR 1960 All 629 (631) (Prs 6, 8, 9, 10).

——S. 16 (1) (g) (ii) — Accused having six previous convictions treated as having only one previous conviction and sentenced accordingly — Special and adequate reasons.

The accused at the time of his conviction under the Act in the case had six previous convictions for offences under the Act between 1957 and 1960. He was, however, treated as if this was only his second conviction simply on account of the fact that apparently on his second, third, fourth, fifth and sixth convictions for some reason or other it had not been brought to the notice of the Courts dealing with the cases that he had any previous convictions and, therefore, on each of these convictions he was dealt with as a first offender. He was sentenced under S. 16 (1) (g) (ii) to one year's rigorous imprisonment and a fine of Rs. 2,000.

Held, that it was difficult to make out any case for reducing the sentence which could be covered by the words 'special and adequate reasons to the contrary to be mentioned in the judgment of the Court' in S. 16 (1) (g). ILR (1962) 1 Punj 723: 1963 (1) Cri LJ 708.

——S. 16 (1) (ii) and (iii) — "Second offence" and "third and subsequent offence" — Meaning of.

The principle underlying S. 16 of awarding enhanced punishment is that if the offender does not reform himself even after his conviction, he is exposed to the enhanced penalties under the law. In interpreting, the law which provides the enhanced penalty the legal meaning of the phrases used therein should prevail over the grammatical construction thereof. The phrase "the second offence" in S. 16 should be construed as that offence which has been committed after the offender had been convicted for the first offence, and similar meaning should be given to "the third and subsequent offences." 1959 All LJ 751, Dissented from; AIR 1960 All 629, Disting.; (1911) 2 KB 1, Rel. on. 1965 Raj LW 178: 1965 (2) Cri LJ 246: ILR (1965) 15 Raj 428: AIR 1965 Raj 152 (155) (Pt A) (Prs 12, 15) (DB).

For the accusation of a second offence under S. 16 (1) (g) (ii) the section provides for the enhanced penalty of imprisonment which may extend to two years. The case is, therefore, a warrant case. When the particulars of the first offence are furnished in the complaint the Magistrate should try the case under the provisions of Chapter XXI of the Criminal P. C. and the proper stage for charging the accused, with the previous conviction and of recording evidence, if necessary in respect of that charge would be the stage mentioned in S. 255-A. Trial of the case under Chapter XX of the Code, convicting the accused on his own admission of guilt, and ignoring the prior conviction on the ground that no evidence of that conviction was adduced before him whereas in reality he gave the prosecution no opportunity of adducing such evidence is irregular, if not stringent. 1959 Ker LR 97: 1959 Ker LT 140: 1959 Cri LJ 1330: (1959) MLJ (Cri) 871: AIR 1959 Ker 371 (372) (Pr 1).

——S. 19 (2) — Warranty — Defence by servant — Validity.

The word 'vendor' ordinarily means 'one who sells' and it is open to the servant who sells, to rely on his master's warranty in defence in the same way in which his master would have been entitled to rely upon if the master had sold; so that a servant selling adulterated food can be liable under the Act. 1963 (1) Cri LJ 658 (662) (Pt D) (Pr 11) (Cal).

——Ss. 19 (2) and 16 (1) (g) — Requirements of warranty.

A label or cash bill cannot be termed as warranty unless it falls within the proviso to R. 12-A. The wording in S. 19(2)(i) shows that the warranty must have been obtained by the vendor at the time of his purchase of the article in question. The undertaking to give warranty must have been one of the terms of the contract of purchase and it is only then that the warranty obtained subsequently can be availed of as defence. Warranty must be in writing and in the prescribed form. Therefore, an advertisement circular is not a warranty. 1963 Ker LT 1040.

(Prevention of Food Adulteration Act (1954), Section 20.)

1. Scope.
2. Written consent — General.
(A) State Government or local authority.
(B) "Person authorised".
(C) "In this behalf".
(D) Forms and contents of.
3. Prosecution by purchaser.
4. Cognizance of offence.
5. Evidence and proof.
6. Practice and procedure.

1. Scope.

——S. 20 — Complaint by Food Inspector under Section 7/16 — Medical Officer endorsing on complaint for purposes of Section 20 — Medical Officer is not a complainant to file appeal against order of acquittal. See Criminal P. C. (1898), Section 417 (3). 1964 (2) Cr LJ 502: AIR 1964 All 497.

——Ss. 20, 7, 16 and 25 (2) — Offence committed in 1955 — Prosecution launched by Assistant Medical Officer — Legality — (U. P. Pure Food Act (32 of 1950), Section 34).

The alleged offence was committed on 21-7-1955 and the prosecution was launched under Section 16 read with Section 7, Prevention of Food Adulteration Act by the Assistant Medical Officer of Health prior to the enforcement of the rules made by the State Government under the Act.

Held, (i) that the State Government had not authorised Assistant Medical Officer by that date to prosecute any person for an offence under the Act. He could not, therefore, institute a complaint in view of Section 20 of the Act. (ii) that the contention that by virtue of Section 25 (2), Prevention of Food Adulteration Act the power which the Assistant Medical Officers exercised under U. P. Pure Food Act and rules thereunder could be exercised by them under the Prevention of Food Adulteration Act was not tenable because Food Inspectors appointed under the U. P. Pure Food Act were conferred the power to prosecute by the Act itself, namely by Section 34. They did not derive this power under any rules.

When Section 34 of the Act was repealed in view of the repeal of the entire Act, this power of the Food Inspectors came to an end. The notification appointing Health Officers and others to be Food Inspectors might serve the purpose of appointing them Food Inspectors under the Prevention of Food Adulteration Act, but it neither gave them the power to prosecute under the U. P. Pure Food Act nor could it be deemed to confer this power under the Prevention of Food Adulteration Act. Hence, the prosecution was bad in law. 1958 All WR (HC) 281: 1958 All Cr R 229: 1957 Cr LJ 615: AIR 1957 All 343 (1) (343) (Prs 2, 3) (DB).

——S. 20 — Criminal P. C., Section 197 (1) — Distinction.

Sub-section (1) of Section 197 of Criminal P. C. speaks of any Court not taking cognizance of the offence mentioned therein except with the previous sanction of the Government concerned, while the provisions of Section 20 of the Prevention of Food Adulteration Act, the wording of which is different from that of Section 197, Criminal P. C., speaks of the institution of the prosecution except by, or with the consent, of the authorities or the person mentioned in that section. 60 Bom LR 441: ILR (1958) Bom 906: 1960 Cr LJ 805: AIR 1960 Bom 244 (246) (Pt D) (Pr 11) (DB).

——S. 20 — "Local Authority" — Offence committed within Municipal limits — Municipality is the local authority — Commissioner of Corporation not a local authority within meaning of Section 20. See Prevention of Food Adulteration Act (1954), Section 2 (viii). (1962) 40 Mys LJ 557.

——S. 20 — Adulteration of milk — Discretion of Public Analyst — Duty of Court.

The Court has nothing to do with the discretion of the Public Analyst in recommending or not recommending the prosecution of the accused. So far as the Courts are concerned if the milk is adulterated, it is an offence and the offenders have to be punished if they are prosecuted. It is for the Government to choose to prosecute them or not. 37 Mys LJ 948: 1960 Cr LJ 494: 1960 Mad LJ (Cri) 324: AIR 1960 Mys 80 (82) (Pt D) (Pr 8) (DB).

——S. 20 — Scope and applicability — Complaint against specified individual — Prosecution against other persons cannot be initiated on that complaint.

The expression 'prosecution' must have reference to specific individuals and to specific facts against them. A Magistrate while taking cognizance of an offence under the Prevention of Food Adulteration Act on a complaint filed against specified individual or individuals cannot issue process and initiate prosecution against other persons. 2. Written consent — General.

——S. 20 — Who can prosecute — Prosecution under Section 16 (1) (a) and (i) read with Section 7 (i) — Prosecution sanctioned by Chairman of Assam Municipality — Assam Municipal Act, 1956 (15 of 1957), Sections 37 and 227 — Chairman, without being so empowered by resolution, is not vested with power to sanction prosecution under Prevention of Food Adulteration Act, 1954.

Under the provisions of Section 20 of the Prevention of Food Adulteration Act it is the Board alone or a person with the written consent of the Board who is empowered to institute a complaint. The written consent of the Chairman cannot be equated with the consent of the Board, unless the Board had by any special resolution, authorised the Chairman to give the written consent as required under Section 20 of the Prevention of Food Adulteration Act. ——S. 20 — Written consent by Commissioner of Corporation — Prosecution by Food Inspector appointed under Section 9 of the Act — If valid.

A prosecution instituted with the written consent of the Commissioner was a defective prosecution, as the Commissioner had no authority to give sanction. The fact that some one was appointed as a Food Inspector under Section 9 of the Act cannot confer on him power to dispense with the written consent required by Section 20 of the Prevention of Food Adulteration Act. (1964) MLJ (Cri) 441: 40 Mys LJ 564.

——S. 20 (1) — Sanction for prosecution — Chairman of Municipal Council, Jaipur can accord sanction — Chairman is not 'a person authorised in this behalf by a local authority' within meaning of Section 20 (1) — In according sanction he acts under statutory power and functions as local authority itself. See Municipalities — Rajasthan Municipalities Act (38 of 1959), Section 67. 1965 Raj LW 382: 1966 Cr LJ 1057: ILR (1965) 15 Raj 820: AIR 1966 Raj 203.

——S. 20 (1) — Consent for prosecution — Chairman of Municipal Board can give consent under Section 67 (d) of Rajasthan Municipalities Act (1959) — Delegation of power under Section 78 of that Act — Not necessary.

Municipal Board constituted under the Rajasthan Municipalities Act, 1959, can act through its chairman by virtue of Section 67 (d) of that Act in granting written consent for prosecution under Section 20 of the Prevention of Food Adulteration Act. Section 78 does not in any way affect the power conferred upon the chairman under Section 67. This power is there without there being any delegation. 1962 Raj LW 352 and 1959 Raj LW 134, Rel. on. The vice-chairman can grant permission as under Section 69 of the Rajasthan Municipalities Act, 1959, he can exercise the powers and perform the duties of the chairman in the absence of the chairman. 1963 Raj LW 634: ILR (1964) 14 Raj 19: 1964 (1) Cr LJ 702: AIR 1964 Raj 123 (126) (Pt B) (Prs 10, 11) (DB).

——S. 20 — Sanction of prosecution by Chairman of Municipal Board — Sanction held valid.

Assuming that the accused is not a licensee under Section 23 (d) of the Rajasthan Town Municipalities Act, 1951 as well as under Section 67 (d) of the Rajasthan Municipalities Act, 1959, the Chairman has authority to perform all executive acts on behalf of the Board. The Chairman consequently could grant sanction to prosecute the accused as granting of such sanction was an executive act. The power of the Board to sanction prosecution has not been delegated to any person or authority other than the Chairman in the case of the persons who do not hold a licence. Criminal Revn. ——S. 20 — Prosecution under — Sanction of prosecution by Chairman of the Municipality — Validity — Rajasthan Town Municipalities Act (23 of 1951), Section 23 (1) (d) — Scope of.

Section 23 (1) (d) of the Rajasthan Town Municipalities Act 1951, is wide in its scope and does not limit the powers of the Chairman to executive functions under that Act alone but covers all executive functions which may be performed by the Municipal Board. Giving of consent for institution of prosecution is an executive function, and the Chairman by virtue of this provision could perform that function on behalf of the Municipal Board under Section 20 of the Prevention of Food Adulteration Act 1954. A prosecution, therefore, which is instituted with the written consent of the Chairman of a Municipal Board is not open to objection and is valid. AIR 1952 All 209, Rel. on. 2 (A). State Government or local authority.

——Ss. 20 and 2 (vii) and (viii) — 'Local area' and 'local authority' — Interpretation — Prosecution launched by Municipality before Notification — Validity — Authority under U. P. Pure Food Act (32 of 1950), Section 2 (j) and (k) — (General Clauses Act (1897), Section 7) — (Interpretation of Statutes).

Held, that the definitions of 'local area' and 'local authority' supplement each other and these should be read together. When so read it will be clear that when the Prevention of Food Adulteration Act was passed, it did not repeal the definition of 'local authority' as far as it related to the Municipalities, Cantonments and Notified Areas but accepted and confirmed the existence of these local authorities and it also accepted the Municipalities, Cantonments, and Notified Areas as local areas within the meaning of the Central Act. The Uttar Pradesh State merely followed the direction given by the Act and only confirmed what was already enacted.

Hence, the Lucknow Municipality was competent to institute the prosecution. Cri. Revn. No. 164 of 1956 (All), Not approved. Cri. Revn. No. 152 of 1957 (All), Approved. 1960 Cr LJ 199: AIR 1960 All 119 (122) (Pt A) (Prs 15, 16, 17) (DB).

——S. 20 — Cognizance and trial of offences — Written consent by the Commissioner of Corporation — If prosecution valid.

The power to commence a prosecution under the Prevention of Food Adulteration Act, which resides exclusively in the local authority which is the Corporation in this case. It is not permissible to look into the provisions of the Corporation Act for the purpose of deciding whether the Commissioner is a local authority for the purpose of the Prevention of Food

Adulteration Act. For the purpose of Section 20 of the Prevention of Food Adulteration Act no one but the Corporation is the local authority in this case and as long as the prosecution in the present case was not preceded by the written consent of the local authority, it cannot be considered as one validly commenced. (1964) MLJ (Cri) 437: 40 Mys LJ 557.

——Ss. 20 (1), 2 (viii) — Orissa Prevention of Food Adulteration Rules (1959), Rule 12 — District Health Officer is local authority also in mofussil area — 'Person' and 'Local authority' — Distinction.

By virtue of Rule 12 of the Orissa Prevention of Food Adulteration Rules, the District Health Officer must be deemed to be the local authority for the purpose of the Act also in a mofussil area. Hence, where the sanction is given by the local authority the requirements of the mandatory provisions of Section 20 (1) of the Act must be held to have been complied with. The 'person' referred to in Section 20 (1) is one who is different from the 'local authority' as defined in the Act and in the Rules made by the State Government. That local authority is given power to authorise a particular person to sanction the prosecution for offences under the Act. (1965) 7 OJD 17: 31 Cut LT 100: ILR (1964) Cut 778.

——S. 20 — Local authority — Meaning of — Municipality superseded — Administrator appointed is local authority — Section 18, General Clauses Act is applicable to such case. See Prevention of Food Adulteration Act (1954), Section 2 (viii). 1963 (2) Cr LJ 589 (Raj).

——Ss. 20 (1) and 2 (viii) — Administrator appointed after supersession of Municipality — He is 'local authority within meaning of Section 2 (viii) — Sanction given by him under Section 20 (1) for prosecution is valid.

Under Section 293 (kha) of the Tripura Municipal Act, all such powers and duties which might have been exercised by the Chairman of Commissioners if they had been in office on the date when the sanction for prosecution under Section 20 (1) of the Prevention of Food Adulteration Act was given by the Administrator can be exercised by the Administrator after the supersession of the Commissioners. Thus, after the supersession of the Commissioners (which formed the Municipality), the Administrator becomes the local authority within the meaning of Section 2 (viii) who can sanction the prosecution under Section 20 (1) of the said Act. 1961 (2) Cr LJ 807: AIR 1961 Tripura 52 (55) (Pt C) (Prs 17, 18).

——S. 20 — Who can file complaint — Complaint by Commissioner of Municipality signed also by Sanitary Sub-Inspector and Municipal Health Officer — Non-compliance of Section 20 — Complaint not valid.

Where a prosecution under Section 16 (1) is instituted on a complaint in writing of the Commissioner of the Municipality the mere fact that the Sanitary Inspector and the Municipal Health Officer had subscribed their signatures to page 2 of the complaint does not in any way alter the fact that the complainant is the Commissioner of the Municipality himself and not any other authority.

The Commissioner of the Municipality does not fall within any of the seven categories of persons or authorities under Sec. 20. Having regard to the plain language of Section 20 as the complaints in these cases have been instituted by an unauthorised person, the Judicial First Class Magistrate had no jurisdiction to take cognizance of these complaints and take action on the footing thereof. 1959 Andh LT 768: 1960 Cr LJ 46: AIR 1960 Andh Pra 27 (28) (Prs 7, 8) (DB).

——S. 20 — Madras Prevention of Adulteration Act (3 of 1918), Sections 3, 18 — Sanitary Inspector is not competent to launch prosecution under Section 20 — (Constitution of India, Article 245).

A Sanitary Inspector of a town or Panchayat, authorised to launch prosecution under the Madras Prevention of Adulteration Act (3 of 1918), is incompetent to launch a prosecution under Section 20 of the Central Act of 1954. The delegation that is referred to in Section 3 and the rules framed under the Madras Prevention of Adulteration Act will amount to delegation of a delegated authority which is not valid under Section 20 of the Central Act. The prosecution will, therefore, be launched by one who is authorised neither by the Government nor the Municipal Board. (1956) 2 MLJ 465.

——S. 20 (1) — Prosecution launched by Food Inspector duly authorised by State Government — Additional written consent not necessary.

The prosecution to be valid under the Act has either to be launched by or with the written consent of the authorities specified in Section 20 (1). If any one of those authorities itself institutes the prosecution, obviously no question of additional written consent of any other authority or person can arise. A contrary interpretation would be reading the word "and" instead of "or" between the words "except by" and "with the written consent of".

Where, therefore, the complaints had been filed by the Food Inspectors who were duly authorised by the State Government to institute prosecutions for offences under the Act, the terms of the statute must be taken to have been fulfilled and additional written consent by the State Government or delegation by the State Government to the Food Inspectors was not necessary. ——S. 20 (1) — 'Written consent'.

On the terms of Section 20 (1) a prosecution could be instituted with the written consent not merely of the State Government but 'of a local authority' or 'a person authorised in this behalf by the State Government or a local authority'. On the language of the sub-section no other construction is possible. 1957 Cr LJ 75, Overruled; AIR 1960 Bom 244, Approved. State of Bombay v. ——S. 20 (1) — "In this behalf" — Authority need not be given for each and every complaint — General authority for taking action under section will meet requirements of section.

Where a general sanction to prosecute is given by a resolution of the General Board of a Municipality authorising the Food Inspector to file cases under the Act, the Food Inspector has authority to institute the prosecution against the accused who has committed an offence under Section 16 of the Act; and the prosecution being instituted on a complaint which fulfils the requirements of Section 20 (1), the Judicial Magistrate, First Class, has the jurisdiction to take cognizance of and try the offence.

The very object of the second part is to enable the State Government and local authorities to appoint some other person to exercise, on their behalf, the discretion vested in them by the first part. Therefore, the words "in this behalf" do not mean that the authority must be given for each and every complaint. The general authority for taking action under Section 20 (1) of the Act will meet the requirement of the section. ——S. 20 — Sanction to prosecution — Need not be specific as to offence and person — General authority conferred on an officer legal — Prosecution filed by a Food Inspector is legal.

The argument that persons like Food Inspectors could be authorised under Section 20 (1) of the Food Adulteration Act only in relation to a specific or particular case and not in general terms applicable to all prosecutions is not tenable. The expression 'in this behalf' in sub-section (1) of Section 20 means no more than that the authority vested in the State Government or Local Authority is for enabling the person to institute a prosecution. The intention is to provide for a delegation by the State Government or the Local Authority of its power to institute prosecution under the Act. Once under the section, a person is authorised, the authority so vested in the person is of the same quality and virtue as the power of the State Government or a local authority to institute a prosecution. Consequently the prosecution instituted by the Food Inspector appointed under Section 9 of the Act who has been authorised by the State Government under Section 20 (1) to institute prosecutions for offences under the Act, is legal and maintainable. 1961 Mad WN (Cr) 172, Foll. (1965) 2 Mad LJ 403: 1965 Mad LJ (Cr) 796: 1966 Cr LJ 668: AIR 1966 Mad 194 (196) (Pt A) (Pr 8).

——S. 20 (1) — General authorisation to Food Inspectors to prosecute for offences under Act is valid.

Section 20 (1) does not contemplate a specific authorisation in respect of a particular prosecution; the words 'in this behalf' means no more than that the authority vested in the State Government or a local authority is for the purpose of enabling the person to institute a prosecution.

The intention is to provide for a delegation by the State Government or a local authority of its power to institute prosecutions under the Act. A general authorisation by the State Government to the Food Inspector appointed under the Act is proper and a prosecution instituted by such authorised Food Inspector is valid. ——S. 20 (1) — Scope of.

In addition to the prosecution by the authorities mentioned in Section 2 (1), the section also provides for a prosecution to be instituted with the written consent of any of these authorities. This consent should be specifically related to a particular offence with reference to which it is intended to institute a prosecution. (1962) 2 Mad LJ 104: 1962 Mad LJ (Cri) 424: 1962 (1) Cr LJ 166 (167, 168) (Pt B) (Pr 3).

——S. 20 (1) — Sanction for prosecution — It should mentioned person to whom consent is given.

A written sanction or a written consent for prosecution, without mentioning the person to whom such consent or sanction is given, would not be a sufficient compliance with the terms of the section. 60 Bom LR 441: ILR (1958) Bom 906: 1960 Cr LJ 805: AIR 1960 Bom 244 (246) (Pt B) (Pr 9) (DB).

——S. 20 — Scope and object — Written consent must be with reference to particular offence by particular person — Special authorisation for each case — Necessity — Section 16 (1) (a) and (d) — Scope — Storage of waste tea — Offence.

The institution of a prosecution whether it be by the State Government or a local authority under the first clause or by a duly authorised person under the second clause, can only be for a particular offence committed by a particular person. A written consent must be with reference to a particular offence committed by a particular person. There can be no general consent for the prosecution of all offenders. The authorisation under the second clause can be a general authorisation to institute, or give consent to, prosecutions for offences under the Act and it enables a general delegation of the power given to the State Government and local authorities under the first clause. It is obvious that the very object of the second clause is to enable the State Government and the local authorities to appoint some other person to exercise on their behalf the discretion vested in them by the first clause. ILR 22 All 123: (1960) 1 KLR 582: (1960) KLT 515, Relied on.

As tea waste is not an article of food, Cl. (a) of Section 16 (1) becomes inapplicable since that clause relates only to the manufacture, storage, sale or distribution of an article of food. Storage of an adulterant by a person who is not a manufacturer of food is no offence even if the storage be for purposes of sale.

The words 'which may be employed for the purpose of adulteration' in Section 16 (1) (d) are not used in the sense, 'is capable of being employed for the purpose of adulteration'. What is punishable under Section 16 (1) (d) is possession, by a manufacturer of food, of an adulterant in circumstances which lead to the inference that he is keeping it for being used by him for purposes of adulteration. 1960 Ker LT 743: 1960 Ker LJ 921: ILR (1960) Ker 1426: 1961 (1) Cr LJ 376: (1961) MLJ (Cr) 51: AIR 1961 Ker 84 (85) (Pt A) (Pr 3).

The sanction required by Section 20 of the Prevention of Food Adulteration Act is not an empty formality. It must show that the authority giving the sanction had applied his mind to the alleged commission of the offence by the accused person and was satisfied that the accused has to be prosecuted for the said offence. Necessarily it follows that the sanction must be for the prosecution of specified individuals and for specific offences. The conferring of an authority or the giving of sanction in vague and general terms is not what is required under Section 20 providing for a proper and valid sanction. In the absence of valid sanction under Section 20, the prosecution launched could not be sustained and it could not confer jurisdiction on the Magistrate to try the case against the accused.

The non-compliance with the requirements of sub-section (7) of Section 10 of the Act is a serious irregularity which causes material prejudice to the accused. The notice required by Sec. 11 should have been given to both the accused. The failure to issue notice as required by Section 11 is also a vital defect which has vitiated the prosecution case. The proper procedure would have been to frame the charge against the accused for the main offence in the first instance and then to charge them as old offenders after they have been found guilty of the commission of the main offence charged against them. The defect in the charge as framed against the accused has caused prejudice to them in the trial of the case and the order acquitting the accused calls for no interference. (1960) MLJ (Cri) 595: 1960 Cr LJ 1467: (1960) 1 Ker LR 582: 1960 Ker LT 515: 1960 Ker LJ 753: AIR 1960 Ker 356 (357) (Pt A) (Pr 2) (DB).

The absence of proof of due authority for the prosecution under Section 20 of the Act, goes to the very root of the matter and deprives the Court of jurisdiction. Due authority is a prerequisite for the initiation of the prosecution, and proof thereof, for cognizance.

It is for the prosecution to prove the due authority or sanction required to invest the Court with jurisdiction. The view that where no objection is taken by the accused, the necessary sanction or authority may be presumed is not correct. AIR 1947 Sind 79, Expl. ILR (1960) Ker 1449.

●——S. 21 — Scope — Effect on Sections 32 and 347, Cr. P. Code.

Section 21 of the Act is not a disabling provision. All that it does is to authorise a Magistrate of the first class to award a sentence beyond the limits prescribed for him under Sec. 32 of the Code. It does not affect the provisions of Sections 207 and 347 of the Code nor has it anything to do with the jurisdiction of a Court of Session. The section does not make the commitment by a Magistrate competent to award the full sentence prescribed by the Act, a nullity; nor does the section interfere with the jurisdiction of a Court of Session to deal with a matter committed to it in spite of its provisions. ——S. 23 — Rules under — Rule 50 (1), Clause (1) and Kerala Government Notification, dated 11-1-1962 issued thereunder specifying articles of food which would be regulated by licence, are ultra vires.

Rule 50 (1), Clause (1) of the Prevention of Food Adulteration Rules and the Kerala Government Notification, dated 11-1-1962 issued thereunder are ultra vires of S. 23 of the Prevention of Food Adulteration Act, 1954. Cls. (f) and (g) of Sec. 23 (1) under which the impugned Rule has been framed to show that the choice of the articles of food the sale of which is to be regulated by the issue of licences, involves the exercise of discretion and judgment and is not a mere ministerial or mechanical act. That involves three things: (1) the choice must be made by the Central Government in exercise of its judgment: (2) that judgment must be exercised in consultation with the expert committee constituted under Section 3 of the Act which would be in a position to advise it as to whether it is necessary or not in the public interest to bring a particular article of food within the regulation; and (3) it can take a final decision only after 'previous publication'. 1962 Ker LT 1012, Overruled. Raja Sekharan Nair v. The contents of the milk, whether of fat or of the non-fats solids do vary. It was contended for the petitioners that the banning of colouring matter other than those permitted is arbitrary and an unreasonable restriction on a citizen's fundamental right to carry on any occupation, trade or business.

Held, that no citizen has a fundamental right to manufacture or sell poisonous articles of food. This argument of the petitioners has only to be repelled as the right of every citizen to pursue any lawful trade or business must be subject to such reasonable conditions as may be deemed, by the Government authority of the country essential to the safety, health, peace, order and morals of the country. The contention that so far as dhal was concerned, the dye is applied only externally and so it did not amount to violation of the rule, cannot be sustained. The grounds taken in the original petition were not taken in the criminal revision petition, but that is no ground for interference. In the circumstances, this is not a fit case for interference under Article 226 or Article 227. (1965) MLJ (Cri) 399 (Ker): ILR (1965) 1 Ker 222.

Rule 4 of the Kerala Rules, prohibiting manufacture for sale any food without a valid licence issued under the Rules, relates to a matter expressly enumerated in Section 24 (2) (b) and is, therefore, fully within the rule-making competence of the State Government.

——S. 24 — Rule under, prescribing same standard of milk in cotton-seed areas — Not unreasonable because a different standard is prescribed in these areas for butter and ghee.

A rule which prescribes the same standard for milk for areas where cow and buffalo feed consists to a considerable proportion of cotton-seed as well as for those areas where it does not so consist cannot be said to be unreasonable on the ground that a different standard has been fixed for butter or ghee with respect to these two areas. Since the composition of butter and ghee in cotton-seed areas is different from the butter or ghee in other areas, a different standard has been prescribed for these two areas. But the percentage of fat or non-fat solid content in the milk, is usually about the same irrespective of whether or not the animal is fed to a considerable extent on cotton-seed. There will be, of course, local and individual variations, but they have all been eliminated by prescribing a standard of the minimum of the percentages taken in a large number of samples; but these percentages have nothing to do with the place and the proportion of cotton seed in the feed. 1962 MPLJ 972: 1962 Jab LJ 1062.

——R. 22 — Scope — Rule is not mandatory — To decide whether a provision is directory or mandatory one has to consider not merely actual words used in statute and hence use of word "shall" in Rule 22 does not necessarily indicate that it is mandatory: AIR 1961 SC 849 and 1951 AWR 385, Rel. on. — Primary object of Rule 22 in prescribing standard quantity of sample of various articles of food is to ensure its despatch in sufficient quantity to Public Analyst to enable him to analyse it in proper manner — Sample though not of requisite quantity, if found sufficient by Analyst for that object and no prejudice is caused to the accused, then such minor laches should not be allowed to override major consideration of bringing anti-social elements to book. ——R. 22 —Prevention of Food Adulteration Act (1954), Section 13 — Report of public analyst sending less quantity than prescribed under R. 22 for analysis — Effect — Rule 22 is recommendatory.

The use of the words approximate quantity to be supplied in the rule clearly shows that the rule is recommendatory. Consequently the failure of the Food Inspector strictly to comply with the rule would not affect the correctness of the report. 62 Bom LR 354: ILR (1960) Bom 404.

——R. 22 — Sample (milk) sent for analysis less than the quantity prescribed under Rule 22 — If non-compliance and vitiates trial — Preservative not added — Report of Analyst nine weeks after taking of sample — Acquittal if can be interfered with in appeal.

On Reference to Bench (Ramachandra Iyer, C. J. and Srinivasan J.) Held,: Two points were urged in this appear against acquittal of offence under Sections 7 and 16 (1) read with Section 2 (1) (a) of Act 37 of 1954: (1) A sufficient quantity of sample (milk) as required under Rule 22 of the Rules was not sent for analysis. (2) Since no preservative was added the milk would not have retained the quality and condition in which the sample was, when taken, at the time it was analysed. Though Rule 22 employs the word 'shall', the specification of an approximate quantity therein minimises the mandatory force of the expression; the provision is only a means for securing the evidence of an expert witness. If the quantity furnished was adequate enough to render possible all the tests necessary and the expert was in a position to pronounce on the material supplied, the short supply would not detract from the value of that evidence. Whether the quantity was adequate enough for the purpose in question is a matter which might call for investigation in the circumstances of any particular case. It can never be stated as an absolute proposition that upon a lesser quantity than that prescribed in the rule, no proper analysis could at all be done.

Per Kunhamed Kutti, J. (after Reference was answered by the Bench): Where there is no evidence of any addition of a preservative to the sample (milk) sent for analysis and in the absence of any evidence as to when the sample was analysed and in view of the fact that the report of the analyst was received nine weeks after the taking of the sample it is not possible to accept the theory that the milk had not undergone any change in quality and condition; nor can any conclusion be based on the result of the analysis on the assumption that the sample as sent was analysed by the Analyst. 78 Mad WN 685: 1966 Cri LJ 1023: ILR (1965) 2 Mad 369: (1965) 2 MLJ 325: (1965) MLJ (Cr) 723: AIR 1966 Mad 325 (326) (Prs 6, 7) (DB).

No doubt, 'dhal' at some stage i.e., when it is green in the stage of leaves can be held to be vegetable but once it is dried and assumes the shape of 'dhal' it finds its place in 'pulses' group and ceases to be a vegetable. The process of preserved vegetables contemplated in Rule 29 obviously refers to the category of food articles, i.e., vegetables which are kept in that condition by a scientific process or by use of preservatives. Red gram, the subject matter of prosecution in this case, cannot be placed in the category of 'processed and preserved vegetables'. If 'dhals' are deemed to be 'processed vegetables' the distinction between vegetables, pulses and cereals would disappear, which does not seem to be the intendment of the Act where pulses and cereals have been classified separately, vide Rule 22. ILR (1964) Andh Pra 936.

Selling of turmeric containing any foreign substance is an offence under Rule 44 (h) of the Prevention of Food Adulteration Rules framed under the Prevention of Food Adulteration Act. 'Sale' in Section 2 (xiii) of the Act should be a sale of any article of food. The argument that since there was no lable to show that the stuff (turmeric) was intended for external use only, it has to be presumed that it was meant for human consumption and is, therefore, an article of food cannot be accepted. No doubt, selling turmeric powder which is an article of food, containing any foreign substance, is an offence punishable under Section 16 (1) read with Section 7 and Rule 44 (h) of the Rules framed under the Prevention of Food Adulteration Act. But according to Section 2 (ix), an article of food shall be deemed to be misbranded if it is an imitation or a substitute for an article of food or if it resembled it in a manner likely to deceive: where there is no evidence on behalf of the prosecution to show that the accused sold turmeric powder as an article of food, and in the face of the positive evidence of the accused that he sold the stuff as turmeric powder, useful for external use only, it is very difficult to hold the accused guilty under Rule 44 (h).

When there is absolutely no evidence to show that the article seized is an imitation or is a substitute for such an article or that it resembles another article of food under the name of which it was sold, the provision of Section 7 (ii) cannot be attracted. The report of the Analyst gives only the analysis of the contents. This would not go to prove that it was an imitation or a substitute. (1958) 1 Andh WR 528: (1958) MLJ (Cr) 455: 1958 Cr LJ 1375: AIR 1958 Andh Pra 681 (682) (Pt A) (Pr 7).

[Overruled in AIR 1965 Andh Pra 118.]

The interpretation of Rule 44 seems to be that even in case of an article of food in which any addition or admixture is present and has been notified on the label affixed to the package containing the article that article cannot be sold if it falls within the list of articles of food given in that rule and the addition or admixture is of the kind specified in that rule in reference to that article. Therefore, just because 'butter' is not mentioned in the list of articles under Rule 44, it does not mean that by complying with the provisions of Rule 43 a person can sell 'adulterated' butter with impunity and thereby contravene the express provisions of Section 7 of the Act. ILR (1962) Bom 118: 63 Bom LR 880: 1961 Nag LJ 735: 1962 (2) Cr LJ 562: AIR 1962 Bom 104 (106) (Pt C) (Pr 5).

A person cannot be prosecuted under Rule 4 of the Kerala Rules for running a restaurant without a licence. Prosecution for failure to take out a licence can be only for contravention of the provisions of Rule 50 of the Central Rules and not of Rule 4 of the Kerala Rules. Running a restaurant by itself would not amount to a contravention of Rule 50 of the Central Rules unless there is further proof that the accused was dealing in any of the articles of food which require licence to be taken. It must be proved that he is dealing in articles of food mentioned in Rule 50 of the Central Rules or dealing in articles of food which the State Government may by notification specify.

If the State Government wants that any addition should be made to the list of articles of food enumerated in R. 50 a notification has to be issued adding particular kinds of food they think necessary to the list given in Rule 50. A general inclusion of all articles of food is not permissible under the powers vested in the State Government under Rule 50 (1). 1962 Ker LJ 240: 1962 1 Ker LR 294: ILR (1962) 1 Ker 436.

APPENDIX B

●——App. B, Rule A. 11.05 — Butter — Meaning of — Butter prepared from curd comes within the definition — If required standard is not maintained the butter is deemed to be adulterated.

Whatever process is adopted, whether butter is taken directly out of milk or taken out of soured milk or cream, it is prepared only from milk. The only difference between the two is that in the case of butter prepared from curd there is an intervening souring process which is not necessary in the case of butter directly prepared from milk or cream. The word "exclusively" in the definition in Rule A. 11.05 refers to the milk or cream of cow or buffalo. The word has no relation to other milk products. Hence butter prepared from curd comes within the definition of 'butter' in Rule A. 11.05 of Appendix B to the Rules. AIR 1960 Bom 243 (FB), Approved. ILR (1958) Bom 637, Held, overruled. If the quality or purity of butter falls below the standard prescribed by the said rule or its constituents are in excess of the prescribed limits of variability, it shall be deemed to be adulterated within the meaning of Section 2 of the Prevention of Food Adulteration Act. If the prescribed standard is not attained, the statute treats such butter, by fiction, as an adulterated food, though in fact it is not adulterated. (1916) 2 KB 446, Dist. M. V. Joshi v. M. U. ——App. B, A. 11.05; A. 11.01, A. 11.10; A. 11.06 — "Butter" Product obtained from curd.

The limit of variability in respect of butter is prescribed by the Central Government under the Prevention of Food Adulteration Rules, 1955. The prescription is to be found in A. 11.05. The definition of butter is exhaustive and is not inclusive. Reading the definition of the word 'butter' as given in A. 11.05, in conjunction with the definitions of the words 'milk' and 'cream', as given in A. 11.01 and A. 11.10, the result which we obtain is that butter is that product which is obtained from normal, clean and fresh secretion obtained by complete milking of the udder of a healthy cow, buffalo, etc., or that product which is prepared from that portion of milk, rich in milk fat, which has arisen to the surface of milk on standing and has been removed or which has been separated from milk by centrifugal force. The three words 'milk', 'cream' and 'curd' having been defined and the definitions being exhaustive, the definition of the word 'butter' does not include a product which is obtained from curd, and it refers only to a product which is prepared from milk or cream. Butter is that which is exclusively prepared from milk or cream. Curd is not milk, but it is a milk product. It is a produce derived from milk, but it is not milk itself. Milk is a substance which is clean and fresh. Curd is a soured substance. 60 Bom LR 434: ILR (1958) Bom 637.

——App. B, Rules A. O. 1, O. 1 and 47 — Aerated water — Use of only sugar allowed as sweetening agent — Admixture of saccharine — Aerated water must be deemed to be adulterated.

Rule A. O.1.O.1 in Appendix B of Prevention of Food Adulteration Rules permits the use of only sugar as a sweetening agent and expressly prohibits the addition of any substance, other than that mentioned in the Rule. Hence, an aerated water containing an admixture of saccharine must be deemed to be adulterated. Rule 47, which permits addition of saccharine to food in certain specified circumstances, is a general provision and does not apply in a case where the specific provision contained in R. A. O.1.O.1 applies. 1964 Ker LT 1032: ILR (1964) 2 Ker 644.

——App. B, A.11-01 — 'Milk — Mixture of buffalo and cow's milk — Standard required.

Appendix B-A 11-01 to the Prevention of Food Adulteration Act provides that 'milk' means the normal clean fresh secretion obtained by complete milking of the udder of a healthy she-goat, cow, buffalo, sheep. A. 11-01-02 provides that cow's milk shall contain not less than 3.5 per cent. of milk fat and the milk solids other than fat shall not be less than 8.5 per cent. A-11-01-02 provides that buffalo's milk shall contain not less than 5 per cent. of milk fat and that milk solids other than milk fat shall not be less than 9 per cent. Where milk, other than skimmed milk, is sold or offered for sale without any indication as to whether it is derived from cow, buffalo, goat or sheep, the standard prescribed for buffalo milk shall apply.

Where milk was sold as a mixture of buffalo and cow's milk, (i.e., without any indication as to whether it is derived from cow, buffalo, goat or sheep)) it should contain not less than 5 per cent. of milk fat and not less than 9 per cent. of milk solids other than milk fat (i.e., the standard prescribed for buffalo milk shall apply). The expression "imprisonment" does not connote the confinement of a person within the four walls of a trial during which the State sets apart for imprisoning persons convicted of offences with which they are charged. There is no statutory provision directing the imprisonment of a person sentenced to imprisonment by a Court of Law only in a place as defined as prison in S. 3 (1) of the Prisons Act 9 of 1894. ILR (1961) Mys 1053.

Refusing to take food when offered by the jail authorities is an offence punishable under S. 45 (1) of the Prisons Act read with para. 806 (17) of the rules framed under S. 50 of that Act. The prisoners cannot, however, be punished twice for the same offence in view of the second proviso to S. 52 of that Act and also under Art. 20 (2) of the Constitution. Formal warning by the Superintendent of Jail is one of the punishments provided by S. 46 (1) of the Act.

The prisoners refused to take food on two consecutive days. The complaint was filed only in respect of the refusal on the first day and there was no mention of any refusal to take food on the next day. It was found that the prisoners were warned personally by the Superintendent on the first day.

The Prisons Act does not contain any provision ousting the jurisdiction of the ordinary criminal Courts to try offences under the Penal Code which are also prison offences mentioned in S. 45 of the Act. Section 52 does not purport to take away the jurisdiction of ordinary Courts of law. Where a regular challan or a complaint is instituted the ordinary Courts of criminal law can proceed with the inquiry and trial of the case notwithstanding the fact that such offences may also fall in the definition of prison offences under S. 45 of the Prisons Act. In order that the jurisdiction of the ordinary criminal Courts may be deemed to have been ousted it is necessary that the provision of such ouster must be either express or at least by necessary implication. 1960 Raj L W 383 : I L R (1960) 10 Raj 1027 : 1960 Cr L J 1661 : A I R 1960 Raj 288 (289) (Pt A) (Pr 4) (DB).

——S. 52— Validity — Section is not hit by Art. 14—(Constitution of India, Art. 14).

Section 52 of the Prisons Act is not hit by Art. 14 of the Constitution. The power given to the Superintendent under S. 52 to forward the case of an individual prisoner to the District Magistrate is neither unrestricted nor unabridged. The rule for guiding the exercise of discretion is provided by the legislature in the section itself. It cannot, therefore, be said that the discretion is unrestricted. Secondly, the power may be discretionary but not necessarily discriminatory. The discretion conferred by S. 52 of the Prisons Act is vested not in any subordinate official of the jail but in the Superintendent himself and the considerations which are to guide him in the exercise of his discretion have been indicated in the section. The section does not therefore, in any way, infringe the principles of equality before the law vouchsafed by Art. 14 of the Constitution. AIR 1952 S C 75, Disting. ——S. 52—Applicability—Under-trial Prisoner—Act of going on bunger strike—Offence—S. 3 (2)—(U. P. Jail Manual Chap. XXVIII. Para 742).

The act of going on hunger-strike is an offence within the meaning of para. 742 of the Jail Manual and it is punishable under S. 52 of the Prisons Act. The first fact which should however be proved in such cases is that the accused was a prisoner within the definition given under S. 3 (2) of the Prisons Act. An under-trial prisoner who is admitted to jail is a prisoner within the meaning of para. 742 of the Jail Manual. ILR (1959) 2 All 1 : 1958 All L J 849 : 1959 Cr L J 283 : AIR 1959 All 164 (165) (Pt A) (Prs 3, 4) (DB).

——S. 52—Applicability— Refusal to take food—Offence.

It is only when a prisoner goes on hunger-strike that he can be prosecuted under S. 52 of the Prisons Act, and mere refusal to take food even on repeated occasions will not by itself turn this refusal into a hunger strike. It is only when this refusal is meant to be used as a weapon for seeking redress of grievances that it assumes the character of hunger strike. These grievances need not be related necessarily to the treatment meted out to a prisoner in jail or to a period of time subsequent to his admission in jail. I L R (1959) 2 All 1 : 1959 Cr L J 283 : 1958 All L J 849 : A I R 1959 All 164 (166) (Pt B) (Pr 5) (DB).

——Ss. 52 and 3 (2) — Scope—Person starting ..... hunger strike outside jail continuing it after admission to jail—Offence—'On hunger strike'—(U. P. Jail Manual, Ch. 28, para. 742).

The words 'go on hunger strike' in Para. 742 include 'remaining on hunger strike'. Hunger strike is a continuing act and therefore every fresh act of refusal to take food at the time when food is offered to a prisoner would amount to a fresh act of hunger strike. The words in paragraph 742 do not exclude the operation of its provisions against those who had already started hunger strike outside the jail but who continue it after coming to jail. The act of hunger strike per se does not constitute an offence. If a person is removed to jail merely because he has gone on hunger strike and then after placing him inside the jail the jail authorities prosecute him under S. 52 of the Prisons Act, obviously such a prosecution would be illegal and a conviction cannot be maintained in such circumstances. In such a case the accused would not be a prisoner within the meaning of S. 3 (2) of the Prisons Act. For the purpose of the application of the provisions of the Prisons Act, the prosecution must prove that the detention was legal as it was sanctioned by a competent authority on the basis of an offence charged against the accused and it was not in violation of Art. 20 (2) of the Constitution of India. The executive authority cannot be given the option of punishing a citizen for going on hunger strike by shutting him up in jail and turning him into a prisoner. But where a person goes on hunger strike and he has also committed some offence on the basis of which he was rightly sent on a remand warrant to jail custody then it cannot be pleaded by him that because he had started hunger strike earlier he can ignore the rules of jail discipline. The test is whether the offender was brought to jail because he went on hunger strike or because he committed some offence. If his entry into jail is on the basis of some offence, then this plea is not open to him that as he did not start the hunger strike in Jail, so he can continue to be on hunger strike and thus commit a breach of the jail discipline rules. What is permitted to a citizen is not permitted to a prisoner. 1958 All L J 849 : ILR (1959) 2 All 1 : 1959 Cr L J 283 : AIR 1959 All 164 (166) (Pt C) (Pr 6) (DB).

● ——S. 59 — Rules made under S. 59 — Bombay Rules, R. 1419 (c)—Scope of rule.

The Prisons Act does not confer on any authority a power to commute or remit sentences; it provides only for the regulation of prisons and for the treatment of prisoner confined therein. Section 59 of the Prisons Act confers a power on the State Government to make rules, inter alia for rewards for good conduct. Therefore, the rules made under the Act should be construed within the scope of the Act. The rules, inter alia provide for three types of remissions by way of rewards for good conduct, namely, (i) ordinary, (ii) special and (iii) State. For the working out of the said remissions, under R. 1419 (c) of the rules framed by the State of Bombay, transportation for life is ordinarily to be taken as 15 years' actual imprisonment. The rule cannot be construed as a statutory equation of 15 years' actual imprisonment for transportation for life. The equation is only for a particular purpose, namely, for the purpose of 'remission system' and not for all purpose. Gopal Vinayak Godse v. State of Maharashtra, 1961 S C D 255 : 1961 Mad W N 361 : (1962) 1 S C J 423 : 1962 Mad L J (Cri) 269 : (1961) 3 S C R 440 : 39 Mys L J 388 : 63 Bom L R 517 : (1961) 2 S C A 361 : 1961 (1) Cri L J 736 : A I R 1961 S C 600 (603) (Pt D) (Pr 7).

——S. 59 (5) — Rules under — Bombay Jail Rules, Rr. 1419 (c), 1420, 1447 (2) — Imprisonment for life —Means 15 years actual imprisonment inclusive of remissions under Jail Rules as well as under S. 401, Criminal P. C.—(Criminal P. C. (1898), S. 401).

Reading rules 1419 (c) and 1420 together, it becomes quite clear that although ordinarily a sentence of transportation for life shall be taken as 15 years actual imprisonment, certain remissions should be granted as mentioned in R. 1420, those remissions being subject to the discretion of the Government concerned. This is the effect of the use of the word 'ordinarily' in the said clause. The said word does not imply that although a sentence of transportation for life shall be taken as 15 years actual imprisonment, the Government may detain a person for 20 years. The effect of the said clause is that the maximum period which a person sentenced to transportation for life shall have to undergo is 15 years actual imprisonment. If the Government permits remissions at its discretion allowable under the Jail Rules, then the said period of 15 years will be reduced by the period for which such remission has been so granted. If again the State remissions under S. 401 of the Criminal P. C. have been given to a convict, then the period of 15 years will stand reduced by the said period of State remissions. State remissions, if awarded, must be deducted from the period of sentence and the Government has no discretion in the matter. Rule 1447 (2), also supports this view. In a case where after taking into consideration the period of remissions allowable under the Jail rules, the period of 15 years imprisonment is found to be complete, the Government has power to still detain the convict. But the Government has no power to detain the convict sentenced to transportation for life after he has served full 15 years actual imprisonment. The Government also has no power of detention in a case where 15 years actual imprisonment served by a prisoner sentenced to transportation for life includes the period of State remissions granted under S. 401 of the Criminal P. C. ILR (1959) Mys 115 : 1959 Mad L J (Cri) 397 : 37 Mys L J 202.

PRIZE COMPETITIONS ACT (42 of 1955)

● ——S. 2 (d)—Applicability — Prize competition — Competition in which success depends to a substantial degree or skill.

The definition of 'prize competition' in S. 2 (d) is wide and unqualified in its terms. There is nothing in the wording of it, which limits it to competitions in which success does not depend to any substantial extent on skill but on chance. Hence though on a literal construction of S. 2 (d) the Act applies also to prize competitions in which success depends to a substantial degree on skill, having regard to the history of the legislation, the declared object thereof and the wording of the statute, the competitions which are sought to be controlled and regulated by the Act are only those competitions in which success does not depend to any substantial degree on skill. Having regard to the circumstances under which the resolutions came to be passed, there cannot be any reasonable doubt that the law which the State legislatures moved Parliament to enact under Art. 252 (1) of the Constitution of India was one to control and regulate prize competition of a gambling character. SECTION 4

● —Ss. 4 and 5—Repugnancy between Prize Competitions Act (1955) and Mysore Act (27 of 1951)—Effect of Mysore Amending Act (26 of 1957) — The inconsistency between the Central Act, Prize Competitions Act 1955 and Mysore Lotteries and Prize Competitions Control and Tax Act, 1957, would operate on that portion of Mysore Act which became repugnant to Ss. 4 and 5 of the Central Act as to prohibition of prize competitions. Therefore by the omission of the words" for which a licence has been obtained' under S. 8, rest of the clause would be valid—The effect of the Mysore Amending Act 26 of 1957 is that the above mentioned words were deemed to have been omitted as from 1-4-1956, the day when Central Act came into force and the rest of cl. (b) is not repugnant to any of the provisions of Central Act. A I R 1959 S C 648, Rel. on. See Constitution of India, Art. 254 (1). A I R 1962 S C 594.

● —S. 4—Scope—Protection of lawful trading activities—Persons carrying gambling competitions whether entitled to protection under Art 19(1)(g) and (6). As gambling is not trade but res extra commercium it does not fall within the purview of Arts. 19 and 301 of the Constitution—Such persons cannot therefore seek the protection of Art. 19 (1) (g) and cannot question whether restrictions enacted in Ss. 4 and 5 are reasonable and in the interests of the public, See Constitution of India, Art. 19 (1) (g). A I R 1957 S C 628.

● —S. 4—Prize Competitions involving substantial skill — Restrictions on, whether saved by Art. 19 (6). Even assuming that the Act applies to prize competitions which involve substantial skill, restrictions imposed by Ss. 4 and 5 of the Act and Rr. 11 and 12 framed under S. 20 in respect of such competitions are not reasonable restrictions enacted in the public interest and as such are not saved by Art. 19 (6) (Point conceded) —(Rules under S. 20, Rr. 11, 12). —S. 4—Nature of offer to be considered — Not the prizes offered—Contract between parties not essential to constitute offence.

Section 4 of the Act speaks of prizes to be offered and not prizes offered, so that the offer of prizes as contained in the pamphlet can be made the basis of conviction.

The promoter of the competition shall be guilty of the offence even if no one responds by submitting entries of prize competition. The existence or non-existence of a valid contract or where contract can be enforced are extraneous considerations which cannot influence the decision in the matter. 1964 All L J 581 : 1964 (2) Cri L J 632 : A I R 1964 All 572 (575) (Pt F) (Pr 19).

—S. 4—Prize competition organized for residents in States to which Act, not extended—Validity.

It cannot be contended that the fact that the Act applied to only some of the States and not to all the States of India would absolve the offenders of the offence if they organized the prize competitions for the benefit of persons residing in a State to which the Act was not applied. This factor can be taken into consideration while awarding sentence, but not while laying down whether the accused are guilty or not of the offence charged. 1964 All L J 581 : 1964 (2) Cri L J 632 : A I R 1964 All 572 (575) (Pt G) (Pr 20).

SECTION 14

——S. 14 – Competency of ordinary police officer to investigate crimes under the Act— No special procedure laid down by Act for detention and investigation of offences—Act not self-contained.

A consideration of S. 14 of the Prize Competitions Act makes it clear that it does not lay down any new or special procedure. The Act is not a complete Code for the detection and investigation of offences under it; even the Special Police Officer has to fall back upon and follow the provisions of the Code of Criminal Procedure. What the Act makes provision for is that as Special Police Officers are concerned the offence is cognizable. When the offences under the Act were not declared cognizable, the Courts can hold that, except for Special Police Officers the offences continue to be non-cognizable and other police officers can make investigation in accordance with the Code of Criminal Procedue, after obtaining the permission of the Magistrate concerned. PROBATE AND ADMINISTRATION ACT (5 of 1881)

——S. 50 — Revocation of probate — Discretion of Court—Non-citation of necessary party.

Section 50, Probate and Administration Act, confers a discretion on the Court to revoke the grant of a probate on the ground of non-citation of a necessary party. That discretion has to be exercised judicially on well-known principles. It does not follow that because there is a ground, the Court must revoke the probate. 89 Cri L J 41 : AIR 1953 Cal 103 (105, 106) (Pt C) (Prs 18, 19) (DB).

——S. 50—Application for revocation of probate — Laches—Effect of.

A Court may allow a probate to be revoked after a long time. That may be done with cause shown. But it cannot be held that it may be done under any circumstances. It would be contrary to reason and every principle of justice. The doctrine of laches is not an arbitrary or a technical doctrine. Where it would be practically unjust to give a remedy, either because the party has, by his conduct done that which might fairly be regarded as equivalent to a waiver of it, or where, by his conduct and neglect he has, though perhaps not waiving that remedy, yet put the other party in a situation in which it would not be reasonable to place him if the remedy were afterwards to be asserted, in either of these cases lapse of time and delay are most material. 89 Cri L J 41 : AIR 1953 Cal 103 (107) (Pt E) (Pr 31).

——S. 157 (repealed by Act 39 of 1925) — Section 157, Probate and Administration Act applies to a case where the grant is revoked or annulled under S. 50 of the Act and not to a case where the order of issue of grant is vacated on appeal. SECTION 3

●——Ss. 3, 4, 6, 11 — Exercise of power under S. 11 —Appellate Court in appeal or High Court in revision can make an order under S. 6 (1) — Scope of S. 11 (1).

Held, after adopting the rule of beneficial construction that the appellate Court in appeal or the High Court in revision could, in exercise of the power conferred under S. 11 make an order under S. 6 (1) thereof, as the appellate Court and the High Court, agreeing with the Magistrate, found the accused guilty of the offences for which he was charged. (The Supreme Court remanded the matter to High Court to make an order after complying with S. 6 (1) and did not itself exercise powers under S. 11). AIR 1963 S C 1088, Foll. S. 11 (1) ex facie does not circumscribe the jurisdiction of an appellate Court to make an order under the Act only in a case where the trial Court could have made the order. The phraseology used therein is wide enough to enable the appellate Court or the High Court, when the case comes before it, to make such an order. As the Act does not change the quantum of the sentence, but only introduces a provision to reform the offender, there is no reason why the Legislature should have prohibited the exercise of such a power, even if the case was pending against the accused at one stage or other in the hierarchy of tribunals. When S. 11 (1) says that an appellate Court or a revision Court can make an order under the Act, it means that it can make an order also under S. 6 (1) of the Act. If so, 'Court' in S. 6 (1) will include an appellate Court as well as a revisional Court. If an appellate Court or a revisional Court finds a person guilty, under that section it shall not sentence him to imprisonment unless the conditions laid down in that section are satisfied. When a person had been found guilty for the first time of an offence to which the provisions of Ss. 3 and 4 of the Probation of Offenders Act could apply, and such finding, be it of the trial Court or of the appellate Court, was arrived at before the application of the Act, the Court of appeal or revision could not take action under S. 11 (1) of the Act when the case came before it in appeal or revision. The inherent power can, no doubt, be exercised to reconsider orders of dismissal of an appeal or application passed without jurisdiction, where reconsideration is necessary to secure the ends of justice, but the provisions of Ss. 3 and 4 of the Probation of Offenders Act are not mandatory provisions of law and the order of sentence passed on the petitioners could not be said as one without jurisdiction :

The Court has got no inherent power to reopen a judgment in a case which has been disposed of in accordance with the provisions of law unless any of the provisions in the Criminal Procedure Code expressly empower the Court to review or revise the judgment. (1964) 30 Cut L T 282 : AIR 1967 Orissa 54 (55) (Pr 4).

——Ss. 4, 6—Penal Code (1860), S. 394 — Provision for—Imprisonment for life or imprisonment for ten years and fine—Lesser punishment in S. 394 is not alternative sentence — Accused cannot have benefit of provisions of S. 4 or S. 6 of Act.

The provision for punishment in S. 394, Penal Code, for imprisonment for life or imprisonment for ten years and fine cannot be read conjunctively so as to mean that it provides an alternative sentence for the offence concerned. Hence where the accused is convicted under S. 394, Penal Code, the accused cannot be given the benefit of the provisions of S. 4 or S. 6 of the Probation of Offenders Act and released on probation of good conduct on the ground that the offence did not provide for punishment for imprisonment for life. 1965 (2) Cri L J 51 : AIR 1965 Orissa 108 (108) (Prs 14, 15).

——Ss. 4 and 6—Offenders under 21 years of age — Duty of Court to record age — Power to deal with such offenders under S. 4 is discretionary.

After the enforcement of the Probation of Offenders Act (20 of 1958), it is obligatory for the Courts not to impose a sentence of imprisonment when the accused is under 21 years of the age and has committed an offence punishable with imprisonment but not with imprisonment for life. It is therefore one of the essential duties of the Courts to record the age of the accused as estimated by the Courts. It is true that S. 4 of that Act gives wide power to the Courts to deal with such cases irrespective of the age of the accused, but that power is discretionary and has to be exercised in appropriate cases. (1965) 31 Cut L T 617 : 1965 All W R (Supp) 36 (Orissa).

——S. 4 — Conviction under S. 411, Penal Code—Accused being of immature age—Circumstances showing that they had fallen into temptation — Sentences set aside and release ordered on their entering into bonds to appear and receive sentence when called upon and to keep the peace and be of good behaviour for one year. ——S. 4—Scope—Order under—Age of offender—If material—S. 6—Difference.

Section 6 lays down a special provision in respect of offenders under twenty-one years of age. S. 4 is general. It applies to all kinds of offences, whether under or above twenty-one years of age. The only limitation imposed by S. 6 is that in the first instance an offender under twenty-one years of age will not be sentenced to imprisonment. Where therefore the Court deals with the offender under S. 4 of the Act, whether or not he is under twenty-one years of age is of little consequence. 1960 Pat L R 190 : (1961) 1 Cri L J 144 : 1960 B L J R 753 : AIR 1961 Pat 19 (20)(Pt A) (Pr 4).

——S. 4 — 'Punishment' — Meaning of — Power to remit fine.

Section 4 speaks of punishment and not of imprisonment. The word 'punishment' is wide enough to comprehend both the punishment of imprisonment and the punishment of fine. Therefore, S. 4 empowers a Court to remit the fine also. 1960 Pat L R 190 : (1961) 1 Cri L J 144 : 1960 B L J R 753 : AIR 1961 Pat 19 (21) (Pt B) (Pr 5).

——S. 4—Offence under S. 326 read with S. 34, Penal Code — Accused below 18 years of age — Accused cannot be dealt with under the provisions of the Act — Held, however that the accused deserves to be treated leniently considering the facts that he was a junior member of the family and was acting under the influence of the senior member of the family — Penal Code (1860), Ss. 326, 34. 1965 Raj L W 60 : 1965 (1) Cri L J 478 : ILR (1965) 15 Raj 174 : AIR 1965 Raj 74 (78) (Pt E) (Pr 20).

——S. 5—Order for compensation and costs—Discretion—Interference in revision.

Section 5 no doubt empowers the Court to grant in appropriate cases compensation and costs but this is purely in the discretion of the Court. The Court will allow compensation and costs only when it thinks fit in any case. When no prayer for compensation and costs is made by the party or when the Court in its discretion does not allow costs and compensation, the High Court sitting in revision, cannot interfere with the discretion of the Court which does not appear to have been exercised capriciously and unreasonably. 1960 Pat L R 190 : (1961) 1 Cri L J 144 : 1960 B L J R 753 : AIR 1961 Pat 19 (21) (Pt C) (Pr 6).

——S. 6 — Exercise of power under S. 11—Appellate Court in appeal or High Court in revision can make an order under S. 6 (1)—Scope of S. 11 (1). See Probation of Offenders Act (20 of 1958), S. 3. 1965 (1) Cri L J 360 : AIR 1965 S C 444.

——S. 6—Courts exercising appellate or revisional jurisdiction — Can exercise jurisdiction under S. 6 — Beneficial statutes—To be given wider interpretation. See Probation of Offenders Act (1958), S. 11 (1). 1963 (2) Cr L J 173 : AIR 1963 S C 1088.

——S. 6 (1) — Words 'may be made' in S. 11 (1)—Import of—Nature and amount of discretion under S. 11 as regards exercise of jurisdiction under S. 6 (1) —Though the word "may" might connote merely an enabling or permissive power in the sense of the usual phrase "it shall be lawful" it is also capable of being construed as referring to a compellable duty, particularly when it refers to a power conferred on Court or other judicial authority.

The entirety of S. 6 (1) therefore applies to guide or condition the jurisdiction of the High Court under S. 11 (1) and an appellate Court cannot claim any unfettered discretion in dealing with case that comes before it under S. 11 (1). Cr. App. No. 339 of 1961, D/- 10-5-1962 (Patna), Reversed. See Probation of Offenders Act (1958), S. 11 (1). 1963 (2) Cr L J 173 : AIR 1963 S C 1088.

●——S. 6 (1) — Appellate Court modifying trial Court's order — Crucial date for reckoning age of accused for S. 6 (1), is the date upon which the trial Court had to deal with the offender. See Probation of Offenders Act (1958), S. 11 (1). (1963) 2 Cr L J 173 : AIR 1963 S C 1088.

●——S. 6 (1) — Object of — Age relevant under S. 6 (1) is for purpose of punishment and not for offence —Accused not under 21 years when found guilty—Section does not apply.

The object of the Act is to prevent the turning of youthful offenders into criminals by their association with hardened criminals of mature age within the walls of a prison. The method adopted is to attempt their possible reformation instead of inflicting on them the normal punishment for their crime.

The object would make it clear that the question of the age of the person is relevant not for the purpose of determining his guilt but only for the purpose of the punishment which he should suffer for the offence of which he has been found, on the evidence, guilty. Where, therefore, the Court finds that the offender is not a person under the age of 21 on the date when the Court found him guilty. S. 6 (1) has no application to him. Ramji Missar v. State of Bihar. 1963 B L J R 643 : 1963 Mad L J (Cr) 575 : (1963) 2 S C J 571 : 1963 (2) Cr L J 173 : (1963) 1 S C W R 694 : 1963 Mad W N 402 : (1964) 1 S C A 98 : 1 L R 42 Pat 357 : AIR 1963 S C 1088 (1091) (Pt A) (Pr 6).

——S. 6 — Accused under 21 years convicted of an offence—Provisions of S. 6 should be followed. 1962 (1) Cri L J 168 : AIR 1962 Manipur 7 (11) (Pt D) (Pr 24).

——S. 6—Scope—Court passing sentence of imprisonment on offender under 21 years has to record reasons therefor—Omission to record reasons would be an irregularity—(Criminal P. C. (1898), S. 537.)

The section does not prohibit the passing of an order of imprisonment against an accused found guilty of an offence, though under 21 years of age; all that it requires is that Court has got to record its reasons for sentencing such an offender to imprisonment. The omission to record reasons would at the most be an irregularity and will not affect the jurisdiction of the Magistrate. 1964 Mad L J (Cri) 684 : (1964) 2 Mys L J 342 : 1965 (2) Cri L J 372 : AIR 1965 Mys 224 (226) (Pt C) (Pr 6).

——S. 6 — Review of order of dismissal of revision petition — Advocate in revision failing to urge that convicts were entitled to benefit of Ss. 4 and 6 of Probation of Offenders Act — Review under inherent power does not lie — Court has no inherent power to reopen a judgment in a case which has been disposed of according to law — Ss. 3 & 4 of the Probation of Offenders Act are not mandatory provisions of law. See Criminal P. C. (1898), S. 561-A. 1965 (2) Cri L J 372 : AIR 1965 Mys 224.

——S. 6 — Penal Code (1860), S. 394—Provision for punishment under — Imprisonment for life or imprisonment for ten years and fine—Lesser punishment in S. 394 is not alternative sentence — Accused cannot have benefit of provisions of S. 4 or S. 6 of the Probation of Offenders Act on the ground that the offence did not provide for punishment for imprisonment for life. See Probation of Offenders Act (1958), S. 4. 1965 (2) Cri L J 51 : AIR 1965 Orissa 106.

——S. 6—Act extended to district—Fact not brought to High Court's notice before disposing of revision petition—High Court has no inherent power to review its own order passed on criminal revision petition — Portion of sentence in judgment cannot be dissociated from other parts of judgment. See Criminal P. C. (1898), S. 561-A. 1965 (1) Cr L J 56 : AIR 1965 Orissa 7.

——Ss. 6 and 4 — Difference between — Order under S. 4 — Age of offender not material — S. 6 lays down a special provision in respect of offenders under 21 years of age — S. 4 is general and applies to all kinds of offenders whether under or above 21 years of age. See Probation of Offenders Act (20 of 1958), S. 4. 1961 (1) Cri L J 144 : AIR 1961 Pat 19.

——Ss. 6, 3, 4 and 11 — Principles to be followed by Court in dealing with offenders below 21 years of age—Provisions of S. 6 are mandatory—Non-compliance renders sentence of imprisonment void.

Reading Ss. 3, 4 and 11 with S. 6, the correct legal position is that when a Court has found a person under 21 years of age to be guilty of an offence not punishable with imprisonment for life, then the trial Court, before it passes any sentence of imprisonment on the offender, must satisfy itself that it would not be desirable to deal with him under S. 3 or S. 4 of the Act, having regard to the circumstances of the case including the nature of the offence and the character of the offender and where the Court sentences him to imprisonment, it must record its reasons for doing so, and, further, a duty has also been laid upon the High Court or any other Court dealing with such a case on appeal or in revision to satisfy itself likewise. It is also important to point out in this connection that for the purpose of satisfying itself within the meaning of S. 6 whether it would not be desirable to deal with an offender under S. 3 or S. 4, the Court shall call for a report from the probation officer and consider it together with any other relevant information which may be available on the record.

Section 6 is mandatory in its character and a sentence passed by a Court without applying its mind to the principles enunciated above, must be set aside. 1964 Raj L W 286 : I L R (1964) 14 Raj 901 : 1966 Cri L J 735 (736) (Pt A) (Pr 3) (Raj).

——S. 6—Applicability—Age of accused not sufficient by itself to attract provision.

Age alone should not be the guiding factor for the application S. 6 of the Probation of Offenders Act. While giving benefit to the accused of the provision of the section the Court must keep in view the nature and the circumstances of the case.

Where the accused, a young man of about 20 years had assaulted a lonely lady in the jungle with a view to commit rape, and would have succeeded in his designs if at that time the cry of the lady had not attracted some persons to the spot of occurrence.

Held, that the offence was of a serious nature and under the circumstances accused cannot be given the benefit of the provisions of S. 6 of the Probation of Oeffenders Act. I L R (1963) 13 Raj 650 : 1963 Raj L W 288.

——S. 6—Applicability — Accused under 21 years of age—Conviction under S. 377, I. P. C., altered by Apellate Court to one for mere attempt to commit offence and convicted under S. 377/511 and sentence reduced — When appellate decision given, the Act had already come into force in Rajasthan but Court had not given any reason for not proceeding under S. 6— Appellate Court held should have complied with S. 6. See Probation of Offenders Act (1958), S. 4. 1962 Raj L W 241.

●——S. 11—Scope of—S. 11 (1) ex facie does not circumscribe the jurisdiction of an appellate Court to make an order under the Act only in a case where the trial Court could have made the order. The phraseology used therein is wide enough to enable the appellate court or the High Court, when the case comes before it, to make such an order. It was purposely made comprehensive, as the Act was made to implement a social reform. As the Act does not change the quantum of the sentence, but only introduces a provision to reform the offender there is no reason why the legislature should have prohibited the exercise of such a power, even if the case was pending before the accused at one stage or other, in the hierarchy of tribunals. See Probation of offenders Act (1958), S. 3. 1965 (1) Cr L J 369 : AIR 1965 S C 444.

● —Ss. 11 (1), 6 — Courts exercising appellate or revisional jurisdiction — Can exercise jurisdiction under S. 6—Beneficial statute — To be given wider interpretation.

The words in S. 11 (1) 'pass an order under the Act' are not to be construed strictly and literally, but to be understood to mean 'to exercise the powers of jurisdiction conferred by the Act.' This wider interpretation might perhaps be justified by the scope and object of this section which is to apply 'notwithstanding anything in the Code or any other law' to all Courts empowered to sentence offenders to imprisonment. To read a beneficial provision of this universal type in a restricted sense, so as to confine the power of these Courts to the exercise of the powers under Ss. 3 and 4 alone would not be in accord with sound principles of statutory interpretation.

It must, therefore, be held that the Courts mentioned in S. 11, are thereby empowered to exercise the jurisdiction conferred on Courts not only under Ss. 3 and 4 and the consequential provisions but also under S. 6. Ramji Missar v. State of Bihar, 1963 BLJR 643 : 1963 Mad L J (Cr) 575 : (1963) 2 S C J 571 : 1963 (2) Cr L J 173 : (1963) 1 S C W R 694 : 1963 Mad W N 402 : (1964) 1 S C A 98 : ILR 42 Pat 357 : AIR 1963 S C 1088 (1092) (Pt B) (Pr 12).

● —Ss. 11 (1), 6 (1)—Words 'may be made'—Import of — Nature and amount of discretion under S. 11 as regards exercise of jurisdiction under S. 6 (1).

Though the word 'may' might connote merely an enabling or permissive power in the sense of the usual phrase 'it shall be lawful', it is also capable of being construed as referring to a compellable duty, particularly when it refers to a power conferred on a Court or other judicial authority.

The fact that the power is conferred on a Court might militate against the literal interpretation of 'may'. This apart, the power conferred by S. 11 (1) is to pass 'an order under the Act' and it would not be a proper construction of S. 11 (1) to hold that the High Court, etc., could pass orders in appeal or revision without reference to the standards, tests or guidance which the statute has prescribed for the primary Courts. The power conferred on appellate or other Courts by S. 11 (1) is thus of the same nature and characteristics and subject to the same criteria and limitation as that conferred on the Courts under Ss. 3, 4 and 6. This view is further confirmed by the terms of S. 11 (3).

The entirety of S. 6 (1) therefore applies to guide or condition the jurisdiction of the High Court under S. 11 (1) and an appellate Court cannot claim any unfettered discretion in dealing with case that comes before it under S. 11 (1). Cr. App. No. 339 of 1961, dated 10th May, 1962 (Patna), Reversed. Ramji Missar v. State of Bihar, 1963 BLJR 643 : 1963 Mad L J (Cr) 575 : (1963) 2 S C J 571 : 1963 (2) Cr L J 173 : (1963) 1 S C W R 694 : 1963 Madh W N 402 : (1964) 1 S C A 98 : ILR 42 Pat 357 : AIR 1963 S C 1088 (1092, 1093) (Pt C) (Prs 16, 17).

● —Ss. 11 (1), 6 (1)—Appellate Court modifying trial Court's order — Crucial date for reckoning age of accused for S. 6 (1).

As regards the crucial date for reckoning the age, where an appellate Court modifies the judgment of the trial Judge and when S. 6 becomes applicable to a person only on the decision of an appellate or a revisional Court, it must be held that it is the date upon which the trial Court had to deal with the offender. Ramji Missar v. State of Bihar, 1963 BLJR 643 : (1963) Mad L J (Cr) 575 : (1963) 2 S C J 571 : 1963 (2) Cr L J 173 : (1963) 1 S C W R 694 : 1963 Mad W N 402 : (1964) 1 S C A 98 : ILR 42 Pat 357 : AIR 1963 S C 1088 (1093) (Pt D) (Pr 19).

—S. 11 (2)—Order under S. 3 improperly passed — Prosecution can also go in appeal. See Probation of Offenders Act (1958), S. 3. 1964 (1) Cri L J 408 : AIR 1964 Manipur 20.

—S. 11 (1)—Relevant date for purpose of applying the Act is the date on which an appeal or revision comes up for consideration : Cr. Revn. No. 31 of 1962, dated 1-12-1962, (Raj). Rel. on. ILR (1964) Cut 221 : 30 Cut L T 370 : (1964) 6 OJD 210 : 1965 (1) Cr L J 56 : AIR 1965 Orissa 7 (8) (Pt A) (Pr 6).

—S. 11 (2)— Right of appeal when resort has been taken to S. 3 or 4— Not confined to convicted person or State—Available to complainant also.

The right view, to adopt with regard to the construction of sub-s. (2) of S. 11 is that the legislature has conferred the power both upon the prosecution and upon the accused person to prefer an appeal even when resort has been taken to S. 3 or 4 of the Act with regard to the merit of the order. Since the language of sub-s. (2) of S. 11 is comprehensive, flexible and unrestricted as to the person who can prefer an appeal, there is no justification for confining a right of appeal only to the convicted person or even to the State when the State is conducting the prosecution, but it must be taken that the privilege of filing an appeal on the narrow question of propriety of an action under S. 3 or 4 of the Act is conferred upon the complainant as well. 1964 (2) Cri L J 176 : 1965 B L J R 387 : I L R 44 Pat 567 : A I R 1964 Pat 358 (359, 360) (Pt A) (Prs 4, 5) (DB).

——Ss. 2 and 3-B—Plaintiff assessed to tax under Act — Suit for declaration that District Board was not entitled to charge more than Rs. 50 per annum—Suit decreed — Appeal — Act amended before hearing of appeal. validating imposition of tax upto Rs. 2,000. Held that as the law, as it stood on the date of hearing of appeal, was modified wholly validating a tax which was partially invalid at the date when the judgment was given by trial Court effect must be given to the modification and the judgment of the trial Court must be reversed. ——S. 2—'Any one person' (Government of India Act (1935), S. 142-A) — (U. P. District Boards Act (10 of 1922), Ss. 108, 114).

Sections 108 and 114 of the U. P. District Boards Act contemplate taxing of any person, and therefore, contemplate the taxing of juristic persons. There is no indication either in the provisions of S. 142-A of the Government of India Act, 1935, or in any provision of the Professions Tax Limitation Act which should justify interpreting the expression 'any one person' in the restricted manner as not applying to a juristic person. A I R 1955 N U C (All) 1694 (DB).

——S. 3-B (as inserted by Act 61 of 1949) — Plaintiff assessed to tax under Act — Suit for declaration that District Board was not entitled to charge more than Rs. 50/- per annum in view of S. 2, Professions Tax Limitation Act—Suit decreed—Appeal—Act amended before hearing of appeal validating imposition of tax up to Rs. 2,000 — Effect if could be given to amendment in appeal — (Interpretation of Statutes)—(Civil P. PROFESSIONS TAX LIMITATION (AMENDMENT AND VALIDATION) ACT (61 of 1949)

—Ss. 2, 3—Effect of.

The result of the amending Act is that the tax on circumstances and property levied under S. 108 of the U. P. District Boards is not subject to the limitation laid down under the Professions Tax Limitation Act and that, therefore the maximum amount of such tax can be such as can be levied under the U. P. District Boards Act, 1922, which had been in force from before the 31st of March 1939, referred to in S. 142-A of the Government of India Act, 1935. The upper limit laid down under the rules framed by the U. P. Government under S. 114 (d) of the U. P. District Boards Act is Rs. 2,000. By the adaptation of laws Order, 1950, the main Act, namely, the Professions Tax Limitation Act (1941) stood repealed. This means that the Act did not remain in force after the coming into force of the Constitution on the 26th of January 1950. and that therefore no question of its being void in view of Arts. 13 and 31 of the Constitution should arise.

Even if any such question arose it would not affect the validity of the Act prior to the 26th of January, 1950 in view of the amendment carried out in the principal Act and that amendment deemed to exist from the very first day the imposition of the tax for an amount larger than Rs. 50 was valid and its recovery from the assessee was also valid. The repeal of the Act would not revive the right which the assessee had lost in the tax which had been realised from it validly. AIR 1955 N U C (All) 1694 (DB).

District Boards Act. 1922, which has been in force from before 21st March 1939 referred to in S. 142A of the Government of India Act, 1935:— No question of its being void in view of Arts. 13 and 31 of the Constitution should arise. SECTION 4

——S. 4 (1) (a)—Offence of possession of prohiblted liquor — Proof—Duty of prosecution — Examination by Chemical examiner of article, is necessary—Mere oral statement of prohibition officers that article smelt of prohibited article is not sufficient.

When scientific methods are available to prove the fact of alcholic content of an article the prohibition officers should not be allowed to confine proof of such an article hy their mere oral statements because the primary duty of the prosecution is to exclude every possibility of a doubt or suspicion before they ask for the conviction of a person charged under the Act. The smell of liquor is not sufficient to raise a presumption against a person charged for an offence under the Act. The prosecution when they seize the arrack should get it examined by the Chemical Examiner. They cannot be allowed to adopt an easier course examining its own officers to prove the contents of the tins only by smell. If this is to be accepted as a general rule, it would be giving a very large latitude to the prohibition officers to prove alcoholic content of any prohibited article or drug under the Act by mere smell. 1964 Mad L J (Cri) 519 : (1964) 2 Andh L T 164 : 1964 (2) Cri L J 271 : (1964) 2 Andh W R 127 : AIR 1964 Andh Pra 429 (430) (Pr 1).

——S. 2 (3)—Validity.

The word 'liquor' in item 8, List II is wide enough to bring within its ambit the substance which may not necessarily include alcohol and, therefore, the Assam Liquor Prohibition Act (1 of 1953). was within the legislative competence of the State Legislature : AIR 1951 S C 318, Foll. See Constitution of India, Sch. 7, List 2, Item 8. AIR 1961 Assam 16 (DB).

——S. 2 (3)—Power of State Government to declare by notification any substance as liquor—When all the provisions of the Act are taken into consideration, it cannot be said to be uncontrolled so as to be hit by the doctrine of excessive delegation. See Constitution of India, Art. 245. AIR 1961 Assam 16 (DB).

——Ss. 2 (3) and 3—Validity—Act is not invalid as it expressly omits substances, restrictions on trade in which would have been considered unreasonable. See Constitution of India, Art. 19 (1) (g). A I R 1961 Assam 16 (DB).

—ASSAM OPIUM PROHIBITION ACT (23 of 1947)

——S. 5 (a)—Repugnancy of State Law to existing law—S. 5 (a) prevails over S. 9, Opium Act by virtue of S. 107 (2) of Govt. of India Act. See Government of India Act (1935), S. 107 (2). 1960 Cr L J 317 : AIR 1960 Assam 37 (DB).

——S. 5 (a) — Validity — (Constitution of India, Art. 14).

Section 5 (a), Assam Opium Prohibition Act does not violate the provisions of Art. 14, of the Constitution. Under the provisions of the State law it is obvious that the prosecution of the person concerned in this State could only be under the provisions of the Assam Act (XLIII of 1947) when the provisions of the earlier Central Act (1 of 1878) were inconsistent with those of the latter Provincial Act. It is also well known that even under Art. 14 of the Constitution of India, the State Legislature is not prevented from making laws which may be necessary to meet the demands of special classes of cases or special exigencies in any particular territory. For instance, the act of smuggling in any particular territory may be so notorious that it may require a special legislation to meet such offences and to stop the evil. 1952 S C J 168, Rel. on. ILR (1959) 9 Assam 389 : 1960 Cri L J 317 : AIR 1960 Assam 37 (38) (Pt B) (Pr 6) (DB).

——S. 5 (a) — Possession under section is conscious possession—Proof of mens rea essential for offence—Absence of evidence that opium was kept by accused —Element of mens rea not proved beyond doubt — Hence conviction under S. 5 (a) was set aside.

It cannot be doubted that before a person can be convicted under S. 5 (a) of the Act, his possession must be proved. The possession contemplated under S. 5 (a) of the Act is a conscious possession. In order to find a person guilty under S. 5 (a) the element of mens rea has got to be esstablished and that can only be established by proof of the fact that the accused had knowledge of the existence of the contraband article within his compound and that he was in the effective control of the place from where the thing is said to have been recovered. It is true that it may be difficult for the prosecution to prove by positive evidence the fact of the knowledge. It is fact which has to be gathered from the circumstances of each case. AIR 1950 Assam 152 and AIR 1952 Assam 26, Rel. on.

Held on considering circumstances that they did not lead to only one inference that the accused must have had knowledge of opium being at a particular place. There was no evidence that opium was in fact kept by accused there and that was not the inference which could legitimately be drawn. Thus element of mens rea had not been proved beyond doubt against the accused.

Hence conviction under S. 5 (a) was set aside. ILR (1959) 11 Assam 406.

——S. 5 (a)—Burden of proof — Discovery of opium with accused established—She must prove that it was planted on her and that she had no knowledge—(Evidence Act, (1872), Ss. 101, 103 and 105). A I R 1955 N U C (Assam) 4233 (DB).

——S. 5—Possession of contraband opium—Husband and wife living together — Contraband opium recovered from house—No definite evidence against husband—Husband held could not be convicted—Wife being first offender her sentence was reduced — (Opium Act (1878), S. 9). A I R 1955 N U C (Assam) 4217 (DB).

——S. 5 (a)—Possession of opium—Proof of mens rea essential for offence.

Possession of Opium within the meaning of S. 5 (a) of the Assam Opium Prohibition Act must imply knowledge. It must be conscious possession making some kind of control possible, or in other words, there must be mens rea or guilty knowledge before a person could be convicted of an offence under S. 5 (a) for possession of opium.

The accused who were two brothers, were living in the same house which was enclosed by a Court yard inaccessible to persons from outside. On a search a large quantity of opium i.e. 1¼ seer was found hidden in a heap of bricks lying in the court yard of the house. There was, however, no evidence pointing to the conclusion that both or any one of them had guilty knowledge of the existence of the opium. On the other hand the evidence did not exclude the possibility of the opium being kept there by the other inmates of the house.

Held, that it could not be held in the circumstances that the opium was in the possession of the accused merely because they were owners of the house. In the absence of any evidence pointing to their guilty knowledge they could not be convicted under S. 5 (a). AIR 1952 Assam 26 (27) (Pr 6) (DB).

——S. 5 (a)—Sentence.

Where the opium seized from the accused is 15 Seers, it suggests that the importing is on a large scale and hence the sentence of rigorous imprisonment for 5 years and a fine of Rs. 2,000 is not excessive. ILR (1951) 3 Assam 321 : 52 Cri L J 1235 : AIR 1951 Assam 124 (126) (Pt B) (Pr 8) (DB).

——Ss. 5 (a) and 28 — Possession — Meaning—Presumption—Burden of proof—Opium Act (1878), Ss. 9 and 10—Evidence Act (1872), Ss. 101-103.

Possession of opium within the meaning of S. 5 (a) must imply knowledge. It must be conscious possession making some kind of control possible, or, in other words, there must be mens rea or guilty knowledge before a person could be convicted of an offecce under S. 5 (a) for possessing opium.

Thus, a person charged with the possession of opium must be shown to have knowledge of the existence of the opium in his house before he can be said to be in possession of it. Mere recovery of opium from a house in which he lives along with other persons, would not be sufficient to show that he was in possession with knowledge of its existence.

Unless conscious possession on the part of the accused has been proved, no presumption under S. 28 arises in favour of the prosecution.

The burden of proving conscious possession on the part of the accused remains on the prosecution and that burden is not shifted to the accused by anything that is contained in S. 28. 51 Cri L J 973 : I L R (1950) 2 Assam 333 : A I R 1950 Assam 152 (153) (Prs 7, 10, 13) (DB).

——S. 6 — Reason to suspect or believe—Conviction for.

Before an owner or driver of any vehicle can be convicted under S. 6, he must knowingly permit the vehicle to be used for the commission by any other person of an offence punishable under the Act or the rules made thereunder. Reason to suspect or reason to believe, is not enough for the purposes of a conviction under S. 6; existence of knowledge alone, and not something less than knowledge, can justify a conviction under S. 6. 1952 Cri L J 390 : ILR (1952) 4 Assam 178 : AIR 1952 Assam 47 (48) (Pt B) (Pr 12) (DB).

SECTION 10

——S. 10—Abetment—Proof—Opium recovered from person of wife in presence of husband — At time of recovery and afterwards wife and husband giving joint defence — These facts held not sufficient to convict husband of abetment — From the joint defence it could not be inferred that the husband was an abetter — (Penal Code (1860), S. 107). AIR 1955 NUC (Assam) 3305.

——Ss. 11, 16, 17 — Evidence of general repute — Proof—Criminal P. C. (1898), S. 117.

General repute or reputation of a man may be proved like any other fact in issue. Witnesses may depose to what the reputation of a particular individual is. A witness giving evidence as to the reputation may depose that a particular individual has the reputation of being a habitual smuggler. Such a witness may be examined and cross-examined as to his means of knowing the reputation of the individual he is talking about. The value of evidence that he gives would no doubt depend to a great extent on whether he is in a position to know of the reputation of the man against whom he is deposing. The evidence of repute is essentially based on hearsay. Where, therefore, reputation is spoken of or described as a fact even though the reputation came to be known by hearsay the evidence is not inadmissible. The weight that should attack to evidence of general repute would vary not only in the circumstances of each case but in the case of each witness. The evidence will have to be weighed in relation to other facts elicited from the statement of the witnesses. General repute has to be distinguished from mere rumour. If a person is suspected of a crime in a particular case by some and there are others who do not share the suspicion, the evidence of those who suspects him cannot be described as evidence of general repute. But, if an individual is suspected in several cases and in course of time people begin to believe and talk about him as a thief or a robber or a smuggler by habit, he may be said to bave acquired the reputation that is attributed to him. The roots of a bad reputation would be ultimately found planted in rumour and it would be difficult to lay down any rule as to how many instances or how long it should take the rumour to ripen into reputation. All that it means and implies is what is thought of a person by others and the general reputation of a person is merely the collective opinion of those in whose midst he lives. It need not necessarily be the opinion of the entire community. Evidence which discloses the existence of collective opinion is evidence of general repute. Case law discussed. 52 Cri L J 966 : ILR (1951) 3 Assam 181 : A I R 1951 Assam 106 (114) (Pt G) (Prs 53, 54) (DB).

——S. 16—Order under Assam Opium Prohibition Act — Finality of — Like into all other Acts, the General Clauses Act applies for purposes of interpretation of the Constitution, unless the contexf otherwise requires — Art. 227 has no retrospective effect and cannot apply to a proceeding which was pending when the Constitution came into force—When an order under S. 16 of the Assam Opium Prohibition Act passed at appellate stage had become final, when the Constitution came into force. it was not open to challenge under Art. 227 — (General Clauses Act (1897), S. 6). See Constitution of India, Preamble. 1953 Cri LJ 395: AIR 1953 Assam 35 (FB).

——Ss. 16 and 17—Notification No. MEX, 66/48—Empowerment therein is special.

Notification No. MEX, 66/48, dated 5.6.48, empowered all Magistrates of the first class in the State of Assam to exercise powers under S. 17.

Having regard to the definition of the word "Magistrate" in S. 3 (31) of the General Clauses Act and the connotation of the word "Magistrate" in Ch. II of the Code in which manifestly a Magistrate or a Court of Magistrate is regarded as an office and not an official, the notification in question fulfilled the requirements of S. 16 read with S. 39 (1) of the Code. AIR 1915 Mad 1159, Dissent. from. State v. Judhabir Chetri, ILR (1953) 5 Assam 24 : 1953 Cri L J 395 : AIR 1953 Assam 35 (39) (Pt C) (Pr 17) (FB).

——Ss. 16, 17 (2)—Period of duration of externment—Unreasonableness—Constitution of India, Art. 19.

The period of duration of externment under S. 17 is to be determined by a Court of law after giving the fullest opportunity to the person proceeded against of representing his case. The Magistrate has been given the authority to fix the period. His order is subject to appeal to the Court of Sessions and an-order under S. 17 (3) would be subject to the supervisory jurisdiction of the High Court under Art. 227 of the Constitution. Hence it cannot be said that in leaving the specification of the period of externment to the Magistrate whose decision is subject to judicial review and scrutiny, the Legislature acted unreasonably. Hence, the validity of provisions contained in Ss. 16, and 17 is not assailable on the ground that no maximum duration for externment has been fixed. AIR 1950 S C 211 (Majority view), Foll. ——S. 16—Habitual smuggler—Specific instances.

Proof of specific instances of smuggling is not necessary in law as the fact that a person is a habitual smuggler may be proved by evidence of general repute or otherwise. ILR (1951) 3 Assam 181 : 52 Cri L J 966 : AIR 1951 Assam 106 (116) (Pt I) (Pr 62) (DB).

——Ss. 16, 17 — Unreasonableness on territorial grounds—Constitution of India, Art. 19.

The reasonableness of the provisions of Ss. 16 and 17 cannot be questioned on the ground that they enable the Court to extern a person from the entire State. The reasonableness of the impugned legislation has to be determined on the basis of existing conditions. The Court is not concerned with the situation that might arise if every State were to pass a similar legislation, and to pass a similar order against the person. SECTION 17

——S. 17 (3)—Order under Assam Opium Prohibition Act—Finality of—Article 227 of the Constitution has no retrospective effect—Order passed at appellate stage which had become final when the Constitution was enforced is not open to challenge under Art. 227 —General Clause Act applies to the interpretation of the Constitution as well—(General Clauses Act (1897), S. 6). ——S. 17 (3)—Order under—Interference—Criminal P. C. (1898), Ss 439, 561-A.

The effect of S. 17 (3) is to exclude the revisional jurisdiction of the High Court under S. 439, Criminal P. C. at least by necessary implication, if not expressly. The order of the Sessions Judge, therefore, is not revisable under S. 439 of the Criminal P. C. The attribute of finality which the law attaches to the order under S. 17 (3) will also prevent the High Court from exercising its inherent jurisdiction under S. 561-A, Criminal P. C. Case law relied on. I L R (1951) 3 Assam 181 : 52 Cri L J 966 : A I R 1951 Assam 106 (109) (Pt A) (Pr 16) (DB).

——S. 17 (3)—Effect on powers of superintendence —Constitution of India, Art. 227 (1).

No provision contained in any local or special law if it conflicts with an express provision contained in the Constitution can have any force or validity. An Act of the Provincial Legislature cannot have the effect of curtailing the powers conferred on the High Courts by the Constitution of India. Hence S. 17, Cl. (3) has not the effect of limiting the powers conferred on the High Courts by Art. 227 (1) of the Constitution. 52 Cri L J 966 : I L R (1951) 3 Assam 181 : A I R 1951 Assam 106 (110) (Pt C) (Pr 22) (DB).

PREAMBLE

——Preamble—Validity of Act—Certain provisions of Act declared invalid—Rest of Act declared valid.

The following provisions of the Bombay Prohibition Act, 1949, are invalid—

(1) Clause (o) of S. 12, so far as it affects the possession of liquid medicinal and toilet preparations containing alcohol.

(2) Clause (d) of S. 12, so far as it affects the selling or buying of such medicinal and toilet preparations containing alcobol.

(3) Clause (b) of S. 13, so far as it affects the consumption or use of such medicinal and toilet preparations containing alcohol.

(4) Clause (a) of S. 23, so far as it prohibits the commendation of any intoxicant or hemp.

(5) Clause (b) of S. 23 in entirety.

(6) Clause (a) of sub-s. (1) of S. 2 so far as it prohibits commendation of any intoxicant or hemp.

(7) Sub-section (1) of S. 136, in entirety.

(8) Clauses (b), (c), (e) and (f) of sub-s. (2) of S. 136, in their entirety.

The rest of the provisions of the Act are valid. The declaration that some of the provisions of the Act are invalid does not affect the validity of the Act as it remains. A I R 1951 Bom 210 (FB), Affirmed.

● ——Preamble—Constitution of India, Arts. 37 and 47 — Bombay Prohibition Act (25 of 1949) has gone beyond scope of directive laid down in Art. 47 inasmuch as it does not prima facie appear to have made adequate provision for allowing the use and consumption of intoxicating drinks for medicinal purposes. See Constitution of India, Art. 37. 52 Cri L J 80 : A I R 1951 Bom 210 (FB).

——Pre—Application of Act to State of Saurashtra by notifications—Notifications not expressed to be made by or by order of Raj Pramukh — Application whether valid.

Rule 11 of the Rules of Business framed in pursuance of S. 6 of the Saurashtra State Regulation of Government Ordinance, 1948, is not mandatory but only directory because it does not lay down that if the provision of the affirmative rule is not complied with, adverse consequences will follow. Hence, where notifications bringing into force in the State of Saurashtra, the Bombay Prohibition Act, 1949, as adapted and applied by the Saurashtra State is signed by a person who is a Secretary to the Government of Saurashtra, the mere fact that the orders contained in the notifications are not expressed to be made by or by order of the Raj Pramukh does not make such orders ipso facto invalid : A I R (34) 1947 F C 38; 50 Bom L R 471, Foll.; A I R (37) 1950 M B 34, Not foll.

——S. 2 (24)—Definition of liquor, if ultra vires. The definition of liquor in S. 2 (24) of the Act is not ultra vires in that it includes all liquids containing alcohol because such a meaning could not have been intended to be excluded from the scope of term "intoxicating liquor" in entry 31 of List II. To the extent to which the Prohibition Act prevents the possession, use and consumption of beverages and medicines and toilet preparations containing alcohol for legitimate purposes the provisions are void as offending against Art. 19 (1) (f) of the Constitution even if they may be within the legislative competence of the Provincial Legislature. ● ——S. 6-A—Scope—Consultation with Board under S. 6-A (6) is not a condition precedent to launching prosecution under Act.

Section 6-A creates three distinct obligations: (1) upon the State to constitute a Board for the purposes specified in sub-s. (1); (2) upon the Board when consulted, to advise the State Government whether a substance mentioned in sub-s. (1) is unfit for use as intoxicating liquor; and (3) an obligation on the State, when the advice of the Board is received, to determine whether the article is fit or unfit to be used as intoxicating liquor. There is, however no obligation expressly imposed upon the State in any given case to consult the Board of Experts, nor can such a provision be implied. By declining to avail itself of the machinery provided, by sub-s (6) of S. 6-A, in cases which are not sent to the Board the State will not be entitled to rely on the presumption arising under the last sentence of that sub-section. The State may in a prosecution for infringement of the prohibitions contained in Ss. 12 and 13 rely upon the presumption, after resorting to the machinery under S. 6-A (6), but is not obliged to rely upon the presumption. ——S. 6-A (as amended by Act 26 of 1952) — Bombay Spirituous Medicinal Preparations (Sales) Rules, 1954, Rr. 2 and 3 — Restrictions on consumption of spirituous medicinal preparations — Effect of — Determination under S. 6 A—Effect—Act ultra vires due to incompetency of Legislature and invalid due to inconsistency with Part III of Constitution. ——S. 6-A (as amended by Act 26 of 1952) — Reference to Board of Experts and its answer — Validity of.

The quantity required to produce intoxication is not incidental to the determination of the question whether the preparation is or is not unfit for use as intoxicating liquor within the meaning of sub-s. (6) of S. 6-A. And as this part of the reference is outside the scope of S. 6 A, any advice tendered by the Board of Experts to Government in that regard is not advice tendered by a statutory body in the discharge of its function as such a body. A I R 1956 Bom 304 (309) (Pt B) (Pr 10).

——S. 6-A (1) and (6) (as amended by Act 26 of 1952) — Fit or unfit for use as intoxicating liquor — Meaning of.

The words "fit for use as intoxicating liquor and unfit for such use" occurring in S. 6 A (1) and (6) are used in the sense of fit for use for beverage purposes and unfit for such use. The mere presence of alcohol in a preparation does not render it fit for use as intoxicating liquor. Therefore, it is not correct to interpret the section as meaning anything more or less than that a preparation is "fit for use as intoxicating liquor" if it is capable of being used in the way in which drink is normally used and for the same purposes.

Further, it cannot be held that the words 'fit for use as intoxicating beverages' only applied to articles which were medicinal and toilet articles in name and not to articles which were primarily medicinal and toilet preparations but capable of being used as a drink or a beverage. For to hold so, will defeat the intention of the Legislature in preventing the noxious use of innocent articles. A I R 1956 Bom 304 (312, 313) (Pt F) (Pr 15).

——S. 6-A (6) — Determination by Board of Experts raises rebuttable presumption.

The determination by the Board of Experts as to what preparations are fit for use as intoxicating liquor under S. 6-A, only raises a rebuttable presumption. And though the Government is not bound to accept the recommendation of the Board still if the Government does not choose to do so, the value of its determination will of necessity be affected because the fact that the Board has taken a contrary view will in itself be a strong weapon in the hands of the party aggrieved. A I R 1956 Bom 304 (314, 315) (Pt H) (Pr 20).

——S. 6-A—'Fit for use as intoxicating liquor'—'Intoxicate', meaning of—(Words and Phrases).

Assuming the meaning of the words 'fit for use as intoxicating liquor' in S. 6-A is 'calculated to intoxicate', then the word 'intoxicate' in that connection, having regard to the fact that S. 6-A is designed to prevent the abuse of articles innocent in themselves so as to defeat the provisions of the Prohibition Act, would only relate to a state in which a person may be described to be neither sober nor drunk; in other words, when he shows some obvious signs of having had a drink, although such signs may not lead to any objectionable behaviour on his part. ——S. 11—'It shall be lawful'—Meaning of.

In the context of the Bombay Prohibition Act, the words 'it shall be lawful' in S. 11 are not capable of having a negative import; they could not possibly have been intended by the Legislature to have any such import, for, the legislature had in terms enacted negative provisions in Ss. 12 to 17 which it would have been quite unnecessary to do if the words of S. 11 by themselves carried a negative import. It is not reasonable that the possession, sale, purchase, consumption or use of medicinal or toilet preparations should be prohibited merely because there is a mere possibility of their being misused by some perverted addicts. To that extent the provisions are in conflict with Art. 19 (1) (f) of the Constitution. See Government of India Act (1935), S. 297, Sch. It is impossible to suggest that the Legislature was not respecting the decision of the Supreme Court in AIR 1951 S C 318 that Ss. 12 and 13 were notionally obliterated from the statute to the extent that they referred to medicinal and toilet preparation. But in the very Act by incorporating S. 24-A in Ch. 3 by the Amending Act of 1952 the Legislature effectively amended Ss. 12 and 13, because whereas at the date when the Supreme Court made its declaration Ss. 12 and 13 applied to all medicinal and toilet preparations, by reason of the amendment Ss. 12 and 13 only applied to a certain limited category of medicinal and toilet preparations. 59 Bom L R 786 : ILR (1958) Bom 128 : 1958 Cri L J 607 : AIR 1958 Bom 181 (186) (Pt A) (Pr 7) (DB).

■——S. 13—Offences under Ss. 65 and 66—Prosecution under—Burden of proof—State has to prove that prohibitions contained in Ss. 12 and 13 were infringed by accused and that medicinal preparation seized from accused is not unfit for use as intoxicating liquor — Scope of S. 24-A. See Prohibition — Bombay Prohibition Act (1949), S. 65. (1962) 1 Cri L J 512 : AIR 1962 S C 579.

■——Ss. 13 (b) and 66 (b)—Accused charged under S. 66 (b) — Burden of proof — Statute once declared unconstitutional by Supreme Court was not again to be shown unconstitutional in every case — Balsara's case does not engraft proviso to S. 13 (b) and thus cast onus on the accused — (Constitution of India, Arts. 13 and 141) — (Evidence Act (1872), S. 105)—(Interpretation of Statutes — Statute declared void—Effect).

The effect of the declaration in Balsara's case, AIR 1951 SC 318, that Cl. (b) of S. 13 of the Bombay Prohibition Act is void under Art. 13(1) of the Constitution in so far as it affects the consumption or use of liquid medicinal or toilet preparations containing alcohol, is to render part of S. 13 (b) of the Bombay Prohibition Act inoperative, ineffective and ineffectual and thus unenforceable. The part of the section which has been declared void has no legal force so far as citizens are concerned and it cannot be recognized as valid law for determining the rights of citizens.

In other words, the ambit of the section stands narrowed down so far as its enforceability against citizens is concerned, and no notice can be taken of the part of the section struck down in a prosecution for contravention of the provisions of that section with the consequence that in prosecutions against citizens of India under S. 13 (b), the offence of contravention of the section can only be proved if it is established that they have used or consumed liquor or an intoxicant which is prohibited by that part of the section which has been declared valid and enforceable and without reference to its unenforceable part.

In a criminal case unless the prosecution proves a contravention of a provision that is legally enforceable and valid, it cannot succeed. No onus is cast on the accused to prove that his case falls under that part of the section which has been held unenforceable.

The bare circumstance that a citizen accused of an offence under S. 66(b) is smelling of alcohol is compatible both with his innocence as well as his guilt. It is a neutral circumstance. That being so it is the duty of the prosecution to prove that the alcohol of which he was smelling was such that it came within the category of prohibited alcohols and the onus is not discharged or shifted by merely proving a smell of alcohol.

The onus thus cast on the prosecution may be light or heavy according to the circumstances of each case. The intensity of the smell itself may be such that it may negative its being of a permissible variety. Expert evidence may prove that consumption in small doses of medicinal or other preparations permitted cannot produce the smell or a state of body or mind amounting to drunnkeness. Be that as it may, the question is one of fact, to be decided according to the circumstance of each case. It is open to the accused to prove in defence that what he consumed was not prohibited alcohol, but failure of the defence to prove it cannot lead to his conviction unless it is established to the satisfaction of the Judge by the prosecution that the case comes within the enforceable part of S. 13 (b), contravention of which alone, is made an offence under the provisions of S. 66 of the Bombay Prohibition Act. Criminal Appeal No. 1149 of 1952, dated 5th February, 1953 (Bom), Reversed. AIR 1952 Bom 327, Overruled.

The constitutional invalidity of a part of S. 13(b) of the Bombay Prohibition Act having been declared by the Supreme Court, that part of the section ceased to have any legal effect in judging cases of citizens and had to be regarded as null and void in determining whether a citizen was guilty of an offence. Article 141 of the Constitution declares that the law declared by the Supreme Court shall be binding on all Courts within the territory of India.

Once a statute is declared void under Art. 13(1) or 13(2) by the Supreme Court that declaration has the force of law, and the statute so declared void is no longer law qua persons whose fundamental rights are thus infringed.

In India once a law has been struck down as unconstitutional law by a Court, no notice can be taken of that law by any Court, and in every case an accused person need not start proving that the law is unconstitutional. The Court is not empowered to look at that part of the law which has been declared as void and therefore there is no onus resting on the accused person to prove that the law that has already been declared unconstitutional is unconstitutional in that particular case as well. The Court has to take notice only of what the law of the land is, and convict the accused only if he contravenes the law of the land.

Balsara's case cannot be given effect to by engrafting an exception or proviso to S. 13(b) of the Bombay Act in the light of that decision and thus casting the onus of proving the exception on the accused person. The Court has no power to engraft an exception or a proviso on S. 13(b) of the Bombay Prohibition Act. The State has no power to make a law abridging fundamental rights and therefore there is no power to engraft an exception by taking something out of a law which cannot be enacted. It is therefore difficult to treat what was declared void in Balsara's case as an exception to S. 13(b) of the Bombay Prohibition Act and apply the rule enunciated in S. 105 of the Evidence Act to the case of the accused. The only correct approach to the subject is to ignore the part of the section declared void in Balsara's case and see if the prosecution has succeeded in bringing the offence home to the accused on the part of the section that remains good law.

The Bombay Act being an existing law, the declaration made by this Court in Balsara's case must be taken to have been made under Art. 13 (1). The Article does not in terms make the existing laws which are inconsistent with fundamental rights void ab initio or for all purposes. The declaration in Balsara's case, is that the prohibition contained in S. 13(b) against the consumption or use of one particular variety of liquid consisting of or containing alcohol, namely, liquid medicinal or toilet preparations containing alcohol imposes an unredsonable restriction on the exercise of a citizen's fundamental right under Art. 19 (1) (f) and is, therefore, unconstitutional and as such void to that extent. The result of it is that the prohibition of that part of S. 13(b) will be ineffective against and inapplicable to a citizen who consumes or uses liquid medicinal or toilet preparations containing alcohol. No part of the section is obliterated or scratched out from the statute book or in any way altered or amended, for that is not the function of the Court.

In short, the judicial declaration serves to provide a defence to a citizen who has consumed or used liquid medicinal or toilet preparations containing alcohol. Test the matter in this way. Suppose after the declaration a person is charged with an offence under S. 66(b) read with S. 13(b) and in such a case the prosecution proves that the accused has taken alcohol in some form or other, what is to happen if nothing further is proved by either party? Surely in such a situation a conviction must follow. If the accused person desires to avail himself of the benefit of the declaration in Balsara's case, surely he must prove first of all that he is a citizen. The onus of this clearly lies on the accused. He has to allege and prove not only that he is a citizen but that he has consumed or used liquid medicinal or toilet preparations containing alcohol and it is only on such proof that he can claim the benefit of the declaration of law made in Balsara's case and establish his defence. The very basis of that declaration is that a citizen has the fundamental right to consume or use liquid medicinal or toilet preparations containing alcohol and S. 13 (b) in so far as it prohibits such consumption or use imposes an unreasonable restriction on his fundamental right under Art. 19 (1)(f).

To say that after the declaration the offence has become limited to the consumption or use of prohibited liquor is to alter or amend the definition of liquor although it has been held to be valid. It is not within the competence of a Court to alter or amend a statute and the effect of the declaration made by the Supreme Court in Balsara's case is not to lift or take away or add anything out of or to the section at all. What it does is to declare, as a matter of law, that in a certain situation, namely, when liquid medicinal or toilet preparation containing alcohol are consumed or used, a certain part of S. 13(b), that is to say, that part of it which prohibits the consumption or use of liquid medicinal or toilet preparations containing alcohol, shall be void qua a particular class of persons, namely, citizens.

In other words the declaration in Balsara's case serves to provide a defence only to a citizen who has consumed or used liquid medicinal or toilet preparations. It is for the accused person, who seeks to ward off the applicability of the section to him by having resort to the declaration made in Balsara's case to establish the situations or circumstances on which that declaration is founded. In short a person who challenges the validity of the section on the ground of its unconstitutionality has the advantage of the declaration as a matter of law but the facts on which that declaration is based have nevertheless to be established in each particular case where the declaration is sought to be availed of.

There is no hardship whatever in this, for the requisite facts are within his special knowledge. To adopt the contrary view will be to ignore the sound principle well established in law that a judicial declaration of invalidity does not repeal, alter or amend a statute.

Since the declaration does not operate as an amendment of the section, it must be held that the declaration cannot be treated as having grafted an exception or proviso to S. 13(b).

It is not unusual in certain classes of cases or in certain circumstances to throw the onus of proof of a defence on the accused person. Section 105 of the Evidence Act is an instance in point. Section 114, Illus. (a) of the same Act is another provision to which reference may be made. Section 103 of this very Bombay Prohibition Act raises a very strong presumption of guilt and throws the burden on the accused to prove his innocence in certain cases, Behram Khurshid v. State of Bombay. 1954 Mad WN 985 : 1955 S C A 1 : 1955 Andh L T (Cri) 1 : 1954 Andh L J (W) S C 90 : 1955 Cri L J 215 : 1955 S C J 73 : (1955) 1 Mad L J (SC) 32 : 57 Bom L R 575 : 1955 Andh W R (SC) 32 : 1955 S C R 613 : AIR 1955 S C 123 (143, 144, 146, 147, 151, 153) (Pt A) (Prs 48, 49, 53, 54, 65 to 67).

SECTION 24-A

● ——Ss. 24-A, 66 (2), 66 (1) (b), 6-A. 85 (2) (as amended by Bombay Act 12 of 1959)—Trial for offence under S. 66 (1) (b)—Burden of proof—Burden when shifts to the accused — Effect of Ss. 6-A and 85 (2) — In a trial for an offence under S. 66 (1) (b), when the prosecution proves that the accused person consumed liquor and that the concentration of alcohol in his blood was more than 0·05 per cent, weight in volume the onus of proving that the liquor consumed was a medicinal preparation containg alcohol, the consumption of which did not contravene the Act or the rules made thereunder, shifts to the accused under S. 66 (2). See Prohibition —Bombay Prohibition Act (25 of 1949), S. 66 (2). (1965) 2 S C W R 538 : (1965) 3 S C R 358 : A I R 1966 S C 145.

● ——Ss. 24-A, 65, 66, 12, 13—Offences under Ss. 65 and 66—Prosecution under — Burden of proof—State has to prove that prohibitions contained in Ss. 12 and 13 were infringed by accused and that medicinal preparation seized from accused is not unfit for use as intoxicating liquor—Scope of S. 24-A indicated. See Prohibition — Bombay Prohibition Act (25 of 1949), S. 65. 1962 (1) Cri L J 512 : AIR 1962 S C 579.

——S. 24-A—"Fit to be used as an intoxicant"—Meaning—Medicinal preparation containing alcohol Tests to determine its intoxicating capacity.

The expression "fit to be used as an introxicant' means that it must be a liquor which is capable of causing intoxication, or liquor which has the property of causing intoxication. It is not the low or high percentage of alcohol contained in the medicinal preparation, or the smaller or larger quantity which is required to be taken in order to produce intoxication, that provides the proper criterion for determining whether the preparation is fit for being used as an intoxicating liquor. The true test is the adaptability or suitability of the preparation for being used as a drink or used in the same manner in which a drink is used. It may contain a high or low percentage of alcohol; it may be taken in smaller or larger quantities but if it is capable of being adapted to be used as a drink or to be a substitute for the drink and capable of being used for purpose of beverage, then it will be a preparation which is fit for use as an intoxicating liquor. 59 BLR 786 (referring to (1943) 1 K B 17) Rel. on., 64 B L R 260, Expl.; 64 BLR 303, Dist. See Evidence Act (1872), S. 46. 1962 (2) Cri L J 466 : A I R 1962 Bom 229 (DB).

——S. 24-A (as amended by Act 26 of 1952) — Bombay Spirituous Medicinal Preparations (Sales) Rules, 1954, Rr. 2, 3—S. 59-A—Scope and effect and S. 139 (d).

When a Legislature imposes restrictions upon the fundamental rights of a citizen, the Court must not judge these restrictions by any absolute standard. Whether the restrictions are reasonable or not must largely depend upon what is the object the Legislature is seeking to achieve by legislation and what is the mischief it is aiming at. If the restrictions are necessary and essential in order to achieve the object and to remove the mischief, then ordinarily the Court must uphold those restrictions. Personal freedom and rights of the individual must be circumscribed by what the Legislature considers to be in the interests of the general public.

A legislation may be struck down if it violates or contravenes any provision of the Constitution. As regards the fundamental rights it is always open to a person, to challenge even a competent legislation on the ground that it violates his fundamental right.

But a distinction between a law which is bad on the ground that it is ultra vires of the Legislature and a law which is invalid as contravening fundamental rights is vital and fundamental. In the first case the law is a nullity, is bad from its inception, and nothing can be done to cure that law. In the second case, the position is different. Where the law is passed by a competent Legislature but which may contravene fundamental rights, the law may still be good in case of those fundamental rights which are only guaranteed to citizens as regards non-citizens. A petitioner who comes to Court complaining of violation of his fundamental rights must satisfy the Court that at the date of the petition, the law is such as contravenes his fundamental rights.

Thus where Courts are dealing with a pre-Constitution or a post-Constitution Act, if the Act has been passed by a competent Legislature and the constitutional infirmity only arises by reason of the fact that it is inconsistent with Part III of the Constitution, to the extent of that inconsistency the Act is moribund and cannot be given effect to but if the provisions of the Act at any time cease to be inconsistent with the fundamental rights, then it becomes revived or revitalised and can have full force and effect. (1956) 1 Mad L J (SC) 37, Rel. on. (1955) 1 M L J (SC) 732 held impliedly overruled by A I R 1955 S C 781 on this point.

The Amending Bombay Act (26 of 1952), assuming that it was inconsistent with Part III of the Constitution, was not a dead letter, and if subsequently the rules and notifications brought the law into line with the fundamental rights embodied in Part III, then what the Courts have to look at is not the Act as originally passed but the Act with the rules and notifications which were in operation at the date when the petition was filed. Therefore, what the petitioners who challenged the validity have got to establish in order to succeed is not that Act (26 of 1952) violated fundamental rights, but that the Act in conjunction with the rules and notifications violated their fundamental rights at the date when they presented the petition.

The Act even read by itself is not inconsistent with any of the provisions of Part III of the Constitution.

It cannot be seriously urged that the Act and the rules taken together constitute an unreasonable restriction upon the fundamental rights of the petitioners.

Issue of license by the Collector under R. 5 of the Rules, is not left to the subjective determination of the Collector whether he should or should not issue a licence and he must be objectively satisfied that there is some objection which should disentitle the applicant from a licence being granted to him. Inasmuch as a right of appeal is provided against the decision of the Collector the Collector should state his reasons for refusing a licence in writing so that the appellate authority should be in a position to consider his reasons. When a right of appeal is provided against the decision of the Collector, it cannot possibly be urged that his decision is uncontrolled or untrammelled or absolute. Looking to the circumstances of the case and the object to be achieved by this Act, the restrictions imposed by the rules are reasonable.

It is immaterial whether irrelevant circumstances were taken into consideration or even that the decision of the Government was not properly arrived at, because assuming the presumption under S 6-A, does not arise, it is for the Courts on the record to determine whether the particular preparation they are dealing with was or was not fit for use as intoxicating liquor. 59 Bom L R 786 : I L R (1958) Bom 128 : 1958 Cri L J 607 : A I R 1958 Bom 181 (186, 187, 189, 190, 191) (Pt B) (Prs 9, 11, 13, 14, 15, 16, 18) (DB).

——S. 24-A (as amended by Act 26 of 1952)—'Fit for use as intoxicating liquor'—Meaning of.

The proper construction to place upon the expression 'for use as intoxicating liquor' in S. 24-A is that it must be a liquor which is capable of causing intoxication or a liquor which has the property of causing intoxication. 59 Bom L R 786 : I L R (1958) Bom 128 : 1958 Cri L J 607 : A I R 1958 Bom 181 (190, 191) (Pt C) (Prs 17, 18) (DB).

● —S. 39 — Whether contravenes Constitution of India, Art. 14.

There is nothing wrong prima facie in the legislature according special treatment to persons of the armed forces who form a class by themselves in many respects and who have been treated as such in various enactments and statutory provisions. Hence, S. 39, in so far as it affects the military and naval messes and canteens, warships and troopships, cannot be held to be invalid on the ground that it contravenes Art. 14 of the Constitution. The classification sought to be made and the special privileges conferred by S. 39 of the Prohibition Act in favour of cargo boats, warships, troopships, military and naval messes and canteens cannot be supported by either logic or reason and the distinction is unjustified. See Constitution of India, Art. 301. AIR 1964 Guj 59 (DB).

——Ch. IV-B (S. 59-C)—Intoxicating liquors—Meaning of — Must include all preparations made from alochol whether denatured or not—French Polish and Varnish fall within the expression. See Constitution of India, Seventh Amendment, Sch. II, List, Entry 8. AIR 1964 Guj 59 (DB).

——Chap. IV-B, (S. 59C) — Application for wholesaler's licence—Rejection on ground that there were adequate licences—Rejection improper.

After Gujarat Denatured Spirituous Preparations Rules (1962) were brought into force, the petitioner made an applicalion required under the said rules for an import pass and a wholesalers' licence to the Prohibition Excise Sub-Inspector, Surat. The authority alleged that in Surat city and Surat District, there were adequate licences to sell and manufacture French Polish and therefore, it was not necessary to issue licences for sale of wholesale imported French Polish and that for that reason, the petitioner's aforesaid application was rejected.

Held, that the ground given, if at all it could be considered to be a ground, was totally extraneous and not germane to Chapter IV-B of the Bombay Prohibition Act or the aforesaid rules. There was nothing to indicate that the licensing authority had come to even a subjective satisfaction based even on such enquiry as he thought proper to make, that the petitioner was not a person against whom there could be no objection to grant the licence on the basis that he had any reasonable ground to believe or to come to a decision even on the subjective satisfactton, that the petitioner was likely to commit the abuse or the mischief aimed against by Chap. IV-B of the Act or was such as to defeat the purpose and object of the provisions of that chapter. To say that because an adequate number of licences was granted sufficient for reasonable use of the commodities and therefore there was no more any necessity of granting licences to anyone also must entail an unreasonable result, for, it would bar totally anyone entering the trade, prevent competitive business in these commodities and create an exclusive monopoly in favour of those to whom the licensing authority had been pleased to grant the first licences. That being so, the order passed by the licensing authority was not in accordance with the provisions of the Act and was, therefore, ultra vires. The order of rejection passed by the licensing authority must consequently be held to be bad in law. (1963) 4 Guj L R 1033 : ILR (1964) Guj 96 : AIR 1964 Guj 59 (80) (Pt J) (Pr 39) (DB).

——Ss. 65 (c) and (f) — Testimony of witnesses — Panch witnesses not supporting prosecution — Conviction on evidence of Head Constable not illegal—(Criminal trial—Appreciation of evidence).

On information received by the Task Force of the Prohibition Department, the accused was arrested at the spot while running a still. Articles were seized under a Panchanama attested by two Panchas. At the trial for offence under S. 65 (b), (c) and (f) of the Prohibition Act, the Panch witnesses admitted that the Panchanama was made at the spot, but stated that the accused was not caught at the spot. The liquid found was certified to be liquor. It was contended that since the Panch witnesses did not support the prosecution case, the accused could not be convicted on the sole testimony of the Head Constable who was a Police Officer and interested in securing conviction.

Held, that universal proposition of law for appreciation of evidence in a criminal trial that the evidence of a Police Officer can never be the basis of conviction, cannot be laid down. Conviction based on such evidence is not illegal. AIR 1951 Bom 468, Dist. 1962 Nag L J (Notes) 17 (Bom).

——S. 65 (ii) and (iii) — Enhanced punishment — Previous offence must be under the Act itself and not under any other Act.

The offences contemplated under sub-clauses (i), (ii) and (iii) of S. 65 are offences under the Bombay Prohibition Act, 1949, and not under any other Act or law. The previous convictions of the accused under any other Act cannot, therefore be taken into consideration for the purposes of enhanced penalty under Cls. (ii) and (iii) of S. 65. ——S. 65 (b)—Proof.

Merely sitting near a bhatti burning in a public place without there being any further evidence or circumstance to connect accused with the bhatti can hardly be said to be sufficient evidence to hold that the accused was manufacturing liquor by working that bhatti. 1960 Nag L J (Notes) 112 (Bom).

——Ss. 65 (a), 24A, 6A (6) — Fitness or otherwise of medicinal preparation as intoxicating liquor — Opinion of Board of Experts — Necessity for conviction-

A mere alcoholic content of a substance is not an absolute or unerring criterion of its fitness or unfitness for use as intoxicating liquor. When the Legislature put S. 24-A on the statutes book it became necessary to provide for a machinery for the determination of fitness or otherwise of a medicinal preparation for use as intoxicating liquor, and the Legislature itself provided for that machinery. That provision is made in S. 6-A of the Act.

When the Legislature expressly provides for a machinery for a certain purposes, it cannot be validly contended that the said purpose may be fulfilled in some other way. When a question arises whether a medicinal preparation is fit or unfit for use as intoxicating liquor, it is not left to the option of the State to determine that question in any manner which is considered appropriate by it. It must adopt the method provided by the Act in that behalf in S. 6-A and must refer the matter to the Board of Experts, consider the advice tendered by the Board and then in the light of that advice decide whether the article is fit or unfit for use as intoxicating liquor and this satisfaction under the Act is to be reached only upon a consideration of the advice tendered to the State by the Board of Experts. The prosecution launched without consulting the Board of Experts is, therefore, invalid. 60 Bom L R 1183: ILR (1958) Bom 1224 : 1959 Cr L J 579 : A I R 1959 Bom 199 (200, 201) (Pr 8) (DB).

——S. 65 (b) — General principles as to punishments —Though the Magistrates have a discretion to inflict less than the minimum sentences, under S. 65, Bom. Prohibition Act that discretion has to be exercised in the manner prescribed by that section and for special and adequate reasons only. To inflict less than the minimum sentence on grounds which are transparently untenable may amount to evasion of law. The question as to what are adequate and special reasons, has to be determined with reference to the facts of each case and it is the duty of the Magistrates to consider very carefully the question of sentence in each case and satisfy themselves that there are genuinely adequate and special reasons calling for a lenient treatment of the offender. The fact that the accused is a first offender is no reason for inflicting less than the minimum punishment. Poverty alone is also no ground for imposing less punishment. 4. "Mere drinking liquor"—"Consume".
5. Evidence.
6. Report of Chemical Examiner.
7. Burden of proof.
8. Jurisdiction of Magistrate.
9. Punishment.
10. Interference.

1. Applicability.

——Ss. 66 :(1) (b) and (2), 129-A and 129-B— Scheme of — Trial of offence under S. 66 (1) (b)— Report of Chemical Examiner in cases not covered by S. 129 A—Admiasibility in evidence under S. 510 Criminal P. C.—Ss. 129 A and 120-B how for repugnant to provisions of S. 510, Criminal P. C.— Constitution of India, Article 254 (2), Sch. VII, List III, Entries 2 and 12—Criminal P. C. (1898), S. 510

Per Majority (K. C. Das Gupta J., dissenting):—On an analysis of Ss. 129-A and 129-B, it is clear that the Legislature has provided in the first instance for compelling persons suspected of consuming intoxicants to be produced and to submit themselves for examination and extraction of blood. The Legislature has made the certificate of the examination under S. 129-A, sub-ss. (1) and (2) admissible without formal proof; but by sub-s. (8) of S. 129-A, the adoption of any other method of collection of evidence for proving that a person accused has consumed an intoxicant is not precluded and a report of any registered medical practitioner which tends to establish that fact in respect of matters specified in Cl. (b) of S. 129-B is also made admissible. On that view of Ss. 129-A and 129-B, there is no warrant for assuming that it was intended thereby to exclude in trials for offences under S. 66 (1) (b) of the Act the operation of S. 510 of the Code of Criminal Procedure. It is open to the prosecution to rely in corroboration of a charge of consumption of illicit liquor upon a certificate under Cl. (a) of S. 129-B if it is obtained in the manner prescribed by S. 129-A, and also to rely upon the report of a registered medical practitioner in respect of any person examined by him or upon any matter or thing duly submitted to him for examination or analysis and report. It is also open to the prosecution to rely upon report of the Chemical Examiner in cases not covered by S. 129-A as provided under S. 510, of the Code of Criminal Procedure.

The Code of Criminal Procedure was a law in force immediately before the commencement of the Constitution and by virtue of Art. 254 (2) legislation by a State Legislature with respect to any of the matters enumerated in the Third List repugnant to an earlier law made by Parliament or an existing law with respect to that matter if it has been reserved for the consideration of the President and has received his assent prevails in the State. Bombay Act 12 of 1959 was reserved for the consideration of the President and has received his assent; Ss. 129-A and 129-B will prevail in the State of Bombay to the extent of inconsistency with the Code, but no more.

Report of the Chemical Examiner in respect of blood collected in the course of investigation of an offence under the Bombay Prohibition Act, otherwise than in the manner set out in S. 129-A cannot be used as evidence in the case. To that extent S. 510 of the Code is superseded by S. 129-B. But the report of the Chemical Examiner relating to the examination of blood of an accused person collected at a time when no investigation was pending or at the instance not of a Police Officer or a Prohibition Officer remains admissible under S. 510 of the Code.

Per Das Gupta J.—On a consideration of S. 66 (2) together with S. 129-A, it is clear that where the procedure laid down in S. 129-A was not followed for testing of the blood, the prosecution cannot get the benefit of S. 66(2) of the Prohibition Act. ——S. 66 (1) (b) — Raid and seizure under Bombay Prohibition Act in State of Bombay before bifurcation —Report of Chemical Examiner of Bombay State—Subsequent bifurcation of Bombay State—Offence registered in State of Gujarat—Accused charged in State of Gujarat—Report of Chemical Examiner is admissible even though at the time he was attached to State of Maharashtra – Case in S. 92 (3) of Bombay Reorganisation Act includes proceedings started by raid — Prosecution held commenced when raid took place. See Criminal P. C. (1898), S. 510 (1). 1963 (1) Cri L J 533 (Guj).

——Ss. 66 (1) (b) & 85 (1) (i) and (iii)—Offences under —Distinction—Person found drunk in a public place—Conviction under S. 66 (1) (b) by drawing a presumption under S. 114 Evidence Act—Permissibility.

There is a distinction between offences under Ss. 85 (1) (i) or (iii) and S. 66 (1) (b) of the Bombay Prohibition Act for there is a distinction between the act of consuming and the fact of the man having been found drunk and while under S. 66 (1) (b), the act of consuming has been made an offence under S. 85 (1) the fact of a man having been found drunk and incapable of taking care of himself in any street, thoroughfare or public place, has been made a distinct offence. Consequently where a man has been found to be drunk in a public place in such a condition that he is unable to take care of himself, he cannot be convicted under S. 66 (1) (b) by drawing a presumption under S. 114 of the Evidence Act namely that he must have consumed liquor at the very place where he was found by the police, regard being had to the common course of natural events. This is not permissible because not only the Prohibition Act does not provide for any such presumption but it does not throw the burden upon the accused to prove that he drunk liquor at a place other than the place where he was found intoxicated. Besides, there is nothing like the common course of natural events as contemplated by section 114 of the Evidence Act for a person found intoxicated at one particular place to have of necessty consumed liquor at the very same place. ——S. 66 (b) — Person drinking eau-de-cologne commits offence. 1953 Cri L J 1521 : AIR 1953 Sau 161 (162) (Pt B) (Pr 6) (DB).

——Ss. 66 (b), 84—Alteration of conviction — Criminal P. C. (1898), S. 423.

The offence under S. 66 (b) is more grave than under S. 84 and before altering the conviction from one under S. 84 to one under S. 66 (b) opportunity ought to be given to the accused to meet the charge for it may be that he may have a valid delence to that charge. ('51) 4 Sau L R 67 (68) (DB).

2. Prohibited liquor.

——S. 66 (b)—Onus—Prosecution need not prove that liquor taken was probibited liquor—It is for accused to show that it was medicated liquor.

All that the prosecution has to prove for bringing home a charge under S. 66 (b) to an accused person is that he has drunk liquor in contravention of a permit, pass, license or authorisation. Once that burden is discharged by the prosecution, i. e., once it is proved by the prosecution that a person has drunk or consumed liquor without a permit, it is for that person to show that the liquor drunk by him was not prohibited liquor, but was alcohol or liquor which he is permitted by law to take, e. g, medicated alcohol. The prosecution is not to discharge the burden of the accused, and if in answer to a charge of drinking liquor without a permit the accused suggests that the liquor was drunk by him was not liquor in a prohibited form or was alcohol in a medicated form, he must show it. The prosecution cannot possibly prove that no form of medicated alcohol was taken by the accused. 54 Bom L R 325 : (1951) 21 Bom Cr C 329: ILR (1952) Bom 979 : AIR 1952 Bom 327 (328, 329) (Pt B) (Prs 6, 8) (DB).

[Overruled in AIR 1955 S C 123].

——Ss. 66 (b) and 2 (24) (as applied to Saurashtra) —Liquid seized according to report of chemical analyser shown to be wine coming within first part of 'liquor' as defined in S. 2 (24) — Held, that the fact that liquid was prohibited liquor was conclusively established. See Prohibition — Bombay Prohibition Act (25 of 1949), S. 2 (24). AIR 1956 Sau 25.

——S. 66 (b)—Country liquor — Proof of.

Unless it is proved that the pot found in possession of the accused contained country liquor the conviction cannot be sustained. Where the question of the liquid in dispute being liquor or otherwise is vital to the prosecution, it is the duty of the Medical Officer to examine the liquid by applying the necessary tests and to give a definite opinion one way or the other, instead of giving inconclusive and indefinite opinion. Evidence that the liquor was red coloured and that it emitted a smell like that of liquor is inconclusive and it cannot be taken to mean that the liquid was definitely country liquor. ('51) 4 Sau L R 199 (200) (DB).

3. Possession of article.

● ——Ss. 66 (b) and 81—Possession of article — Evidence Act (1872), S. 3.

Where all that was suggested by the defence was that the articles found in the godowns were planted there by the Police but it was not said that the godown was accessible to all and the police might have kept the spirit there and the suggestion could not bear examination in view of the evidence, the Magistrate was justified in those circumstances in drawing the inference that these articles were in possession of the accused who was in possession of the godown and the Supreme Court would not disturb the decision. Vijendrajit Avodhya Prasad Goel v. State of Bombay. 1953 S C J 328 : 1953 Mad W N 552 : 1953 Cri L J 1097 : 1953 All W R (Sup) 70 : 1953 S C A 395 : AIR 1953 S C 247 (248) (P C) (Pr 4).

● ——Ss. 66 (b) 2 (22)—Possession of prohibited article —Where the rectified spirit found in possession of the accused was 94 A/V of ethyl alcohol it fell within the definition of intoxicant as given in

S. 2 (22), possession of which, without permit, is prohibited by S. 66 (b). See Prohibition—Bombay Prohibition Act (25 of 1949), S. 2 (22). 1952 Cri L J 1097 : AIR 1953 S C 247.

——Ss. 66 (b) and 103 — Presumption under—Extent of—No presumption about possession.

The presumption contained in S. 103 of the Act comes into operation only after a person is found to be in possession of an intoxicant of which he is unable to account satisfactorily. Such presumption cannot be used to infer the fact of possession. See Prohibition—Bombay Prohibition Act (25 of 1949), S. 103. (1960) 62 Bom L R 717.

——S. 66 (b) -Brandy and whisky found in room which was locked.— Accused's possession of key of room is prima facie evidence of his possession of room. 1956 Cri L J 495 : AIR 1956 Bom 225(226) (Pr 2).

——S. 66 (b)—Sentence—Conviction for second time.

Possession of 24 drams of liquor does not show that the accused was keeping in his possession some liquor for his own purpose to drink. It shows trafficking in liquor. It is not, therefore, a case in which there are any good reasons why the minimum sentence should not be imposed, (Sentence enhanced). 1956 Cri L J 488 (1) : AIR 1956 Bom 202 (203) (Prs 5, 6).

——Ss. 66 (1) (b)—Accused convicted for possessing liquor bottles—One of the bottles found with accused sent to Chemical Analyser for analysing of its contents — Report of Chemical Analyser received—No evidence taken to show that the report related to the bottle sent—Conviction held illegal. (1963) 4 Guj LR 1031 : ILR (1963) Guj 1020.

——S. 66 (b)—Possession must be conscious.

The mere fact that some liquid which came in possession of the accused in the natural course of events, underwent fermentation, he cannot be fixed with the knowledge that he had an intoxicant in his possession. (1956) 9 Sau L R 320.

——S. 66 (b) —Possession of senior member of family —He can be convicted only when prosecution proves by evidence that articles were in his possession — (Evidence Act (1872), S. 114). AIR 1955 NUC (Sau) 961 (DB).

——S. 66 (b) — Possession — Necessity of proof — Section 103 does not dispense with the proof of possession the burden of which lies on the prosecution—"Possession" in S. 103 is used in the same sense as "possession" in the offence under S. 66 (b) i. e. being conscious and intelligent. So when the accused is charged with the offence of possession of the article itself if the prosecution has proved the possession, the offence itself is proved and no question of any presumption under S. 103 can arise. AIR 1955 NUC (Sau) 961 (DB).

——S. 66 (b) — Possession, test of indicated — (Evidence Act (1872), Ss. 101 to 103).

In a case under S. 66 (b) it is necessary for the prosecution to show that not only the articles were found in the house of which two accused were in joint occupation but that they were aware of the existence of these articles and had the necessary animus or will to possess them. The prosecution has further to prove that the bottles were brought by both the respondents or that they were brought by one of them with the active consent and concurrence of the other. The question is one of fact depending upon circumstances of each case. AIR 1955 NUC (Sau) 961 (DB).

——S. 66 (b) — Possession — Meaning—Hired coolie carrying tin containing contraband article to station —Offence.

Possession made punishable under S. 66 (b) must be conscious and intelligent possession. It implies knowledge and there can be no possession when there is no knowledge on the part of the accused that he was carrying a contraband article. 5 Sau LR 78 : 1952 Cri L J 1757 : AIR 1953 Sau 6 (7) (Pr 2) (DB).

4. "Mere drinking liquor"—"Consume".

——S. 66 (b)—Mere drinking of liquor is offence.

The consumption of liquor is made punishable under S. 66 (b) and the widest and best known form of consuming liquor is to drink liquor. The "mere drinking of liquor" is also an offence under the Act. There is nothing in the language of S. 66 (b) or in the language of any other section in the Act to suggest that the term "consume" is used in the Act in the sense of use for commercial purposes or use on a large scale, and under S. 66 (b) an individual who consumes liquor on any scale whatsoever, small or large, without a permit, license, pass, etc., is liable to be punished. (1951) 21 Bom Cri C 329 : ILR (1952) Bom 979 : 54 Bom L R 325 : AIR 1952 Bom 327 (328) (Pt A) (Pr 4) (DB).

——S. 66 (1) (b) —'Consume'—Meaning.

In the absence of definition of the word 'consume' in the Bombay Prohibition Act, the word must be attributed its literal meaning which is to drink or to otherwise use prohibited liquor. (1923) 2 K B 309, Rel. on. 1963 (2) Cri L J 273 : (1962) 3 Guj L R 409 : AIR 1963 Guj 234 (235, 236) (Pt G) (Pr 7) (DB).

5. Evidence.

● ——S. 66 (1) (b) and (2) (as amended by Bombay Act 12 of 1959)—Offence under S. 66 (1) (b)—Proof by prosecution about requisite alcohol concentration in blood of accused—Onus of proving that consumption of liquor was not in contravention of Act lies on accused — Discharge of onus — Statement of accused under S. 342, Criminal P. C. if sufficient.

In a prosecution under S. 66 (1) (b), Bombay Prohibition Act, it was proved that the accused's breath was smelling of liquor at the time of his arrest and that on examination of his blood it was found to contain 0.148 per cent. ethyl alcohol. The accused in his examination under S. 342, Criminal P. C., gave an explanation that he had not consumed prohibited alcohol but had taken 6 ounces of tincture of neem as he was used to it. The doctor who examined the accused also deposed that the consumption of 6 ounces of that substance would produce that amount of concentration of blood. The Courts below accepted the explanation of the accused and acquitted him holding that no offence was committed by him.

Held, that the explanation given by the accused in his statement under S. 342, Criminal P. C. of the cause of his smelling liquor and of the blood concentration was sufficient to discharge the onus placed on him under S. 66 (2) of the Act. The object of examination under S. 342, Criminal P. C., is to give the accused an opportunity to explain the case made against him. 1960 S C J 160 : 1960 Mad L J (Cr) 91 ; AIR 1960 S C 7, Disting. ——Ss. 66 (2), 129 B—Court cannot refuse to consider evidence furnished by certificate of Chemical Analyser merely because it does not contain data or reasons for conclusion.

The Court cannot refuse to consider the evidence furnished by a certificate issued by a Chemical Analyser merely because it does not mention the data, on basis of which Chemical Analyser arrived at the percentage of alcohol mentioned in the certificate, or because he has not given the reasons for his conclusion. Without examining the Chemical Analyser the Court will not be justified in holding that the charge against the accused has not been proved merely because the certificate issued by the Chemical Analyser only mentions the percentage of the alcohol found in the blood of the accused and does not give any other particulars. ——S. 66 (1) (b) — Hydrometer test cannot conclusively establish illicitly distilled liquor — Conviction on evidence of smelling alone not justified. See Prohibition—Bombay Prohibition Act (1949), S. 2 (24). 1962 Nag L J (Notes) 26.

——Ss. 66 (1) (b) — Bombay Prohibition (Medical Examination and Blood Test) Rules, R. 4 (2)—Blood test—Proof—Legal evidence.

There must be legal evidence to connect the report of the Chemical Analyser tendered in his case with the blood taken out of the body of the accused on that day. From the report of the Chemical Analyser it appeared that the phial containing the blood was sent by Police constable No. 494. The doctor who took the blood out of the body of the accused did not say that he had handed over the phial to the Police constable. Police constable No. 494 was not examined. Held, that there was no clear proof that the report received in Court was the report on analysis of the blood taken out by the doctor on the particular day from the body of the accused. 1961 Nag L J (Notes) 47 (Bom).

——S. 66 (1) (b)—Blood test—Proof.

It is necessary for the prosecution to establish that the report which is received in Court is the report on analysing the blood taken out from the body of the accused on the day of the alleged offence. The evidence of the Doctor was that he took out blood from the body of the accused, collected it in a bottle, sealed the bottle and handed it over to the Police. There was no evidence that the Police after getting the bottle sent it to the chemical analyser.

Held, that it was not possible to sustain conviction of the accused under S. 66 (1) (b) of the Bombay Prohibition Act on the above evidence. 1961 Nag L J (Notes) 44 (Bom).

6. Report of Chemical Examiner.

——S. 66 (1) (b) — Accused has right to summon chemical analyser if prosecution relies on his report —Opportunity to summon him should not be denied. See Prohibition — Bombay Prohibition Act (1949), S. 129B. (1965) Mah L J (Notes) 11 (Bom).

——S. 66(1)—Criminal P.C., S. 510—Evidentiary value —Failure of accused to examine chemical examiner—Effect—Evidentiary value of report of Chemical Examiner is not lost because he is not cross-examined — Position before and after amendment by Act 26 of 1955 — Case under Bombay Prohibition Act — Report of Chemical Examiner as to alcoholic content of blood giving only opinion that it was not less than 0.05 per cent. without factual data and reasons for opinion —Though opinion is admissible in evidence, it has no evidentiary value — Failure of the accused to examine Chemical Examiner under sub-s. (2) of S. 510 of Cr. P. C.. does not make any difference — Evidence Act (1872), S. 45. See Criminal P. C. (1898), S. 510. 1961 (2) Cr L J 78 : AIR 1961 G ; 120.

7. Burden of proof.

——Ss. 66 (2), 66 (1) (b), 24-A, 6-A, 85 (2) (as amended by Bombay Act 12 of 1959) — Trial for offence under S. 66 (1) (b)—Burden of proof—Burden when shifts to the accused — Effect of Ss. 6-A and 85 (2)—Quaere.

In a trial for an offence under S. 66 (1) (b), when the prosecution proves that the accused person consumed liquor and that the concentration of alcohol in his blood was more than 0.05 per cent weight in volume the onus of proving that the liquor consumed was a medicinal preparation containing alcohol, the consumption of which did not contravene the Act or the rules made thereunder, shifts to the accused under S. 66 (2). He can discharge this onus by proving, inter alia, that the medicinal preparation containing alcohol which he had taken was unfit for use as an intoxicating liquor; if so much is established, the accused would not be committing any offence under the Act, since under S. 24-A, the Act itself does not apply to such medicinal preparations. A I R 1962 S C 579, Disting.; I L R (1964) Bom. 357, Affirmed.

Quaere : Whether even if the burden of proof in the circumstances under S. 66 (2) shifted to the accused, that burden is discharged by reason of S. 6 A of the Act?

Quaere : Whether S. 85 of the Act lays down two conditions, namely, that the accused should have been drunk and incapable of taking care of himself and also that he should have taken the drink not for a medicinal purpose, but for the purpose of being intoxicated : Vijay Singh v. State of Maharashtra, (1965) 2 S C W R 538 : 1966 Cri L J 168 : (1965) 3 S C R 358 : A I R 1966 S C 145 (146, 147, 148) (Prs. 7, 10).

——Ss 66, 11, 65—Offence of importing and possessing Ayurvedic medicinal preparation 'Mrugmadasava' containing more than prescribed quantity of alcohol —Fact that the preparation was imported under a permit issued by Government of Bhopal on payment of excise duty cannot protect accused from liability to prosecution for infringement of provisions of Act within Bombay State — Accused pleading that importation of article was lawful in view of licence issued under S. 11 — Burden lies on accused to prove his allegation by production of license — If license is not produced such defence is not available.
